SAYS MAN IS KIMMEL

Railway Conductor, Formerly of Niles, Mich., Is Positive.

At Chicago Sunday another former resident of Niles, Mich., recognized as the missing George A. Kimmel of that place the claimant now at the Robert Burns hospital. He was C. H. Johnson, a conductor for the Michigan Central, who worked out of Niles twenty years ago. Johnson is positive in his identification.

"It's Kimmel, all right," he said.

After leaving the room of the patient, who recently was operated on in an attempt to restore his memory, which was impaired by pressure on the brain, Johnson said there could be no doubt that Andrew J White, as the "man of mystery" was known when he left Auburn prison eight months ago, is the missing Kimmel. Johnson was skeptical when he arrived at the hospital. He went away convinced he had talked to Kimmel.

DIRECT VOTE WINS

House Favors Popular Election of United States Senators.

Election of senators by direct vote of the people seems assured.

The first formal step to this end was taken when the house of representatives overwhelmingly accepted the senate bill and thus provided for the presentation of the constitutional amendment to the several states.

More than the requisite three-fourths of the states either have adopted senatorial primaries or forced through their legislatures resolutions approving the reform.

It may be expected, therefore, that at the elections of 1914, or certainly those of 1916, one-third of the senate will be elected directly by the people.

Every two years thereafter a third of the senate will be elected, so that in eight years the upper house of congress will be composed of men who owe their seats to the voters and not to the legislatures.

PRINTERS REMAIN AT WORK

Chicago Typographical Union Votes to Abide by Contracts.

At Chicago Sunday, at one of the most largely attended meetings of a union ever held, Typographical Union No. 16 voted to abide by its contracts with the big daily papers, against which the pressmen, stereotypers, drivers and newsboys are on strike.

The majority for the resolution was 444, 1,769 votes being cast, of which 1,099 favored fulfilling contracts and 655 were against doing so. The meeting was held in the First Regiment armory.

International President James M. Lynch announced that he was well pleased with the result, as it showed that printers believed in keeping their contracts.

BOY KILLED IN RIOT

Foreigners Clash with State Troopers at Scranton, Pa.

At Scranton, Penn., a riotous demonstration made by foreigners at Olyphant colliery No. 1, Delaware and Hudson company, resulted in the killing of George Robaresky, a fourteen-year-old boy, by the state troopers.

The troopers were riding down a crowd of rioters, who were desperate in their manner, displaying firearms and hurling stones and clubs at the state police.

FOR A SIX-YEAR TERM

Minority Report Will Recommend One Term of Four Years.

At Washington Monday the senate judiciary committee decided to report favorably the Works resolution restricting the presidential tenure of office to a single term of six years.

A minority report, favoring a single term of four years, also will be made from the committee. The reports are expected in a day or two.

PARTY OF SEVEN IN LAUNCH ARE DROWNED

Launch Capsized on Fox Lake, Illinois, During Storm.

People on Shore Hear Screams and When They Reach the Scene There Is No Trace of the Launch or People.

A boat party of seven persons, including one woman, were drowned by the capsizing of a launch at Fox Lake, Ill. They had attempted to cross at its widest point during a heavy storm. the work of dragging for the bodies has begun.

The party left the Lippincott Hotel at 8:30 p. m. and boarded the launch to be taken across the lake to the Bay Viey hotel. The lake had been rough all day and the storm was increasing at the time they embarked.

After the hotel launch overturned all available launches from hotels and resorts on both sides of the lake put out for the rescue but the launch and its occupants had disappeared from view by the time the first of the boats reached the point where the calls were last heard. The victims are:

Miss Mable Hanson, of Chicago; Jacob Hofert, Desplaines, Ill; Louis Truscke, proprietor of a saloon in Chicago; J. Hume, of Ingleside, Ill., owner of the launch; George Russell, owner of the buss line at Ingleside, which conveys resorters from that station to the Fox Lake hotels; Michael Klunder of Chicago, professional singer; Unidentified man, supposed to be from Chicago, who was a member of the party.

The launch in which the party went to death was a fifteen-footer, with a gasoline engine. It was fitted with air-tight compartments and was supposed to be practically unsinkable. The capacity, however, was limited to five persons, according to resorters, and it was therefore loaded beyond safety when it put out from the pier to cross the lake.

Thirteen other Chicagoans narrowly escaped a similar fate while in a sailboat which sprung a leak on the lake. Miss Mary Holabird 424 South Irving avenue, is ill at her home as a result of this experience. All were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Cass at their summer home.

They were rescuel by a party in a passing launch

FLOOD OUTLOOK IS BAD

Heavy Rains and High Winds Cause Desolation.

Cardire, La., Expected to Be Swept Away at Almost Any Hour—People Warned of Peril.

Frequent, heavy rains falling along the Mississippi river country, and winds of high velocity caused a series of reports of broken levees. Most of these proved erroneous, but at several endangered points it was admitted that the fight was practically hopeless.

At Baton Rouge the high winds washed a considerable amount of water over the top of the dike there. but men battled heroically with the elements and word was sent to New Orleans that the dam around the capital still holds. Engineer Waddill of the United States army reported that Cardere, ten miles south of Baton Rouge, probably could not last through the night. People of that section were warned to flee and to lose no time in going.

Another very gloomy feature of the day's developments was the break at Vidalia. That place is just opposite Natchez, Miss, and considered comparatively safe. It has a population

RAILROADS ASKED TO MAKE REPORTS

Commissioner Glasgow Requests Certain Information

All Railroads in Michigan Called Upon to Make a Full Statement Regarding Their Present Equipment.

Lansing, Mich., May 13.—Owing to the large number of complaints received regarding the poor freight service in Michigan, the state railroad commission has ordered all the railroads in Michigan to make a full report regarding their equipment. Commissioner Glasgow states that the poor service is costing citizens of Michigan millions of dollars each year.

The commission is now carrying on an investigation in many places in the state. Mr. Glasgow says the order was issued to find out whether the poor service is due to the equipment, or the lack of employes, caused by low wages.

STRIKERS STANDING PAT

Turn Down Concessions Made by Kalamazoo Company.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 13.—There is little hope that the corset strike will be ended unless Dr. W. M. Puffer succeeds in securing more concessions from the Kalamazoo Corset company for the strikers.

At a meeting the strike committee turned down the concessions that have so far been made. The strikers declare that everything they ask for must be granted. The company desired to have it put to a vote of the 800 people who are now working as to whether some of the strikers should return. This the union refused to consent to. Dr. Puffer is attempting to bring about another conference.

DEFAULTER GOES TO PRISON

Grand Rapids Man Spent Bank's Money in Bucket Shops.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 14. — J. Edward Johnson, twenty-four, formerly a resident of Sparta, but for the past three years employed by the Michigan Trust company, was sentenced Friday to serve not less than three years and not more than ten years in the Ionia reformatory.

Johnson recently pleaded guilty to having embezzled $65,00 of the company's funds. Influential Grand Rapids citizens pleaded with Judge Stuart for clemency, but the court recommended that his term be six years. Johnson, who is married and has a small child, is alleged to have lost the money in local bucket shops.

SALE OF PUBLIC LAND

Same Valuable Pieces in Wayne County to Be Offered.

Lansing, Mich., May 14.—The first sale of state lands in Wayne county will be held on June 25, at which time several thousand city and village lots will be sold at a tax homestead land sale. Deputy Land Commissioner Munshaw says several hundred of these lots are valuable pieces of property.

The sale is one of the largest that will be held in the state this year, and will be under the direction of Land Commissioner Huntley Russell.

Two bodies have been recovered at this writing.

MRS. W. K. VANDERBILT JR.

Who Is Reported Recovering After an Operation for Appendicitis.

NEW YORK—The reports that the condition of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who had been operated on for appendicitis, was alarming, were denied by Dr. James I. Russell, who with other surgeons performed the operation.

He said Mrs. Vanderbilt steadily improved after the operation, until Saturday, when she had a relapse. Her condition later improved and according to Dr. Russell, she is now making favorable progress toward recovery.

FALLS OFF BRIDGE

Ann Arbor Man Carried Down and Tightly Wedged Under Log.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 14.—Charles Hermann, forty years old and unmarried, met his death by drowning in the Huron river.

Hermann and some friends were going fishing. Hermann started to cross the river on the narrow plank walk that runs beside the dam. In looking down at the churning waters he evidently became dizzy and fell into the deep water above the dam. The swift current carried him over the dam and he was hurled with great force upon the rocks in the water below. This undoubtedly stunned him because he did not apparently make any effort to save himself. His body was carried down a few rods and finally lodged under a fallen tree.

Two young boys, named Fields and Botke, waded into the river which below the dam is low, and tried to rescue the body. Had they been able to do so, it is likely the man's life could have been saved, but so tightly was the body wedged under the log, the boys were unable to dislodge it. They secured assistance of some men who by tying ropes to the man's legs pulled the body to land. This took something like an hour and the man was dead when taken out of the water.

BAY CITY BREWERS STRIKE

Bay City, Mich., May 14.—All employes of Bay City's three breweries struck pending a settlement of a wage difference between the companies and the brewers. Employes of all departments recently demanded an increase of $2 per week.

The bottlers and wagon drivers compromised on a basis that would give a maximum of $16 per week, an increase of from 50 cents to $1.50, but the brewery workers refuse this compromise, demanding a higher wage and a reduction of working hours from 9 to 8. Deliveries of beer were made by bookkeepers and other members of the office forces.

SENTIMENT IS REVERSED

Taft Carries Convention That Was All for Roosevelt a Month Ago.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 13.—The results of the second Kent county Republican convention held here show a complete reversal of political sentiment within the past four weeks. Shortly before the Republican state convention the Republicans held a county convention in which the Roosevelt forces were easily victorious.

They were so jubilant that they absolutely forgot to elect delegates to the district convention. This necessitated a second convention. The caucuses were held and the results, with returns all in, give the Taft men an overwhelming majority.

FARISH CHOKES SISTER

Bay City, Mich., May 14.—Fred Farish, very much intoxicated, and in a fine fighting mood, engaged in a family quarrel with his sister, Julia, at their home and ended up with biting her on the arms and face and choking her until she was unconscious. A house full of boarders looked on and did nothing.

The police and a doctor were called and Fred was locked up pending what the doctor had to say. He decided Julia will recover so Fred will only face an assault and battery charge.

WOULD OUST WOMAN MAYOR

Suit Brought by Aldermen of Hunnewell, Kan., in High Court.

At Topeka, Kan., Monday the Hunnewell ouster suit was argued in the supreme court. It is expected the court will decide the case early in June.

The troubles of the woman mayor of Hunnewell and her councilmen are well known. The council would not work. She tried to get the men to indorse her appointments.

Finally she appealed to the attorney general. The latter tried to get the councilmen to work with the mayor, but they refused. The ouster suit was the result.

MICHIGAN

James Therio, Iron River, finds Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a family medicine that helped all the family, so he always keeps it on hand. "Both my children and I were troubled with bad coughs and we used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It certainly cured us and I recommend it as a good cough and cold cure."

D. W. Hiller, 801 E. Court St., Flint had a severe attack of kidney trouble and says: "There was a constant feeling of distress with painful kidney action. Foley Kidney Pills cured me completely, dispelling all kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness disappeared and I slept soundly again. I heartily endorse Foley Kidney Pills. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Speak not of your enemies, but be sure to speak to your enemies when you meet them.

Escapes an Awful Fate

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery, But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy or I scarcely cough at all now,', Quick and safe, it's the most reliable of all throat and lung trouble Every bottle guaranteed, 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son.

Flattery is one kind of falsehood some people are always ready to accept as truth.

Mrs. Ida Decker, 74 Carlyle St., Battle Creek, had all the painful symptoms of severe kidney trouble. Her kidneys were congested, eyesight blurred, slept poorly, was nervous, tired out, and all run down. After taking Foley's Kidney Pills she say: "The sick headaches came no more, I slept soundly, was free from dizziness, and my kidneys and bladder stopped bothering me. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and freed me of much misery." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

There are people who are so busy having a good time that trouble can't touch them.

The Demons of the Swamp

are mosquitos. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm, Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Alex Destinon. 90 Lake St., Muskegon, desires other people to benefit by the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I wish to state that I have used Foley Kidney Pills and received more benefit from them than anything I have ever used before. I had a bad case of kidney trouble and I wish to thank you for the help Foley Kidney Pills have given me." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Obituary

WALTER B. HOAG

For over fourty six years Walter B. Hoag has been a familar figure upon our streets and was well known to nearly everyone in town. Up to the last four years he and his wife kept house together until failing health made it impossible and they went to live with their daughter Mrs. J. W. Owen. Mrs. Hoag passed away in July 1910, since which time Mr. Hoag has been in failing health. About a month ago he gave up and was confirmed to his bed, passing away Sunday evening. He leaves a daughter and son, Mrs. J. W. Owen and Lebanlus Hoag, nine grand children, twelve great grandchildren and one sister Mrs. Helen Wales of Oneida, N, Y

He was a life long member of the Methodist Church and when in health was an active worker. For seven years he was janitor of our High School, As a carpenter has built many of our homes. His departure adds another to the roll of the older and representative men of the early times of our village who have done so much to make Tecumseh the beautiful village of which we are so proud and who have passed away within the last few months,

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon, Rev, G. N. Kennedy officiating. He was laid to rest in Brookside beside the wife who preceeded him so short a time ago.

CARD OF THANKS

To the many friends who so kindly assisted us during the sickness and death of our loved one to the Pythian Sisters, Rebekahs and friends for their beautiful flowers, we wish to extend our sincere thanks,

THE OLYMPIC GAMES STOCKHOLM SWEDEN

One of the greatest events of the times, will be that of the Olympic games to be held in Stockholm Sweden next month.

The immense stadium that is being built is nearly completed, and the contractors will have it in readiness when the athletes arrive in June. The stands will seat more than 100,000 people, and it is expected that each day will see them filled, for it is believed that the attendance at these games will be the largest in the world's history.

The fund to send the American athletes is being subscribed quite generously, and it is thouht the full amount will be ready before the time of starting. Among the many who will participate in the games from the United States is Ira Davenport who began his career as a farmer boy, and now will enter the middle distance events in the coming events, he is known as the great all around runner of the University of Chicago. Paul Maxon of Trinity College is trying out for the pole vaulting with the U. of M. athletes with the view of becoming an Olympic candidate.

LEST WE FORGET

Gov. Osborn has issued the following proclamation urging Michigan people to properly observe Memorial day:

"The Grand Army of the Dead continues to grow. The Grand Army of the Living is in the aftermath, The evening shadows are falling about them. They are as brave in confronting the great enemy of mankind that has never been vanquished as they were on the battlefields that saved the nation. Love, reverence and patriotism demand that we obey our more than willing hearts and consecrate to their memory May 30, when flowers by land and sea will be the testimonials of a grateful people.

"Therefore. I, Chase S. Osborn, governor of the commonwealth of Michigan, do issue this proclamation and earnestly urge the observance of Thursday, May 30, 1912, as Decoration and Memorial Day."

NEW RECEIVER FOR THE D. T. & I.

George J. Johnson General Superintendent of the western division of the N & W. R R. is the new receiver appointed for the D. T. & I to succeed G. K. Lowell, B S. Warren and T. D Rhoades who believing that the D. T. & I. could be best managed under the direction of one man asked to be relieved.

Judge C. W. Sessions of the United States Court at Detroit made the change Saturday Mr. Johnson filed his bonds in the United States Court at Detroit Monday and immediately took charge of the property.

Mr. Lowell will remain with the D. T. & I. as general manager. For awhile Mr. Warren will act as General Councel,

This change in receivership marks the third failure of the D. T. & I, to make payment of the financial obligations of the road and was brought about by the Central Trust Co. of New York as trustee for the mortgage covering the Ohio Southern one of the several divisions that were consolidated in 1905 to form the present D. T. & I. system. Mr. Johnson the new receiver says, "the future of the road depends largely upon the developements of Detroit terminals by other roads." There have been rumors that the Pennsylvania contemplated taking over the road.

EAST LENAWEE'S BIG DRAIN

Just now the office of County Drain Commissioner is a busy place as there are seven or eight new drains now in process of construction among these is the big drain extending from the east end of Lenawee County over into Monroe County. This drain is one of the largest projects of drainage the county has known for years and has required a vast amount of labor on the part of our Drain Commissioner Sloan. It is thought that most of the work will be done by steam dredges and when completed will furnish an outlet for the water of a large area of land in Lenawee Co. as well as settle the contention that has prevailed for a long time between Lenawee and Monroe Counties in regard to Monroe taking the water from Lenawee Co.

The work of getting ready for the construction of a drain requires much more time and work than the average person would imagine. There are thirty-three petitions on file in the office now that have yet to be acted upon.

The main difficulty now is so get men to do the digging. Commissioner Sloan is a very busy man at present and one of the very best for the place.

Methodist Conference Hears of Gains for Church

Minneapolis, Minn., May 14.—"This board began its work four years ago without a Sunday school missionary in any field," was the opening statement in the report of the board of Sunday schools presented to the general conference. "It has sent out many missionaries into all parts of the United States and into other lands."

"As a result of such extension work, the following facts are noted," the report continued. "New schools established, 1,128; enrollment in these schools, 42,000; church organizations resulting, 204; new churches actually built, 117; value of these churches, $220,650. The spiritual results of the work for the four years ending in 1912 is 623,262 conversions.

The enrollment of pupils, officers and teachers in 1912 in Methodist Episcopal Sunday schools is 4,003,410. "It is the age of the child," says the report. "It is era of the Sunday school. The Sunday school of tomorrow will be a new institution. The church that appreciates and utilizes the age spirit holds the future."

UNABLE TO LEAVE HER BED

Shelbyville, Ind., April 8.—A daughter of David E. Shelton, trustee of Hanover township, is very sick and the disease from which she is suffering baffles physicians. The girl became sick six weeks ago. The next morning she felt better and started to get out of bed to dress when she found herself unable to rise.

Several physicians were called and some of them pronounced the disease paralysis, while others have no name for it. The girl is still unable to rise from her bed, but otherwise her health is good.

CADILLAC—Soon after stepping into a fruit store to obtain rest, Mrs. J. J. Nichols, of Manton, sixty-four years old, for thirty-nine years a resident of Wexford county, was seized with an attack of heart failure and died before aid reached her.

LANSING—W. T. Hulscher, who is a deputy state dairy and food commissioner, has begun a rigid inspection of all dairies, distributing points and other matters incidental to the delivery of pure milk to the city of Lansing.

HOLLAND—Louis O. Bannister, who was a watchman, was struck and instantly killed by a southbound passenger train while returning from a fishing trip near Waverly. Bannister was hurled fully twenty feet into the air and his body landed in the ditch. Both legs and his neck were broken. Bannister's hearing was defective.

In Society

May Party

In spite of the stormy weather of Wednesday, Witherell's Hall was a scene of beauty and gaiety in the evening.

The hall was most beautifully decorated in evergreens and apple blossoms Japanese lanterns hung in every available place and lent an added luster to the scene.

The ladies in their charming dresses the young men in their dress suits made a picture for a painter as they trod the merry measure of the dance. There were about 55 couple present to participate in the pleasures of the evening. The Saxaphone Quartette furnished most delightful music for the occasion. The memory of this May Party will be a pleasant one for many a day to those who attended.

The Saxiphone Quartet introduced many novelties in their music at the May Party. The auto ride being one of the most noticlable with its musical (?) auto horns The Leader of the quartet gave a saxaphone solo with piano accompanient in the chorus, played with the right hand. This was a very pleasing featnre of the occasion.

The Candy Kitchen catered in quite an unique manner at the party, serving their cream with any fruit or syrup that may be called for in the dining room of the hall, during the evening.

ADRIAN WEDDING

A number of our townspeople attended the wedding of Miss Florence E. Kaynor and Leslie B. Westerman in Adrian on Tuesday evening, as relatives and friends and they report a most charming and delightful evening.

About ninety guests were present among whom were, Mr, and Mrs. Thomas Hanley, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hanford, Fern Hanford and Pearl Kemp

FIVE KILLED BY BLAST

At Cleveland, Ohio, five workmen were killed, eight fatally and four less seriouly injured in an explosion at the Central blast furnace of the American Steel and Wire company on Broadway, near the Cuyahoga river.

The men were inside one of the furnaces removing a blowpipe preparatory to shutting down the furnace when the explosion occurred. The explosion is believed to have resulted from an accumulation of gas which was ignited by a workman's torch. The explosion was heard for two miles and shook all buildings near the plant.

FOUR MORE BODIES FOUND

Steamship Montmagnie Reports Recovery of Titanic Victims.

The agent of the marine department at Halifax, N. S., received four messages from Captain Johnson on the government steamship Montmagnie, announcing that the bodies of four Titanic victims had been found. One of the recovered is that of Harold Reynolds, a steerage passenger.

It appears that the Montmagnie is working under great difficulties of fog, but that she is keeping at the search. All the bodies landed at Halifax have now been buried with the exception of one, which will be held for a day more pending instructions from friends.

JACKSON—John W. Jackson, aged twenty-five years, was badly injured when he was caught in a cave-in while working in a sewer on Jay avenue. His collar-bone was broken and he was internally injured.

TO BREAK UP COLD

Some Advice That Will Save Time and Money

Strong drink and quinine may relieve a cold, but it usually does more harm than good.

To break up a cold in either head or chest thousands are using this sensible treatment.

First of all look after your bowels; if they need attention use any reliable cathartic. Then pour a scant teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl of boiling water, cover head and bowl with a towel and breathe fcr 5 or 10 minutes the pleasant, soothing, healing vapor.

Do this just before going to bed your head will feel fine and clear and you'll awake from a refreshing sleep minus a cold in the morning.

For colds, coughs catarrh, asthma and croup HYOMEI is guaranteed, A fifty cent bottle is all you need to break up a cold and this can be obtained at C. A. Wright & Son's and druggists everywhere.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagions diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

What Texans Admire

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made" Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amou u claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become opertive:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D, 1912.

COMMERCE COURT TO GO

Bill for Its Abolition Is Passed by the House of Representatives.

The house at Washington Thursday voted, 120 to 49, to abolish the United States court of commerce, many Republicans voting with the Democrats.

Cases now pending before the court, under the abolition provision, contained in the legislative, executive, judiciary appropriation bill, would be transferred to the various federal district courts having competent jurisdiction.

STEEL TRIAL IS ON

Taking of Evidence in the Case Opens in New York.

In New York city the taking of testimony in the federal suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation was begun and probably will continue for a month.

Hearings also will be held in other cities and probably it will be as much as a year before the United States circuit court at Trenton, N. J., where the suit was filed, will take up the evidence for judicial consideration.

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E, A Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

PONTIAC—Frank G. Ely, who is the receiver of the Citizen's Mutual Fire Insurance company of Holly, filed his final account. He was allowed $5,000 for his services, Attorneys Rockwell and Zimmerman were allowed $2,089.51 and Attorney G. C. Gillespie $300. There is about $10,000 on hand and this the receiver was directed to distribute among policy holders. About 4,000 will participate in the dividend. The receiver started 256 suits in the circuit court to bring about collection of assessments and all these have been disposed of. As soon as the amount on hand is distributed the receiver will ask to be discharged.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach. A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

GENERAL OROZCO IS FLEEING TO NORTH

Is Badly Defeated in Conflict with Federals.

Twelve hours of brisk and bloody fighting on the desert plains 300 miles south of the American border between a force of 5,000 rebels under General Orozco and an equally strong body of federals under General Huerta resulted in a decided advantage to the government.

The fighting began at daybreak and at nightfall the sandy mesas between here and Yermo, fourteen miles north, where the insurrectos were gradually forced back, were covered with dead and wounded.

Nearly 500 are believed to have been killed and wounded on both sides. A courier reported that General Trucy Aubert, the dashing federal commander, had been shot in the leg.

General Joaquin Tellez, who had been stationed in the rear of Hureta's vanguard, at noon, was sent around to the eastward to flank the rebels and cut off their retreat.

Federal headquarters claim the rebels are completely surrounded and that the second day of fighting will prove equaly decisive.

General Huerta has been receiving many telegrams of congratulations on the outcome of the day's fighting. Should the advantage gained be followed by equal success in the next battle, the federal leaders are confident it will mean the annihilation of the insurrecto army.

General Huerta considers it probable, however, that the rebels will make their last stand at Escalon, their central base, fourteen miles to the north, where they have built fortifications and trenches in the last fortnight.

It was the steady artillery fire of the government troops that dislodged the enemy. The aim of the federal gunners was true. They began to shell the rebel positions at daybreak. For a time the insurrectos fired in volleys and seven federals officers were wounded. The rebels withstood the cannonading only a few hours, however, and soon began to evacuate their positions.

General Tellez arrived at nightfall with 1,500 men in the valley behind Conejos, where the vanguard of rebels gathered. It seems likely that unless the rebels continue to fight desperately many prisoners will be taken.

across toward the factory. That way Emily went in pursuit, intending to overtake him with her pony cart.

But upon reaching the stables, past which the path ran, she found Bailey himself engaged in an inspection of the limousine in company with the chauffeur.

"You'll have to look into her differential, Anderson," he was pronouncing, when the young girl came beside him.

"Come, please," she urged breathlessly.

"Come?" repeated Bailey, wheeling, with his slow, benevolent smile. "Sure, Miss Emily; where?"

She shook her head, not replying until they were safely outside; then:

"To Mr. Lestrange; he is in the pavilion. He wants to see you."

"To Lestrange!" he almost shouted, halting. "Lestrange here?"

"Yes. There is time; he says there is time. He is going back as soon as he sees you."

"But what's he doing here? What does he mean by risking his neck without any practice."

"He came to see me," she whispered, and stood confessed.

"God!" said Bailey, quite reverently, after a moment of speechless stupefaction. "You, and him!"

She lifted confiding eyes to him, moving nearer.

"It is a secret, but I wanted you to know because you like us both. Dick said you loved Mr. Lestrange."

"Yes," was the dazed assent.

"Well, then— But come, he is waiting."

She was sufficiently unlike the usual Miss Ffrench to bewilder any one. Bailey dumbly followed her across the park, carrying his hat in his hand.

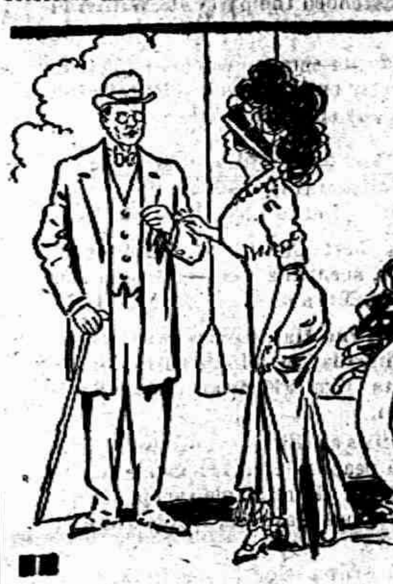
"Some one is there," she said. "Some one is speaking. I forgot that Uncle Ethan had gone out."

She heard Bailey catch his breath oddly. Her own pulses began to beat with heavy irregularity, as a few steps farther brought the two opposite the open arcade. There they halted, frozen.

In the place Emily had left, where all her feminine toys still lay, Mr. Ffrench was seated as one exhausted by the force of overmastering emotion; his hands clenched on the arms of the chair; his face drawn with passion. Opposite him stood Lestrange, colorless and still as Emily had never conceived him, listening in absolute silence to the bitter address pouring from the other's lips with a low-toned violence indescribable.



"Well, Then—But Come, He Is Waiting."

"I told you then, never again to come here," first fell upon Emily's conscious hearing. "I supposed you were at least Ffrench enough to take a dismissal. What do you want here, money? I warned you to live upon the allowance sent every month to your bankers, for I would pay no more even to escape the intolerable disgrace of your presence here. Did you imagine me so deserted that I would accept even you as a successor? Wrong; you are not missed. My nephew Richard takes your place, and is fit to take it. Go back to Europe and your low-born wife; there is no lack in my household."

The voice broke in an excess of savage triumph, and Lestrange took the pause without movement or gesture.

"I am going, sir, and I shall never come back," he answered, never more quietly. "I can take a dismissal, yes. If ever I have wished peace or hoped for an accord that never existed between us, I go cured of such folly. But hear this much, since I am arraigned at your bar: I have never yet disgraced your name or mine unless by the boy's mischief which sent me from college. The money you speak of, I have never used; ask Bailey of it, if you will." He hesitated, and in the empty moment there came across the mile of June air the roaring noon whistle of the factory. Involuntarily he turned his head toward the call, but as instantly recovered himself from the self-betrayal. "There is another matter to be arranged, but there is no time now. Nor even in concluding it will I ever come here again, sir."

There was that in his bearing, in the dignified carefulness of courtesy with which he saluted the other before turning to go, that checked even Ethan Ffrench. But as Lestrange crossed the threshold of the little building, Emily ran from the thicket to meet him, her eyes a dark splendor in her white face, her hands outstretched.

"Not like this!" she panted. "Not without seeing me! Oh, I might have guessed—"

"You dare? My dear, my dear, not even a question? There is no one like you. Say, shall I take you now, or send Dick for you after the race?"

Mr. Ffrench exclaimed some inarticulate words, but neither heard one.

"Send Dick," Emily answered, her eyes on the gray eyes above her. "Send Dick—I understand, I will come."

He kissed her once, then she drew back and he went down the terraces toward the gates. As Emily sank down on the bench by the pavilion door, Bailey brushed past her, running after the straight, lithe figure that went steadily on out of sight among the huge trees planted and tended by five generations of Ffrenches.

When the vistas of the park were empty, Emily slowly turned to face her uncle.

"You love David Ffrench?" he asked, his voice thin and harsh.

"Yes," she answered. She had no need to ask if Lestrange were meant.

"He is married to some woman of the music halls."

"No."

"How do you know? He has told you?"

She lifted to him the superb confidence of her glance, although nervous tremors shook her in wavelike succession.

"If he had been married, he would not have made me care for him. He has asked me to be his wife."

They were equally strange to each other in these new characters, and equally spent by emotion. Neither moving, they sat oposite each other in silence. So Bailey found them when he came back later, to take his massive stand in the doorway, his hands in his pockets and his strong jaw set.

"I think that things are kind of mixed up here, Mr. Ffrench," he stated grimly. "I guess I'm the one to straighten them out a bit; I've loved Mr. David from the time he was a kid and never saw him get a square deal yet. You asked him what he was doing here—I'll tell you; he is Lestrange."

There is a degree of amazement which precludes speech; Mr. Ffrench looked back at his partner, mute.

"He is Lestrange. He never meant you to know; he'd have left without your ever knowing, but for Miss Emily. I guess I don't need to remind you of what he's done; if it hadn't been for him we might have closed our doors some day. He understands the business as none of us back-number, old-fashioned ones do; he took hold and shook some life into it. We can make cars, but he can make people buy them. Advertising! Why, just that fool picture he drew on the back of a pad, one day, of a row of thermometers up to one hundred forty, with the sign 'Mercuries are at the top,' made more people notice."

Bailey cleared his throat. "He was always making people notice, and laughing while he did it. He's risked his neck on every course going, to bring our cars in first, he's lent his fame as a racing driver to help us along. And now everything is fixed the way we want, he's thrown out. What did he do it for? He thought he needed to square accounts with you, for being born, I suppose; so when he heard how things were going with us he came to me and offered his help. At least, that's what he said. I believe he came because he couldn't bear to see the old place go under."

There was a skein of blue silk swinging over the edge of the table. Mr. Ffrench picked it up and replaced it in Emily's work basket before replying.

"If this remarkable story is true," he began, accurately precise in accent.

"You don't need me to tell you it is," retorted Bailey. "You know what my new manager's been doing; why, you disliked him without seeing him, but you had to admit his good work. And I heard you talking about his allowance, Mr. Ffrench. He never touched it, not from the first; it piled up for six years. Last April, when we needed cash in a hurry, he drew it out and gave it to me to buy aluminum. When he left here first he drove a taxicab in New York city until he got into racing work and made Darling Lestrange famous all over the continent. I guess it went pretty hard for a while; if he'd been the things you called him, he'd have gone to the devil alone in New York. But he didn't."

An oriole darted in one arcade and out again with a musical whir of wings. The clink of glass and silver sounded from the house windows with a pleasant cheeriness and suggestion of comfort and plenty.

"He made good," Bailey concluded, thoughtfully. "But it sounded queer to me to hear you tell him you didn't want him around because Mr. Dick took his place. I know, and Miss Emily knows, that Dick Ffrench was no use on earth for any place until Mr. David took him in hand and made him fit to live. That's all, I guess, that I had to say; I'll get back to work." He turned, but paused to glance around. "It's going to be pretty dull at the factory for me. And between us we've sent Lestrange to the track with a nice set of nerves."

His retreating footsteps died away to leave the noon hush unbroken. As before, uncle and niece were left opposite each other, the crumpled newspaper where Lestrange's name showed in heavy type lying on the floor between them.

The effect of Bailey's final sentence had been to leave Emily dizzied by apprehension. But when Mr. Ffrench rose and passed out, she aroused to look up at him eagerly.

"Uncle," she faltered.

Disregarding or unseeing her outstretched hand, he went on and left her there alone. And then Emily dared rescue the newspaper.

"A substitute," she whispered. "A substitute," and laid her wet cheek against the pictured driver.

The simplest affection may become a thing of beauty; the love of any human being comes to our lives as the great revealer. By this alone we hear and see. It is also the great health giver. Our work no longer continues selfish when the thought of another is constantly with us; there is always an avenue for relief from the deadening routine and tedium. Work with a thought of some one else is living work, and that which is living becomes beautiful.—Arthur L. Salmon.

Origin of "Mausoleum."

When Mausolus, king of Caria, died his widow, Artemisia, decided to erect over his body the most magnificent tomb that the world should ever see. Sculptors and artists from every known land were put to work and no expense was spared, and for years the work was pursued, though it was not finished even at the death of his widow. It is from this incident that there arose the word "mausoleum," which means a stately tomb.

OHIO PRIMARIES WILL BE CLOSE

State Delegation to Be about Evenly Divided.

ODDS SEEM WITH ROOSEVELT

President's Speaking Tour Said to Have Turned Many Votes for Him —Roosevelt Men Make Few Predictions.

Columbus, O., May 20.—The indications are that the contest at the Ohio primaries will be very close.

It looks as if Ohio's forty-eight delegates to the Chicago convention are to be divided about equally between Taft and Roosevelt, with the odds favoring Roosevelt. A splitting of the Ohio delegation on fairly even terms would have the effect of prolonging the fight between the president and Colonel Roosevelt and would center the efforts of both on the New Jersey primaries on May 28.

The Roosevelt managers believe the colonel is going to make as impressive a showing here as he did in Illinois, but they are not making any predictions.

The extraordinary character of the campaign, with a president of the United States and the only living ex-president stumping the state, not to mention the unusual issues involved, contributed to the confusion of the politicians, who are trying to get a definite line on what is going to happen in Tuesday's primaries.

Next to the reciprocity issue the Taft administration suits under the Sherman anti-trust law seems to be the most serious menace to the president's chances in Ohio.

Besides this anti-trust legislation, the president's prosecution of Dan R. Hanna of Cleveland for accepting rebates raised a rumpus that has seriously affected several districts.

Roosevelt has had a more efficient organization than the president. It has been only within the last two or three weeks that the Taft people have really awakened to the necessity for action.

The president's tour through the state has made votes for him, but whether he has turned the tide sufficiently to carry a majority of the delegates is uncertain. It is the belief here that President Taft will control the state convention and will get the six delegates-at-large.

In Cleveland the chances seem to favor Roosevelt carrying the two congressional districts, the Twentieth and Twenty-First, although the Taft managers profess to have hopes for both, especially the latter.

PREPARING FOR BIG CONVENTION

Coliseum Building at Chicago Under Inspection.

CONTESTS TO COME UP JUNE 6

Friends of Governor Deneen Working to Make Him Temporary Chairman of Convention—Jobs for Country Editors.

Chicago, May 20.—The first wheel in the machinery of the Republican national convention, to be held in Chicago beginning June 18, turned when the subcommittee on arrangements of the Republican national committee met at the Coliseum annex. The approval of the seating arrangement and decorative scheme as planned by Architect Arthur G. Brown and the tentative selection of a temporary chairman of the big gathering was among the matters considered.

The desire of the Republican party leaders to have a full attendance of the national committee, when the entire body meets here on June 6 to hear the numerous pending contests, was indicated when Secretary William Hayward resorted to the cable to get the members from the insular possessions here in time. He got in touch with Col. Henry B. McCoy, the member from the Philippines, who cabled from London that he was on his way to Chicago.

Colonel Harry S. New, chairman, received word that a representative of the congressional press committee would arrive in Chicago to aid in alloting seats in the press section of the convention.

"The indications are," said Colonel New, "that we will be unable to grant all requests for press seats. I am in favor of selecting only country editors for sergeants at arms and other places on the convention staff so they may be assured of admission."

The friends of Governor Deneen will work for his election as temporary chairman of the convention. His election, it is regarded, would clear the way for the selection of Lawrence Y. Sherman as a member of the resolutions committee from Illinois and make possible the selection of a delegate other than the governor as chairman of the Illinois delegation, a post now conceded to him.

BUNGALOW CRIME SOLVED BY DEATH

C. C. Dillon Was Murderer of Bessie Jones in Los Angeles.

HIS REMAINS FOUND ON TRACK

Chicago, May 20.—The hand of destiny and a complete solution to the mystery of the Los Angeles bungalow murder case followed on each other's heels with the finding of the mangled body of Caithias C. Dillon on the tracks of the Northwestern railroad near Wilmette.

The slayer of the young woman—learned to be Miss Bessie Jones, formerly of Richmond, Va.—either met his death through the revengeful guidance of fate or else he was driven to suicide through the lashings of a stricken conscience.

The famous murder mystery became completely solved, when the wife of Dillon, who has been living at 5420 Evanston avenue, told the story of his inconstancy to her.

The murdered girl come to Chicago more than a year ago from Norfolk, Va. Her home there was at 1876 Chesterfield avenue. Shortly after she reached Chicago she met Dillon. He persuaded Miss Jones to leave her room and go with him to apartments that he had obtained with Mrs. Emma McCue, 4621 Evanston avenue. Dillon left his wife and took the woman to these apartments, where they lived under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jones.

When Miss Jones left Chicago several months ago to visit her parents in Norfolk, Dillon went back to his family and asked Mrs. Dillon to forgive his unfaithfulness. That this request was not intended as serious was proved by the fact that Dillon and Miss Jones kept up a close correspondence.

The girl returned to Chicago probably a little more than two weeks ago and immediately left again with Dillon. That the pair went first to Denver was proved by a postcard received from there by Mrs. Dillon.

A second card came to Chicago from Dillon two days later. This was sent from Los Angeles and was addressed to his former employer.

The couple could only have been together in Los Angeles for a few days. Just what was the cause of the murder and its previous quarrel probably never will be learned. It is known that Dillon was of an excitable temperament and that he naturally was inconstant in his love affairs.

The police theory is that he suddenly became tired of Miss Jones and told her so.

Another theory that has been advanced refers to the fact that the girl was shortly to have become a mother. The natural complications that this event would have produced, it is thought by the police, led to a discussion that grew into a furious quarrel between the man and woman.

The mysterious element of the sodality pins found on the body of the victim was explained when it was learned that, while Miss Jones, herself, was not a Catholic, Dillon was a member of this faith.

So fanatical and enthusiastic was his faithfulness to the religion that he insisted that Miss Jones provide herself with the sodality badges. These Dillon procured for her.

MINE SUSPENSION COSTS MILLIONS

Loss to All Interested Is about $68,000,000.

PEACE AGREEMENT ADOPTED

Miners Vote to Support Work of Officers and Happy Termination of Difficulty Is Received with Satisfaction.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 20.—The anthracite mine workers' convention ratified the agreement entered into by a subcommittee of miners and operators. In consequence the miners will go back to work next Wednesday, after idleness of seven weeks.

The vote was 323 in favor of ratification to 64 against. It was announced amid cheers. Immediately a motion authorizing the miners' subcommittee to sign the agreement was carried. Another motion, which was carried, ordered the miners to resume work.

President White of the Mine Workers' union and other officials held a final conference with the coal operators' committee in Philadelphia this afternoon. At this meeting the agreement adopted by the convention was to be signed and the suspension of work, which has lasted seven weeks, was to formally cease.

Throughout the region the delegates who attended the convention have been welcomed by their local unions and their course in deciding to support their national officers and adopt their report and recommendations was heartily endorsed.

Officials of the coal companies are no less pleased, and they will get the mines in shape for a resumption of work as soon as possible. Coal may be mined on Wednesday, but mining in most of the collieries will have to be deferred until the end of this week or the beginning of next.

The suspension started seven weeks ago today, but as most of the mines will not resume until next week the period of idleness will be practically eight weeks. In that time the losses due to the suspension are estimated as follows: Loss in wages of mine employes, $17,000,000; loss to coal companies in net profits, $10,800,000; loss to sellers of supplies and materials for mining, $5,000,000; loss to rail[illegible] $19,000,000; loss in wages of idle coal train crews, $250,000; loss to merchants in trade, $16,000,000.

ROILS WILSON PEOPLE

Statement Issued by Clark's Managers Is Subject.

Washington, May 20.—"Absolute dishonesty" and "silly mendacity" are terms employed by the Wilson managers in a statement denouncing a bulletin recently issued at the presidential headquarters of Champ Clark of Missouri.

The Clark statement that aroused the ire of the managers of Woodrow Wilson sets forth that up to date only eighty delegates had been pledged to Governor Wilson, whereas Representative Underwood was credited with eighty-four.

The Wilson statement says, among other things, that Governor Wilson now has 273 delegates to the Baltimore convention and that the number will be materially augmented when the primaries and conventions in the next three states to act, namely Ohio, Virginia and New Jersey, are held.

150,000 FARMERS IN UNION

Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, and the Dakotas Represented.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 20.—At a meeting here of secretaries of farmers' grain dealers' associations of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Illinois and Iowa, plans were completed for the formation of a compact organization to embrace the 150,000 farmers now holding membership in the state associations.

The plans will be presented to the state bodies by the secretaries who were present at the meeting. The organization is planned to influence federal legislation concerning the grain trade.

Three Killed in Revolver Fight.

Corpus Christi, Tex., May 20.—In a revolver battle at San Diego, sixty miles west of Corpus Christi, the county and district clerk of Duval county, a deputy sheriff and one other man, all Mexicans, were killed.

Mount Vernon, Ill., May 20.—The Jefferson Development company has closed a contract with C. W. Roos of Watson, Ill., to put down an oil test hole on its holdings south of this city.

FIRE LOSSES EXCESSIVE

Much Greater in This County and Canada Than in Europe.

Albany, N. Y., May 20.—According to the annual report of the state insurance department, the fire losses in this country and Canada for 1910 and 1911 were excessive when compared with the year 1909. The losses for 1911 are stated to save been something over $234,000,000.

This, roughly speaking, based on population, would make a per capita loss of between two and three dollars, as against an estimated per capita loss in Europe of less than forty cents.

VERNOR CRANE WINS FELLOWSHIP AT THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania on May 15th appointments were made of forty five scholarships and five Fellowships for the year 1912-13. Earlier in the year thirty-seven fellowships in the Graduate School were awarded to men from all parts of the country who have shown special merit in the various branches of research and study offered by the University. Appointments to one of these scholarships or fellowships means that the student appointed has several unusual distinctions as a scholar and is entitled to one year of research and study without charge, and in the case of recipients of fellowships a salary sufficient to support the student is also awarded. Among those who received fellowships was: In History,—Vernor Winslow Crane, Tecumseh, Mich.

RICHARD CALDWELL

Richard Caldwell died Saturday May 18, after a brief illness in his 75th year. Mr. Caldwell has been in failing health for a number of years, but his death was a shock to the community. Forty-five years ago he came from Ireland his birthplace, and settled in Tecumseh, where for many years he was a prominent business man, his wife preceeded him to the better country three months ago One daughter, Martha, and two sons, Will C. of New York City, and Thomas of Adrian, are left to mourn their double loss. The funeral was held from the house Monday at 2:30 p m., the Rev. R. R. Weld officiating, burial at Brookside beside the loved ones who have gone before.

TY COBB

When patience ceased to be a virtue, and Ty Cobb took summary satisfaction out of a spectator at the final game in New York Wednesday afternoon, who persistently added insult after insult on Ty, the whole crowd approved but disipline must be observed, and despite the fact that he made an official apology in explanation of his actions, President Ban Johnson suspended him, and just at a time when he was doing his best work for the team. Had he imposed a fine it would have given greater satisfaction. Ty has the whole team on his side.

SCENES AT FERRY FIELD

Saturday at "Ferry Field" in Ann Arbor was a winner for Michigan Waring of Tecumseh now holds the broad jump record for Ferry Field and Cohen of Michigan second. Waring's record being 23 ft. 8 in

The meet between Michigan and Syracuse resulted in a score of 83 to 43 in favor of Michigan.

The Sunday Detroit News-Tribune gives a photograph of Roger Waring taken while he was taking the broad jump that won the event. He bids fair to be a contestant in the future, in the Olympic games.

At this meet, Redpath of Syracuse Great Quartermiler who won the four hundred and forty yard dash in 49 minutes breaking all Ferry Field records in this event expects to go with the team to participate in the Olympic games at Stockholm next month.

WILD DOGS MENACED PARIS

Serious Situation That Became One of the Worst Features of Reign of Terror.

So many startling events happened from day to day during the Reign of Terror that the apparition of wild dogs in Paris was commonly overlooked. But it was quite natural. The greater part of the grandees, who fled or went into hiding, kept dogs, and very few of them were able to make arrangements for the poor beasts when they left home.

The dogs, abandoned, took to the streets of course, and shortly they began to congregate in two packs, one occupying the Champs Elysees, and one the Bois de Boulogne. Soon they became a public danger. Carlyle pokes fun at Santerre, the brewer, who proposed a law that all dogs should be hanged; he had not noticed the paragraphs in the newspapers telling how people had been attacked in the Champs Elysees.

At length the situation became really grave, as is easily understood when thousands of starving animals have to find subsistence in a starving city. Many of them were wolf hounds, and of powerful fighting breeds. So in September, 1793, drastic measures were taken against the Champs Elysees pack.

Two battalions of the National Guard surrounded the area, leaving a gap toward the Rue Royale, while multitudes of ragamuffins beat the cover. The game was driven up to the Rue Royale to the Place Royale, where troops made a battle of it, firing volleys. Three days consecutively this operation was repeated and more than three thousand dogs lay in the place.

A certain Gaspardin received orders to clear them away, and he, short of means, applied for the Royal equipages. It was a timely jest, greeted with applause. So M. Gaspardin packed the dead dogs neck and heels in the gilded coaches as full as they would hold, and made a state procession through delighted Paris.

They were very much enjoyed by all being very instructive and entertaining.

Closing ode.

Adjourned until 1913 when the convention will meet at Litchfield.

Notes

The response to the address of Welcome given by Miss Laura Chaloner, of Adrian was interesting to all showing the appreciation of the visitors for their cordial welcome and for the fine entertainment provided.

Mrs. Helen Greenwald of Tipton made a decided hit in her paper "What some women are doing today" when she referred to Kipling's poem, The Female of the Species.

The Memorial services were most beautiful and Miss Edna Gaston's Solo "Face to Face" was rendered in a most touching manner bringing tears to all eyes.

A very pretty featurd of the meeting was the presentation of baskets of sweet peas to the District Deputy and Grand Chief, by the members of the Tipton Staff as they passed before them each one placing a dainty boquet of the flowers in the baskets.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTION BY A TECUMSEH BOY ALFRED G. SMITH

We note the following in the Wilkie Press of Saskatachewan Canada, a little town near the line between Alberta and Saskatachewan. The first Ad in the first column was headed "Big Transaction in Real Estate," sold by Alf Smith. Alf Smith is Alfred G Smith of Tecumseh, son of William Smith. This land was sold for $120.00 per acre, there being one half section which he bought two years ago for $32.00 per acre.

Five years ago Alfred Smith went up into Canada in the wheat belt and took up one hundred and sixty acres of land, which is now clear and has laid aside the tidy little sum of $5000. before this deal was consummated. It takes our Tecumseh boys to forge ahead.

Stolen Jewels Are Recovered.

Over $10,000 worth of precious stones which were stolen from the effigy of the Virgin at Czenstochowa, Poland, two years ago, have been discovered in the shop of a jeweler named Adler, in Lublin, Poland, whose premises were being searched for Nihilist correspondence. Clues were also found which led to the discovery of another $5,000 worth of these jewels in a house near Lemberg.

High School Notes

JUNIOR RECEPTION

The Juniors very delightfully entertained the Seniors and Faculty at the home of Hazel Pocklington, on North Union St. Friday evening. The house was very prettily decorated with the two class colors. After a dainty lunch served by the teachers of the grades, Francis Peters acting as mistress of ceremonies, introduced the toastmaster, Holly Hand. The program was as follows:

Response to Address of Welcome—Ed. R. Sales
Our Problems—Hazel Pocklington
Violin Solo—Harold McClure
Our Possibilities—Blanche Snyder
Music—Supt. and Mrs. McAlpine
Our Impossibilities—Ray W. Binns
Music—Sylvia Andrews
Our Diseases—Miss Leeson
Prospective College Freshie—Elwood Comfort
Music—Fred Dickenson
Music—Girls' Double Trio.

The County eighth grade examination was held at the High School building last Thursday and Friday. 20 pupils took the examination.

Glenn Kempf of Tipton, visited the High School Thursday afternoon.

A Y. W. C. A. mission study was held at the High School last Thursday evening. Miss Leeson had charge of the meeting.

Tecumseh High baseball team played a game with North Adrian and at the end of the ninth inning the score stood 7 to 7.

MISSIONARY MEETING

A very interesting meeting was held at the Friend's church last Wednesday evening when Miss Margaret Baird a returned Missionary from India gave an address.

She has been engaged in the Mission field for the Friends for the last twenty years. Her story of the horrors of the famine and their great need was most heartrendering not only for their Soul's sake but for their poor bodies is help needed at this time.

She had been called upon to teach carpentry, plowing and other like pursuits because of the lack of men workers.

Miss Baird is a most gifted speaker and it seemed a pity that no more people turned out to hear her.

A FEW BIBLES FOR PANAMA

Seven tons of Bibles is the record shipment by the American Bible Society and not one in the English language,

This large shipment was destined for Panama and were in the Spanish and Portugesse languages with a few in Indian and other dialects.

The Bible Society is getting ready for work among the steamers which will pass through the Panama Canal. It is claimed that already 1,500 new ships are being built in Europe for traffic on the Canal.

The Society has just completed the translation of the New Testament for 150,000 Qurchina Indians in Peru and Boliva. These bibles are made in Argentina.

A Summer School for "Engaged Girls" to Learn Cooking

The June Woman's Home Companion contains an article on Fannie Merritt Farmer, who for the past thirty years has been a famous teacher of cookery. Miss Farmer has lately established a summer school and in connection with this part of her work the author of the article writes:

"This is an interesting development, for many of the students attending the summer courses in July and August are graduates in science from colleges in different parts of the country, teachers, matrons in institutions, and nurses from hospital training schools, who come to Miss Farmer for postgraduate courses both theoretical and severely practical. There are lectures in dietetics, the feeding of infants and children, invalid cookery, and the management of kitchen and commissariat institutions, together with actual practice in buying at the large city markets and cold-storage plants. Some classes are taken to visit and study the kitchens of the floating hospital and other institutions. There is also a waitresses' and housemaids' course in advanced cookery.

"Miss Farmer's four kitchens are kept pretty busy through the year. There are classes, often of nurses, in the neat, white-trimmed dietetic kitchen. There are classes, usually of eight, in which society girls, college girls, engaged girls, about-to-be-engaged girls, very young wives, and matrons of longer standing are initiated into all the mysteries of the cuisine, of range, oven, and chafing dish. Incidentally, they eat what they cook, and do full justice to their own cookery."

Dairymaid Separator

This is the way the farmers appreciate the latest pattern of these DAIRYMAID SEPARATORS, they are much cheaper than they used to be. Ask for one to be out on trial.

"We are milking three cows, and were using a water separator, that is, water around the cream. As soon as I got the Dairymaid, we readily saw that our increase of butter was one pound a day. If anyone had told me of this before I got this separator, I would not have beleived it, but it is an obsolute fact. As far as the separators running is concerned, I would say that it runs very easy and is perfectly satisfactory in every respect."

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

What Texans Admire

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the e pr i ises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

MEXICAN REBELS SCATTERED

Federals Seem to Have Upper Hand in Present Revolution.

Washington, May 20.—State department representatives in Mexico express the opinion that the federals have demoralized the main force under General Orozco, the rebel leader, to a greater extent than has been supposed hitherto. The rebel force is so scattered, it is stated, that the federals are finding it difficult to locate the revolutionist army.

It is believed many of the rebels have forsaken Orozco, following the defeat suffered by the rebel commander last week, and are making their way either to their homes or to continue playing the role of revolutionists in some state less disturbed by federal troops.

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. A. Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

BODY LIES IN STATE

People Admitted to See Corpse of Dead King.

Copenhagen, May 20.—The chapel in the Christianberg palace, where the body of King Frederick rests, was opened to the public for the official lying in state of the dead monarch.

The arrangements are simple but impressive. The coffin, which is covered only with the royal flag, is placed on a high gold and black catafalque. Over it there is a royal mantle of red velvet, on which there is wrought a golden crown, which is lined with ermine. Over the foot of the coffin are the orb and scepter and the king's sword, orders and shield.

There are silver candelabra at the corners of the coffin, and also historical silver lions from Rosenborg Castle. There are about 2,000 wreaths on the floor.

Vigo Grand Jury Returns Indictment Following Recent Primaries.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 20.—The first indictment charging "crooked" work at the polls during the recent primaries here was returned by the grand jury against John McKay, alias William Tipton. The charge is attempting to vote fraudulently in Precinct D of the Seventh ward.

The grand jury is making an exhaustive investigation into county corruption and it is said other indictments in connection with the primary election will follow.

"MAN WHO STOOD STILL"

Quaint Illinois Character Refused to Advertise and Failed.

Aurora, Ill., May 20.—The death of D. W. Stockwell of this city, at Hawarden, Can., marked the passing of one of the quaintest characters in Illinois. He was known as the "man who stood still."

As owner of one of the biggest stores in northern Illinois, outside of Chicago, during the Civil War, he prospered. After the war he failed to keep abreast of the times and the same goods which he carried then still adorn the shelves and show windows of his store.

Five years after the war he was still making a profit. In ten years more the place was a curiosity shop, and has continued so. The hoop skirt, barber-striped hose, jet jewelry and like antiquities continued a part of his stock. In latter years he was the only one who entered the place except visitors to the city. He did no advertising. He had about $18,000 worth of goods and settled down to wait for customers who never came. He was at business at 7 o'clock each morning and remained until 6 o'clock in the evening. He was seventy-seven years old.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

ELEVEN TRY TO DIE

Jailer Discovers the Men Near Death, Huddled Around Three Open Gas Jets.

Omaha, Neb., May 20.—Eleven prisoners in the county jail "bull pen" entered into a suicide pact and attempted to kill themselves by turning on the gas.

When Jailer Cahill discovered what the prisoners had done, James Higley, who was serving a sixty-day sentenced, was nearly dead, and George Stevens and Barney Kemmerling were in a critical condition. Higley was rushed to the county hospital. He will probably recover. The other eight prisoners yielded promptly to treatment.

When discovered the eleven men were huddled together around the three gas jets. They confessed the suicide pact.

INCOME TAX KILLED

Finance Committee Also Votes Down Bill to Lower Sugar Duty.

Washington, May 20.—The senate finance committee authorized a favorable report on the Lodge substitute for the house free sugar bill and an unfavorable report on the house bill for a tax on incomes in excess of $5,000 a year.

The Lodge sugar bill would eliminate the differential and Dutch standard from the tariff and leave the duties otherwise practically as at present. Senator Simmons offered a substitute sugar bill prepared by the Democratic members of the committee. It proposed a reduction of existing duties by about one-third, but was voted down by a strict party vote.

No one lunched at the Ffrench home that day, except the servants. Near three o'clock in the afternoon Mr. Ffrench came back to the pavilion where Emily still sat.

"Go change your gown," he commanded, in his usual tone. "We will start now. I have sent for Bailey and ordered Anderson to bring the automobile."

"Start?" she wondered, bewildered.

He met her gaze with a stately repellence of comment.

"For the Beach. I understand this race lasts twenty-four hours. Have you any objection?"

Objection to being near David! Emily sprang to her feet.

CHAPTER VIII.

Six o'clock was the hour set for the start of the Beach race. And it was just seventeen minutes past five when Dick Ffrench, hanging in a frenzy of anxiety over the paddock fence circling the inside of the mile oval, uttered something resembling a howl and rushed to the gate to signal his recreant driver. From the opposite side of the track Lestrange waved gay return, making his way through the officials and friends who pressed around him to shake hands or slap his shoulder caressingly, jesting and questioning, calling directions and advice. A brass band played noisily in the grand-stand, where the crowd heaved and surged; the racing machines were roaring in their camps.

"What's the matter? Where were you?" cried Dick, when at last Lestrange crossed the course to the central field. "The cars are going out now for the preliminary run. Rupert's nearly crazy, snarling at everybody, and the other man has been getting ready to start instead of you."

"Well, he can get unready," smiled Lestrange. "Keep cool, Ffrench; I've got half an hour and I could start now. I'm ready."

He was ready; clad in the close-fitting khaki costume whose immaculate daintiness gave no hint of the certainty that before the first six hours ended it would be a wreck of yellow dust and oil. As he passed in running an appraising glance down the street-like row of tents, the white-clothed driver of a spotless white car shot out on his way to the track, but halted opposite the latest arrival to stretch a cordial hand.

"I hoped a trolley car had bitten you," he shouted. "The rest of us would have more show if you got lost on the way, Darling."

The boyish driver at the next tent looked up as they passed, and came grinning over to give his clasp.

"Get a move on; what you been doin' all day, dear child? They've been givin' your manager sal volatile to hold him still." He nodded at the agitated Dick in ironic commiseration.

"Go get out your car, Darling; I want to beat you," chaffed the next in line.

Laughing, retorting, shaking hands with each comrade rival, Lestrange went down the row to his own tent. At his approach a swarm of mechanics from the factory stood back from the long, low, gray car, the driver who was to relieve him during the night and day ordeal slipped down from the seat and unmasked.

"He's here," announced Dick superfluously. "Rupert—where's Rupert? Don't tell me he's gone now! Lestrange—"

But Rupert was already emerging from the tent with Lestrange's gauntlets and cap, his expression a study in the sardonic.

"It hurts me fierce to think how you must have hurried," he observed. "Did you walk both ways, or only all three? I'm no Eve, but I'd give a snake an apple to know where you've been all day."

"Would you?" queried Lestrange provokingly, clasping the goggles before his eyes. "Well, I've spent the last two hours on the Coney Island beach, about three squares from here, watching the kiddies play in the sand. I didn't feel like driving just then. It was mighty soothing, too."

Rupert stared at him, a dry unwilling smile slowly crinkling his dark face.

"Maybe, Darling," he drawled, and turned to make his own preparations.

Fascinated and useless, Dick looked on at the methodical flurry of the next few moments; until Lestrange was in his seat and Rupert swung in beside him. Then a gesture summoned him to the side of the machine.

"I'll run in again before we race, of course," said Lestrange to him, above the deafening noise of the motor. "Be around here; I want to see you."

Rupert leaned out, all good-humor once more as he pointed to the machine.

"Got a healthy talk, what?" he exulted.

The car darted forward.

A long round of applause welcomed Lestrange's swooping advent on the track. Handkerchiefs and scarfs were waved; his name passed from mouth to mouth.

"Popular, ain't he!" chuckled a mechanic next to Dick. "They don't forget that Georgia trick, no, sir."

It was not many times that the cars could circle the track. Quarter of six blew from whistles and klaxons, signal flags sent the cars to their camps for the last time before the race.

"Come here," Lestrange beckoned to Dick, as he brought his machine shuddering to a standstill before the tent. "Here, close—we've got a moment while they fill tanks."

He unhooked his goggles and leaned over as Dick came beside the wheel, the face so revealed bright and quiet in the sunset of glow.

"One never can tell what may happen," he said. "I'd rather tell you now than chance your feeling afterward that I didn't treat you quite squarely in keeping him. I hope you won't take it as my father did; we've been good chums, you and I. I am your cousin, David Ffrench."

"Of course, I'm not going back to Ffrenchwood. After this race I shall go to the Duplex company; I used to be with them and they've wanted me back. Your company can get along without me, now all is running well—indeed, Mr. Ffrench has dismissed me." His firm lip bent a little more firmly. "The work I was doing is in your hands and Bailey's; see it through. Unless you too want to break off with me, we'll have more time to talk over this."

"Water," He Demanded Tersely.

"Go on. My name is Lestrange now and always."

A shriek from the official klaxon summoned the racers, Rupert swung back to his seat. Dick reached up his hand to the other in the first really dignified moment of his life.

"I'm glad you're my kin, Lestrange," he said. "I've liked you anyhow, but I'm glad, just the same. And I don't care what rot they say of you. Take care of yourself."

It was not a tranquilizing experience for an amateur to witness the start, when the fourteen powerful cars sprang simultaneously for the first curve, struggling for possession of the narrow track in a wheel to wheel contest where one mistouch meant the wreck of many. After that first view, Dick sat weakly down on an oil barrel and watched the race in a state of fascinated endurance.

The golden and violet sunset melted pearl-like into the black cup of night. The glare of many searchlights made the track a glistening band of white, around which circled the cars, themselves gemmed with white and crimson lamps. The cheers of the people as the lead was taken by one favorite or another, the hum of voices, the music and uproar of the machines blended into a web of sound indescribable. The spectacle was at once ultramodern and classic in antiquity of conception.

At eight o'clock Lestrange came flying in, sent off the track to have a lamp relighted.

"Water," he demanded tersely, in the sixty seconds of the stop, and laughed openly at Dick's expression while he took the cup.

"Why didn't you light it out there?" asked the novice, infected by the speed fever around him.

An oil-smeared mechanic patronizingly explained:

"You can't have cars manicuring all over the track and people tripping over 'em. You get sent off to light up, and if you don't go they fine you laps made."

Machines darted in and out from their camps at intervals, each waking a frenzy of excitement among its men. At ten o'clock the Mercury car came in again, this time limping with a flat tire, to be fallen on by its mechanics.

"We're leading, but we'll lose by this," said Lestrange, slipping out to relax and meditatively contemplating the alternate driver, who was standing across the camp. "Ffrench, at twelve I'll have to come in to rest some, and turn my machine over to the other man. And I won't have him wrecking it for me. I want you, as owner, to give him absolute orders to do no speeding; let him hold a fifty-two mile an hour average until I take the wheel again."

"Me?"

"I can't do it. You, of course."

"You could," Dick answered. "I've been thinking how you and I will run that factory together. It's all stuff about your going away; why should you? You and your father take me as junior partner, you know I'm not big enough for anything else."

"You're man's size," Lestrange assured, a hand on his shoulder. "But—it won't do. I'll not forget the offer, though, never."

"All on!" a dozen voices signaled; men scattered in every direction as Lestrange sprang to his place.

The hours passed on the wheels of excitement and suspense. When Lestrange came in again, only a watch convinced Dick that it was midnight.

"You gave the order?" Lestrange asked.

"Yes."

He descended, taking off his mask and showing a face white with fatigue under the streaks of dust and grime.

"I'll be all right in half an hour," he nodded, in answer to Dick's exclamation. "Send one of the boys for coffee, will you, please? Rupert needs some, too. Here, one of you others, ask one of those idle doctor's apprentices to come over with a fresh bandage; my arm's a trifle untidy."

In fact, his right sleeve was wet and red, where the strain of driving had reopened the injury of the day before. But he would not allow Dick to speak of it.

"I'm going to spend an hour or two resting. Come in, Ffrench, and we'll chat in the intervals, if you like."

"And Rupert? Where's he?" Dick wondered, peering into the dark with a vague impression of lurking dangers on every side.

"He's hurried in out of the night air," reassured familiar accents; a small figure lounged across into the light, making vigorous use of a drinking towel. "Tell Darling I feel faint

HEIR TO $6,000,000 ESTATE

Illinois Man's Aged Aunt Dies in England, Leaving Extensive Property.

Joliet, Ill., May 20.—Frank A. Jackson, a carpenter contractor of this city, received word in a letter that he was the sole heir to the estate of Mrs. Mary Jackson, of Pelbington, Yorkshire, England, containing [illegible] acres and valued at $6,000,000.

The woman, who was his aunt, died April 3, according to the information he has received. Jackson succeeds to the estate by the old English law of estate entail. He was the oldest son of a brother of his aunt's husband. His aunt, who had been a widow for ten years, was 103 years old, and had no children.

Jackson at once retained an attorney to prove his identity, which is the only step necessary to come into possession of the heritage.

GIRL PICKETS IN JAIL

Strikers Gather About Place and Sing Hymns.

Organizer for International Garment Workers and Seven Other Girls Are Locked Up.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 21.—Eight girls, including Miss Josephine Casey, organizer for the International Garment Workers' union, and four men, are in jail here serving from ten to twenty days for violating an injunction issued by Judge Knappen against picketing in the corset workers' strike. Judge Knappen gave no options of fines, declaring that all those sentenced must serve time.

One of the most unique demonstrations of its kind followed the sentencing of the strikers when nearly 200 strikers formed a line around the jail, sang hymns and prayed on their knees for those in jail.

The members of all the unions in the city will meet for the purpose of considering a general strike.

IN MEMORY OF DEAD

"The Grand Army of the Dead continues to grow. The Grand Army of the Living is in the aftermath. The evening shadows of life are falling about them. They are as brave in confronting the great enemy of mankind that has never been vanquished as they were on the battlefields that saved the nation. Love, reverence and patriotism demand that we obey our more than willing hearts and consecrate to their memory May 30, when flowers by land and sea will be testimonials of a grateful people.

"Therefore, I, Chase S. Osborn, governor of the commonwealth of Michigan, do issue this proclamation and earnestly urge the observation of Thursday, May 30, 1912, as Decoration and Memorial Day."

SIX DIE IN AUTO PLUNGE

Machine Goes Into the Calumet River in South Chicago.

Four women and two men took a flying plunge to death at 2 o'clock in the morning when their machine went into the Calumet river off the Ninety-second street bridge, South Chicago, as they were speeding along at terrific speed.

Only one of the bodies, that of a young woman twenty-five years old, fashionably dressed and wearing many jewels, has been recovered, but not yet identified.

The machine turned over as it sped out into space, taking its occupants to death in twenty-one feet of water.

It is known that three of the victims were John Buchannan, the chauffuer, and Anne and Florence Mahoney, aged nineteen and twenty-one, daughters of a Chicago policeman.

LORIMER REPORT IN

Majority and Minority Are Submitted to the Senate.

Majority and minority reports of the committee which investigated the election in the Illinois legislature of William Lorimer were presented to the senate.

The majority report, so long delayed, upholds the senator, while the minority report declares his election invalid and charges that it was compassed by bribery and corruption of which the senator was cognizant.

No date for a vote has been fixed, but it is believed the debate on the two reports will consume a week or more. The Lorimer question has been thoroughly thrashed out on the floor and it is expected a vote will be taken

BUNGALOW CRIME SOLVED BY DEATH

C. C. Dillon Was Murderer of Bessie Jones in Los Angeles.

A most complete solution to the mystery of the Los Angeles bungalow murder case followed on each other's heels with the finding of the mangled body of Calthias C. Dillon on the tracks of the Northwestern railroad near Wilmette, Ill.

The slayer of the young woman—learned to be Miss Bessie Jones, formerly of Richmond, Va.—either met his death through the revengeful guidance of fate or else he was driven to suicide through the lashings of a stricken conscience.

The famous murder mystery became completely solved, when the wife of Dillon, who has been living at 5420 Evanston avenue, told the story of his inconstancy to her.

The murdered girl come to Chicago more than a year ago from Norfolk, Va. Her home there was at 1876 Chesterfield avenue. Shortly after she reached Chicago she met Dillon. He persuaded Miss Jones to leave her room and go with him to apartments that he had obtained with Mrs. Emma McCue, 4621 Evanston avenue. Dillon left his wife and took the woman to these apartments, where they lived under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jones.

When Miss Jones left Chicago several months ago to visit her parents in Norfolk, Dillon went back to his family and asked Mrs. Dillon to forgive his unfaithfulness. That this request was not intended as serious was proved by the fact that Dillon and Miss Jones kept up a close correspondence.

The girl returned to Chicago probably a little more than two weeks ago and immediately left again with Dillon. That the pair went first to Denver was proved by a postcard received from there by Mrs. Dillon.

A second card came to Chicago from Dillon two days later. This was sent from Los Angeles and was addressed to his former employer.

The couple could only have been together in Los Angeles for a few days. Just what was the cause of the murder and its previous quarrel probably never will be learned. It is known that Dillon was of an excitable temperament and that he naturally was inconstant in his love affairs.

The police theory is that he suddenly became tired of Miss Jones and told her so.

Another theory that has been advanced refers to the fact that the girl was shortly to have become a mother. The natural complications that this event would have produced, it is thought by the police, led to a discussion that grew into a furious quarrel between the man and woman.

The mysterious element of the sodality pins found on the body of the victim was explained when it was learned that, while Miss Jones, herself, was not a Catholic, Dillon was a member of this faith.

So fanatical and enthusiastic was his faithfulness to the religion that he insisted that Miss Jones provide herself with the sodality badges. These Dillon procured for her.

SHERIFF TESTIFIES IN POISONING CASE

The Most Damaging Yet Given Against Dr. McGregor.

Witness Says Physician Told Him He Knew They Would Fine Poison If They Took Up the Bodies of the Sparlings.

Bad Axe, Mich., May 20.—The prosecution in the trial of Dr. Robert MacGregor, charged with killing Cyril Sparling by arsenic poison, sprung their star witness in Sheriff McAuley. Although the sheriff's testimony was the same as given at the justice court examination, it was by far the most damaging yet given against the accused physician.

The sheriff related a number of alleged interviews with the defendant. Dr. MacGregor is alleged to have told the sheriff he knew they would find poison, if they took up the Sparling bodies, and "that he knew a fellow" who could tell who gave it to them. He is also alleged to have stated "that he knew a fellow" who could make Mrs. Sparling confess. The sheriff stated he pressed the doctor for the name and the latter is alleged to have replied: "I would have to look in the looking glass to see him."

Sheriff McAuley said that the doctor had on one occasion declared that the surviving children in the Sparling family had left the table because that bread with green specks might contain arsenic, Mrs. Sparling at that time attributing the coloring to sage in the flour. The physician, according to the sheriff, said that he had thrown away a goose, presented to him by Mrs. Sparling, because of fear that it might contain the poison. That the doctor had expressed concern on one occasion because of the testimony of the nurse, was one of the statements of the witness.

Drs. Vaughn and Warthin, of the University of Michigan, declared they found poison in the body of Albert Sparling, a brother of Cyril, and in answer to a hypothethical question both stated they believed Albert Sparling died of arsenic poisoning.

MAD DOG BITES TWO

Also Nips Several Other Dogs and Kills Many Chickens.

Bay City, Mich., May 21.—John Valencourt and his son John, a young boy, living on a farm a mile and a half from Auburn, near here, will probably go to the Pasteur hospital in Ann Arbor to take treatment for injuries received when they were bitten by their dog.

The dog, a great pet with the family and remarkably gentle, was noticed to be sick and the son wanted to kill him then, but the father thought it advisable to wait. The next morning the two went to the barn to give the dog some medicine when it bit each of them in the hand. The man's right hand was badly lacerated and two of the dog's teeth made a hole completely through the boy's hand.

The dog started on a path of destruction and ruin. After chasing horses in a nearby field for some time the dog ran to the farm of Paul Bell where he bit several chickens and a bulldog, all of which had to be killed. Bell shot at him and hit him, but the shot was not fatal. From there the maddened canine went to Ack Reese's farm, where he also bit a dog and killed several chickens.

JACKSON—Lying completely unconscious on the floor of her apartments on East Main street, Mrs. Elizabeth Doucher was found by the police. She had not been seen since Sunday and an examination disclosed the fact that she had suffered a paralytic stroke. Her condition is serious.

KING OF DENMARK DIES IN THE STREET

Drops Dead Near the Goose Market in Hamburg.

Monarch Was Traveling Incognito and Was on the Way Home from the South, Where He Had Been Convalescing.

While in Hamburg, Germany, King Frederick VIII., of Denmark, died, unaccompanied and unidentified, in a street near the goose market. Apoplexy caused his death. He was taken to Sailors' hospital, where it was found that life was extinct.

The king, traveling incognito, arrived on his return from a long trip to the south, where he had been convalescing from a serious attack of inflammation of the lungs. With the queen and the royal suite, he took quarters at the Hamburgerhof hotel.

The king left the hotel unaccompanied for his usual stroll before retiring. He had gone only a short distance when he was overcome on the street by a sudden attack of apoplexy.

Passersby ran to the spot to assist him but he was already dead.

A policeman was called, who had the body conveyed in an automobile to the Sailors' hospital. The physicians on duty on examination found that death had been instantaneous.

There was nothing on the body which afforded a clew to its identification, and it was placed in the mortuary of the hospital.

When members of the king's suite became alarmed over his failure to return to the hotel after a reasonable time, they called in the proprietor and a search was begun. The searchers found his majesty dead at the hospital.

At Copenhagen, Den., Christian X. was proclaimed king of Denmark from the balcony of the palace at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in the presence of a large concourse of people.

KING CHRISTIAN.

Frederick VIII., the eldest son of King Christian IX., was born at Copenhagen on June 3, 1843. When he was crown prince he took part in the war against Austria and Prussia. Subsequently he assisted his father in the government. He became king on Christian's death in January, 1906.

King Frederick was married in 1869 to Louise, a daughter of Charles XV., King of Sweden. They had four sons and four daughters. The Crown Prince Christian who has now become King Christian IX., was born in 1870. He was married in 1898 to Alexandria, the daughter of Frederick Francis III., grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. King Frederick's second son, Charles, married his cousin, Maud, the daughter of Edward VII. of Great Britain, and became King of Norway as Haakon VII., in 1905.

A strange thing was that Haakon became king a year before his father. Haakon was selected king of Norway in 1905 while his father did not become king of Denmark until 1906.

METHODISTS TO KEEP ON LID

Refuse to Lift the Ban on Card Playing and Dancing.

At Minneapolis, Minn., by a very close vote the Methodist Episcopal church, through the action of the general conference, refused to lift the ban on card playing, theater-going, dancing and like amusements.

The vote was taken by roll call and followed three hours of excitement and turmoil. A score of speeches were made both for and against the adoption of the minority report which favored the repeal of the article in the discipline forbidding worldly amusements. By an ayen and nay vote 446, as against 369, the general conference voted to retain paragraph 260 in the discipline.

MICHIGAN

James Thetio, Iron River, finds Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a family medicine that helped all the family, so he always keeps it on hand. "Both my children and I were troubled with bad coughs and we used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It certainly cured us and I recommend it as a good cough and cold cure."

D. W. Hiller, 801 E, Court St., Flint had a severe attack of kidney trouble and says: "There was a constant feeling of distress with painful kidney action. Foley Kidney Pills cured me completely, dispelling all kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness disappeared and I slept soundly again. I heartily endorse Foley Kidney Pills. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Speak not of your enemies, but be sure to speak to your enemies when you meet them.

Escapes an Awful Fate

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery, But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely cough at all now,', Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung trouble. Every bottle guaranteed, 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son.

Flattery is one kind of falsehood some people are always ready to accept as truth.

Mrs. Ida Decker, 74 Carlyle St., Battle Creek, had all the painful symptoms of severe kidney trouble. Her kidneys were congested, eyesight blurred, slept poorly, was nervous, tired out, and all run down. After taking Foley's Kidney Pills she say: "The sick headaches came no more, I slept soundly, was free from dizziness, and my kidneys and bladder stopped bothering me. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and freed me of much misery." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

There are people who are so busy having a good time that trouble can't touch them.

The Demons of the Swamp

are mosquitos. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails: also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the maleria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Alex Destinon. 90 Lake St., Muskegon, desires other people to benefit by the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I wish to state that I have used Foley Kidney Pills and received more benefit from them than anything I have ever used before. I had a bad case of kidney trouble and I wish to thank you for the help Foley Kidney Pills have given me." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Resolved, that the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the north line of Chicago street in this village which lies along and adjoining the south line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County and State of Michigan, and described as follows:

Lot 7 and E ½ Lot 6 South 2 rods lot 2 & east ½ lot 3, Block 5, Hoags addition.

Said walk to be 4 feet in width, on the established grade, of Portland cement, sand gravel

The trench shall be excavated to a depth of 10 inches at least below the established grade except for driveways and street crossings when the depth shall be at least 12 inches below the established grade.

The foundation shall consist of clean cinders or gravel entirely free from clay, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of at least of 6 inches, except for driveways and street crossings which shall be at least 8 inches.

On the foundation shall be laid a concrete filling, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of 3 inches

The concrete shall consist of not less than one part cement to six parts of clean, sharp sand or gravel.

On the concrete filling shall be laid a finishing layer one inch thick, consisting of one part cement and two parts of very clean, sharp sand. The said finishing layer shall in all cases be finished with a granular surface with a wooden float.

To secure a true line for the edges of the walk 2x4 strips shall be solidly staked down parallel to grade and on the true line of the walk, these strips to be removed when the walk is finished for use

The concrete filling shall be tamped thoroughly till the water comes to the surface, then the finishing layer shall be immediately spread on in thin coats thoroughly rammed into the concrete, each coat being trowled until the water appears on the surface, the top surface being only trowled sufficiently to leave it smooth. The foundation shall be thoroughly wet while being rammed.

The joints for the blocks shall be made in the concrete and then in the finishing layer directly above those in concrete.

Only Portland cement shall be used in the construction of walks and shall be in every respect the equal of the best grades of German Portland cement. The concrete filling shall be made from the same cement as the finishing layer.

And the owners and occupants of said lots and premises are hereby required to do the necessary grading therefore and to construct said sidewalk according to the provision of this resolution, under the supervision of the street commissioner, said walk to be completed within 10 days from personal service, upon the owner or occupant of said described land, or a copy of this resolution, and in case of any default in the construction and completion of said walk, as herein directed. The street commissioner is here by ordered to have said walk constructed payment therefor shall be required of the owner of said above described land, and the expense there of assessed and levied upon said land in the same manner as other taxes.

Moved and supported that the resolution be accepted and adopted. Ayes Elliott, Service, Look, Fisher, Gillespie, Daisher. Nays none.

Motion carried,

Moved and supported that the water main be extended south on Adrian street from Killbuck to Cummins streets. Motion carried.

Moved supported that the street committee consult the Village Attorney and prepare a resolution to present at the next regular meeting of the council relative to the paving of the public alley between Evans street and Ottawa street north of Chicago street. Motion Carried.

The President recommended the appointment of C. A. Wright and G. B. Garlinghouse as Members of Board of Review.

Moved and supported that the recommendation of the president qe accepted. Motion Carried.

GRAND RAPIDS—Brutally beating his wife insensible with a broken beer mug and fracturing her skull, then inflicting what may prove to be fatal injuries on the head of Claude Janiski, Gedro Tamaszaitis was arrested charged with attempted murder. Both men are common laborers. The prisoner admits he returned home for dinner and found Janiski in his home with his wife. In rage he seized the mug and began the assault. Both wife and the visitor are in a local hospital. Physicians say they cannot live.

GRAND RAPIDS—Mrs. Mary Spencer, Michigan state librarian at Lansing, addressed the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce on the need of fire-proof quarters for the valuable contents of the state library She urged that local influence be brought to bear on the members of the legislature.

Quality makes the price

If you have never had good canned peaches it may be your fault. You may not have been willing to pay what good peaches are worth.

Choice Fruit has a market value. The best costs more than the rest—either in baskets or in cans. To get what he wants the canner must pay the market price. Canned peaches are just what the canner makes them.

CHEF Peaches are selected California Crawfords ripened on trees and cooked in heavy syrup. This fruit is in perfect condition and perfectly ripe—picked and packed the same day.

Obituary

Richard Harkness

The Oldest Minister In Michigan Of The Society Of Friends

ONE OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE VALLEY SEMINARY

Died May 20,1912

Rev. Richard Harkness passed away at seven o'clock Monday evening, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Vincent Wood, with whom he and his wife have made their home for a number of years. April 20, they celebrated the 69th anniversary of their wedding day While growing more feeble from day to day, it was his great ambition to celebrate this event, he became worse the next day and failed rapidly until death came to his relief.

He was one of a committee of twelve in 1950, to secure funds for the foundation of Raisin Valley Seminary, and was the last one of the committee surviving many of the educators and students, who had been connected with the institution. Mr. Harkness was Superintendent of this school from 1854 to 1856, and was a member of the board for a number of years. Mrs. Harkness serving as matron, and the daughter, Mrs. Wood was a teacher in the same school for a long time.

Mr. Harkness was born in Peru, N. Y., August 21, 1820, making him nearly 92 years old. As a minister he has been a familiar figure to every one in Raisin Valley and has had a wide acquaintance which time only has made less, with the many changes that come with the weight of years. Many are left who will hold his memory dear, for the help and kindness he has given them, in their struggle to reach the light.

His faithful wife and daughter, Mrs. Wood survive him. The funeral services were held at the home at one o'clock Thursday afternoon, and at the Raisin Valley Church of the Friends at three o'clock, Rev. Howard Moore of Ypsilanti officiating, assisted by Rev. Jacob Baker of Raisin Center.

MRS. TRUMAN MCKINNY

Everyone was shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. McKinney in Detroit Wednesday morning. A week ago Monday Monday she underwent an operation and to all appearances was doing nicely. Wednesday morning while about to partake of her break fast she sank back in her husband's arms and her spirit had departed.

Vesta Freeman McKinny was born in Tecumseh and attended our high school, She married a Tecumseh boy Truman McKinny and has a host of friends here to grieve over her early demise. There are two sons and her husband in the immediate family. A sister Mrs. Will Kies of Elkhart, and a brother John J Freeman of Tecumseh.

MRS. F. J. HILLMAN

Mrs. F. J. Hillman, aged 77 years, for many years a resident of Tecumseh, died at her home Wednesday morning at 5 o'clock. Her death was not unexpected, as she has been in failing health for a number of years. She had just returned from Washington D. C three weeks ago, where she had been for nearly two years with her son Fred. She was homesick for the old place, and her wishes were granted, Fred coming with her at that time.

For years she was an active member in the Monday Club. She was an unusually well read woman, and well informed on the current literature of the day, taking a deep interest in all scientific questions, her conversation always sparkled with wit, and not withstanding the heavy burdens that had been put upon her during life, they never seemed to affect her cheery spirit,

She is survived by the one son Fred Hillman of Washington D. C. The funeral service was held at the house this afternoon tt 2 o'clock, Rev. B. R. Weld officiating, with burial at Brookside.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Petersburg has a few wants to add to the beauty and prosperity of the town.

Paved village streets; several miles of stone roads leading out of the township; the location of a few industries that will furnish labor and provide larger markets for their farm produce; also a good Booster's Club—Petersburg Sun.

Manchester asks for just one six year term for the president, and then all the nonsense will be cut out.

At the Council meeting last week, President Lonier recommended that they build a Womans' Retiring Room on the east side of the Lewis Building.—Manchester Enterprize.

Following in the footsteps of Tecumseh, Hastings will unveil a Boulder at the Pioneer meeting to be held there June 13. This boulder will mark the spot where the first house was built in Hastings by Slocum H. Butler, under the auspices of the D. A. R of the City.

What's in a name? The "Board of Trade" of Hastings, that in former times secured so many factories, but has been dead, for, lo, these many years, is trying to be revived under the name of the Comercial Club to boost Hastings.

How about the Business Men's Club of Tecumseh?

The contract for paving in Hudson was let last week, to cost thirty-one thousand dollars, work to begin June 1st, and to be completed in a hundred days.—Hudson Post.

The township of Dundee, Monroe County Michigan, have up for special election, the bonding of the township for $44000 to be paid in twenty years. This amount to be used to build stone roads in said township of Dundee.—Dundee Reporter.

The Councilmen of Blissfield are nothing if not gallant. The thought of the femine portion of the community going about town with their clothing unironed, appealed to their hearts and when the Bonnie Blissfield matrons appeared before the Council with their petition asking that the electric lights be turned on three days during the week so that they might do their ironing they very kindly granted them Tuesday and Wednesday for their work.

The Brooklyn Hotel which has been closed for two years opened last week. They make a specialty of Sunday dinners.

The Chelsea Standard last week gave a list of the stockholders of the two State Banks in their village. The Farmers' and Merchant' Bank had 56 stockholders, of which fifty-one were Chelsealtes. The Kempf-Commercial Bank had nineteen, thirteen of whom belong to Chelsea. Evidently the citizens of Chelsea believe in controlling the money of the town.

RAILROAD IS FINED

Chicago, Kalamazoo and Saginaw Line Falsified Shipping Records.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 18.—Changing its plea of not guilty to one of guilty, the Chicago, Kalamazoo and Saginaw Railroad company was fined $1,000 in the United States district court for falsifying shipping records on merchandise from points near Kalamazoo.

The goods were billed as from Kalamazoo, allowing the railroad a share of the through rates, whereas, if correctly billed, switching charges only could have been collected. The fine was paid.

CANOE UPSETS; BOY DROWNS

Battle Creek Student Loses Life in Goguac Lake

Battle Creek, Mich., May 17.—Battle Creek's first drowning of this season occurred at Goguac Lake. Howard Wood, eighteen-year-old son of Mrs. W. T. Wood, and a student of the local high school was the victim.

Wood, with Roy Lapham was canoeing off Elk's Island. They became careless and the canoe was capsized. Lapham swam ashore, while Wood, unable to swim, sank. Nearby fishermen reached him in time to grab his clothing, but lost the hold.

STANDISH—Charley Colby, aged thirteen years, was instantly killed when a wagon loaded with stone ran over him. The boy was drawing stone for David Osborn of Maple Ridge. He had just completed his load and walked out on the wagon tongue to pick up a rein. As he did so the team started and he lost his balance and fell under the wheels.

This is the way the farmers appreciate the latest pattern of these DAIRYMAID SEPARATORS, they are much cheaper than they used to be. Ask for one to be out on trial.

"We are milking three cows, and were using a water separator, that is, water around the cream. As soon as I got the Dairymaid, we readily saw that our increase of butter was one pound a day. If anyone had told me of this before I got this separator, I would not have beleived it, but it is an obsolute fact. As far as the separators running is concerned, I would say that it runs very easy and is perfectly satisfactory in every respect."

Will S. Baum, Editor of the Adrian Times made the Herald a very pleasant call Tuesday afternoon. Since he assumed the ownership and control of the Times, it has steadily improved and is fast regaining the prestige of former years. One of the strongest features under Mr. Baum, is the market report, this of course appeals to the farmer. His Editorial column is strongly written only he seems greatly inclined to flatter Adrian—Adrian is all right, but naturally we feel like saying, "Oh! you Tecumseh."

TO BREAK UP COLD

Some Advice That Will Save Time and Money

Strong drink and quinine may relieve a cold, but it usually does more harm than good.

To break up a cold in either head or chest thousands are using this sensible treatment.

First of all look after your bowels; if they need attention use any reliable cathartic. Then pour a scant teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl of boiling water, cover head and bowl with a towel and breathe for 5 or 10 minutes the pleasant, soothing, healing vapor.

Do this just before going to bed your head will feel fine and clear and you'll awake from a refreshing sleep minus a cold in the morning.

For colds, coughs catarrh, asthma and croup HYOMEI is guaranteed, A fifty cent bottle is all you need to break up a cold and this can be obtained at C. A. Wright & Son's and druggists everywhere.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

What Texans Admire

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amou claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D, 1912.

ANN ARBOR—The immense ten-ton steel truss, which has just been hoisted to place in the new Hill Memorial building, fell, destroying about $2,000 worth of construction work on the building. The truss was hoisted by means of a giant hook, and without warning the hook snapped, letting the great truss fall. No one was injured.

BAY CITY—James W. Conaty, the aged father of Louis Conaty, who was burned to death in a fire at the farm home, is in a critical condition from his injuries received at the same time, and there is doubt of his recovery. In the ruins of the house were found the bones of Louis Conaty and the Polish hired man who also perished.

HOLLAND—A total of sixteen truckers, comprising the entire force in the Pere Marquette freight house, walked out in response to an order from union headquarters in Chicago. The men presented no grievances, but simply struck out of sympathy. They were receiving $1.75 per day. An effort is being made to fill their places

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. A Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

RICHESON AND VICTIM

RICHESON ELECTROCUTED

Slayer of Avis Linnell Meets Death with Composure.

Clarence V. T. Richeson, murderer of Miss Avis Linnell, and a former Baptist clergyman, was put to death by electricity in the state prison at Charlestown, Mass.

At 12:10:02 a. m. the electrician threw a lever that sent a powerful current of electricity through the condemned man's body as he sat strapped in the chair. The first shock caused instant death and, after an examination by the physician in attendance, Richeson was pronounced legally dead at 12:17 a. m.

Richeson went to his death with composure, as he said he would.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

and I'm going over to that grand-stand cafe a la car to get some pie. I'll be back in time to read over my last lesson from the chauffeur's correspondence school. Oh, see what's here!"

A telegraph messenger boy had come up to Dick.

"Richard Ffrench?" he verified. "Sign, please."

The message was from New York.

Far from pleased, young Ffrench hurriedly wrote the desired answer and gave it to the boy to be sent. But he thrust the yellow envelope into his pocket before turning to the tent where Lestrange was drinking cheap black coffee while an impatient young surgeon hovered near.

The hour's rest was characteristically spent. Washed, bandaged, and refreshed, Lestrange dropped on a cot in the back of the tent and pushed a roll of motor garments beneath his head for a pillow. There he intermittently spoke to his companion of whatever the moment suggested; listening to every sound of the race and interspersing acute comment, starting up whenever the voice of his own machine hinted that the driver was disobeying instructions or the shrill klaxon gave warning of trouble. But through it all Dick gathered much of the family story.

"My mother was a Californian," Lestrange once said, coming back from a tour of inspection. "She was twenty times as much alive as any Ffrench that ever existed, I've been told. I fancy she passed that quality on to me—you know she died when I was born—for I nearly drove the family mad. They expected the worst of me, and I gave the best worst I had. But," he turned to Dick the clear candor of his smile, "it was rather a decent worst, I honestly believe. The most outrageous thing I ever did was to lead a set of seniors in hoisting a cow into the dean's library one night, and so get myself expelled from college."

"A cow?" the other echoed.

"A fat cow, and it mooed," he stuffed the pillow into a more comfortable position. "Is that our car running in? No, it's just passing. If Frank doesn't wreck my machine, I'll get this race. And then, the same week, my chum and roommate ran away with a Doraflora girl of some variety show and married her. I was romantic myself at twenty-one, so I helped him through with it. He was wealthy and she was pretty; it seemed to fit. I believe they've stayed married ever since, by the way. But somehow the reporters got affairs mixed and published me as the bridegroom. Have you got a cigar? I smoke about three times a year, and this is one of them. Yes, there was a fine scene when I went home that night, a Broadway melodrama. I lost my temper easier then; by the time my father and uncle gave me time to speak, I was too angry to defend myself and set them right. I supposed they would learn the truth by the next day, anyhow. And I left home for good in a dinner coat and raglan with something under ten dollars in odd change. What's that!"

"That," was the harsh alarm of the official klaxon, coupled with the cry of countless voices. The ambulance gong clanged as Lestrange sprang to his feet and reached the door.

"Which car?" he called.

Rupert answered first:

"Not ours. Number eight's burning up after a smash on the far turn."

"Jack's car," identified Lestrange, and stood for an instant. "Go flag Frank; I'll take the machine again myself. It's one o'clock, and I've got to win this race."

Several men ran across to the track in compliance. Lestrange turned to make ready, but paused beside the awed Dick to look over the infield toward the flaming blotch against the dark sky.

"He was in to change a tire ten minutes ago," observed Rupert, beside them. "'Tell Lestrange I'm doin' time catchin' him,' he yelled to me. Here's hoping his broncho machine pitched him clear from the fireworks."

"I'm engaged to Emily," he said, gravely. "I don't know what she will hear of me, if anything happens, I've told you the truth. I'm old enough to see it now. And I tried to square things."

CHAPTER IX.

"We're here," said Bailey, to his traveling companions. "You can't park the car in front by the fence; Mr. David might see you and kill himself by a misturn. Come up to the grand-stand seats."

Mr. Ffrench got out in silence and assisted Emily to decend; a pale and wide-eyed Emily behind her veil.

"The boys were calling extras," she suggested faintly. "They said three accidents on the track."

Bailey turned to a blue and gold official passing.

"Number seven all right?" he asked.

"On the track, Lestrange driving," was the prompt response. "Leading by thirty-two miles."

A little of Emily's color rushed back. Satisfied, Bailey lead their way to the tiers of seats, almost empty at this hour. Pearly, unsubstantial in the young light, lay the huge oval meadow and the track edging it.

"I've sent over for Mr. Dick," Bailey informed the other two. "He's been here, and he can tell what's doing. Four cars are out of the race. There's Mr. David coming!"

A gray machine shot around the west curve, hurtled roaring down the straight stretch past the stand and crossed before them, the mechanician rising in his seat to catch the pendant linen streamers and wipe the dust from the driver's goggles in preparation for the "death turn" ahead. There was a series of rapid explosions as the driver shut off his motor, the machine swerved almost facing the infield fence and slid around the bend with a skidding lurch that threw a cloud of soil high in the air. Emily cried out. Mr. Ffrench half rose in his place.

"What's the matter?" dryly queried Bailey. "He's been doing that all night; and a pretty turn he makes, too. He's been doing it for about five years, in fact, earning his living, only we didn't see him. Here goes another."

Mr. Ffrench put on his pince-nez, preserving the dignity of outward composure. Emily saw and heard nothing; she was following Lestrange around the far sides of the course, around until again he flashed past her, repeating his former feat with appalling exactitude.

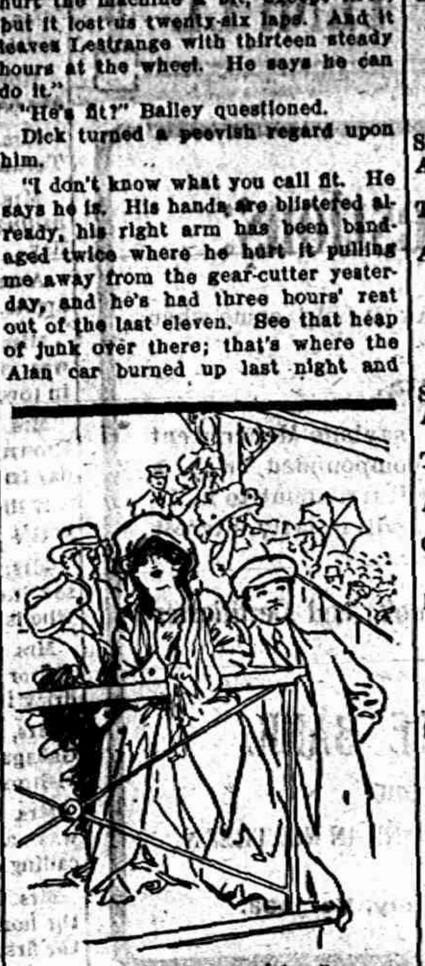
It was hardly more than five minutes before Dick came hurrying toward them, cross, tired, dust-streaked and gasolene-scented.

"I don't see why you wanted to come," he began before he reached them. "I'm busy enough now. We're leading; if Lestrange holds out we'll win. But he's driving alone; Frank went out an hour ago, on the second relief, when he went through the paddock fence and broke his leg. It didn't hurt the machine a bit, except tires, but it lost us twenty-six laps. And it leaves Lestrange with thirteen steady hours at the wheel. He says he can do it."

"He's fit?" Bailey questioned.

Dick turned a peevish regard upon him.

"I don't know what you call fit. He says he is. His hands are blistered already, his right arm has been bandaged twice where he hurt it pulling me away from the gear-cutter yesterday, and he's had three hours' rest out of the last eleven. See that heap of junk over there; that's where the Alan car burned up last night and sent its driver and mechanician to the hospital. I suppose if Lestrange isn't fit and makes a miscue we'll see something like that happen to him and Rupert."



"Here Goes Another."

"No!" Emily cried piteously.

Remorse clutched Dick.

"I forgot you, cousin," he apologized. "Don't go off; Lestrange swears he feels fine and gibes at me for worrying. Don't look like that."

"Richard, you will go down and order our car withdrawn from the race," Mr. Ffrench stated, with his most absolute finality. "This has continued long enough. If we had not been arrested in New York for exceeding the speed limit, I should have been here to end this scene at midnight."

Stunned, his nephew stared at him.

"Withdraw!"

"Precisely. And desire David to come here."

"I won't," said Dick flatly. "If you want to rub it into Lestrange that way, send Bailey. And I say it's a confounded shame."

"Richard!"

His round face ablaze, Dick thrust his hands in his pockets, facing his uncle stubbornly.

"After his splendid fight, to stop him now? Do you know how they take being put out, those fellows? Why, when the Italian car went off the track for good, last night, with its chain tangled up with everything underneath, its driver sat down and cried. And you'd come down on Lestrange when he's winning— I won't do it, I won't! Send Bailey; I can't tell him."

"If you want to discredit the car and its driver, Mr. Ffrench, you can do it without me," slowly added Bailey. "But it won't be any use to send for Mr. David, because he won't come."

The autocrat of his little world looked from one rebel to the other, confounded with the unprecedented.

"If I wish to withdraw him, it is to place him out of danger," he retorted with asperity. "Not because I wish to mortify him, naturally. Is that clear? Does he want to pass the next thirteen hours under this ordeal?"

"I'll tell you what he wants," answered Dick. "He wants to be let alone. It seems to me he's earned that."

Ethan Ffrench opened his lips and closed them again without speech. It had not been his life's habit to let people alone and the art was acquired with difficulty.

"I admit I do not comprehend the feelings you describe," he conceded, at last. "But there is one person who has the right to decide whether David shall continue this risk of his life. Emily, do you wish the car withdrawn?"

There was a gasp from the other two men.

"I!" the young girl exclaimed, amazed. "I can call him here—safe—"

Her voice died out as Lestrange's car roared past, overtaking two rivals on the turn and sliding between them with an audacity that provoked rounds of applause from the spectators. To call him in from that, to have him safe with her—the mere thought was a delight that caught her breath. Yet, she knew Lestrange.

The three men watched her in keen suspense. The Mercury car had passed twice again before she raised her head, and in that space of a hundred seconds Emily reached the final unselfishness.

"What David wants," she said. "Uncle, what David wants."

She looked at him with eyes he never forgot.

"If anything happens to him, I hope I die too," she answered, and drew the silk veil across her face.

"Go back, Mr. Dick, you're no good

Sold Wife to Friend.

At the village of Utznach, Switzerland, the other day, a curious sale took place. With her own consent a woman was sold by her husband to another man, an Italian, and a friend of the Swiss couple. The price asked by the affectionate husband was four dollars. To further "legalize" the bargain, the Italian procured two witnesses to the transaction and had a contract written on stamped government paper.

FLEET OFF FOR HAMPTON ROADS

Four Battleships and Cruiser Leave New York.

New York, May 27.—Responding to rush orders from Washington to proceed forthwith to southern waters Rear Armiral Hugo Osterhaus, arriving with the cruiser Washington off Tompkinsville, almost immediately raised anchor and steamed for Hampton roads.

As the flagship was preparing again to put to sea tugs arrived from the Brooklyn navy yard with marines gathered from all nearby posts and set them aboard the battleships Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio and Minnesota.

At 2:25 p. m. the big fighting ships had left quarantine behind and less than an hour later were going full speed past Sandy Hook. It is understood here that other ships of the line will join them at Hampton roads and proceed to Key West, where there will be a mobilization with other ships already in Cuban waters.

The officers who are in command them have been drawn from every post along the coast from Fort Royal, S. C., to Portsmouth, N. H. Every available marine has been taken and the men go prepared for field duty.

Word reached the Brooklyn navy yard at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon to prepare to embark marines. The marines had been ordered to report in heavy marching order and when they lined up on the parade ground every man had a Burnett-Mercedes rapid-fire rifle with him. These rifles are of the newest type used by the marines, and will discharge 400 shots a minute.

CUBAN NEWSPAPERS RAVE

Resent Action of United States In Sending Warships There.

Havana, May 27. — The dispatch of warships and marines to Cuba, especially the sending of a gunboat to Nipe Bay to protect the huge American interests there, has greatly angered some of the Cuban newspapers, which highly praise the letter of President Gomez to President Taft, protesting against this action and declaring that Cuba was able to cope with the situation and that he would be able to put down the revolt within ten days.

General Estenoz, the negro rebel leader, has issued a manifesto proclaiming himself president and General Ivonet commander-in-chief. He has adopted the tactics of the late General Maximo Gomez by threatening to burn the sugar mills unless the owners pay large sums of money within seventy-two hours.

The negroes burned the barracks of the rural guards at Magrisillos, a village near Santiago. The governor of Santiago province telegraphs the government to the effect that he has received advices from the mayor of Guantanamo stating that Commandant Brooks of the American naval station there had called and asked him about the situation and if the government was able to protect life and property. The governor urged the federal authorities to protect American property in Cuban territory.

Reports from Santiago say that at 10 o'clock Sunday morning the federals were about to attack General Ivonet's entrenched position in the hills of Ramon De La Sayaguas in the Guantanamo district. General Ivonet has 1,500 men woh are said to be well armed and supplied with ammunition.

RIDDLES COUPLE WITH 17 BULLETS

OLD GRUDGE CAUSES CRIME

San Diego, Cal., May 27. — An old grudge incited Bert G. Lewis to lie in wait for C. H. Tolliver and his wife and riddle them with bullets as they entered their home after an automobile trip. Lewis was formerly secretary for Tolliver and was familiar with his home and habits. He coaxed away the bulldog on guard and tied the dog up. Then when the Tollivers appeared he opened fire and shot seventeen times from an automatic revolver. Tolliver fell dead. Mrs. Tolliver had just strength enough to reach the telephone and call the police when she dropped and expired.

Lewis was found near by, greatly excited. He confessed the murder and declared it was due to the fact that the Tollivers had induced his wife to leave him.

Tolliver was well known in San Francisco, where he induced many people to invest in his airship stock. He built an enormous dirigible balloon with an aluminium frame and his wife helped him, stitching the silk. Just before the first trial a storm wrecked the balloon. Tolliver then went to San Diego, where he organized another company and built a second balloon, but this he never tested.

Lewis sued Tolliver for alienating his wife's affections, but lost the suit. Then Tolliver sued Lewis for borrowed money and won the case. It was anger over this that led to the murders.

BIG LABOR DEMONSTRATION

Trafalgar Square In London Sees Biggest Massmeeting.

London, May 27.—One of the biggest massmeetings ever held in London took place in Trafalgar square when the transport workers assembled to press their demands. Twenty-seven unions affiliated with the Transport Workers' Federation assembled in six contingents, which merged at the Mansion House and marched under police escort in a procession which was a mile long. On entering the square the marchers were cheered by a huge crowd which was in waiting.

Addresses were made to the strikers from three platforms. The speakers included President Gosling of the Transport Workers' Federation, Ben Tellett and others.

CHICAGO CHOIR IN PARIS

Paulist Choristers Sing High Mass In Notre Dame Cathedral.

Paris, May 27.—The Paulist choristers of St. Mary's church, Chicago, sang high mass at Notre Dame, and made a deep impression on the crowd which filled the cathedral. The party of 150 boys and men is in charge of Fathers Finn and O'Callahan.

After a week in Paris the choristers will go to Rome, Switzerland and Belgium. They will return to America at the end of June.

ALLEGED PLOT TO MURDER TAFT

Prisoner Declares Anarchists Have "Marked" President.

TWO MEN TO ASSASSINATE HIM

Pittsburgh, May 27.—A bold plot to assassinate President Taft was discovered when William Paorstorius, said to be a member of a prominent Hamburg, Germany, family, who was convicted on a charge of having sent a bomb to Alexander R. Peacock, a wealthy resident of this city, and attempting to extort $5,000, betrayed some of his anarchistic friends.

Paorstorius declared that the president is marked for death and that two men, one from Liverpool, England, and the other from Rome, Italy, have been commissioned to assassinate the chief executive within the next week or two.

Paorstorius is highly educated, having formerly been a student at the University of Heidelberg and the University of Budapest. He is an artist and an accomplished musician. He claims he was made a tool by the anarchists, who induced him to send the blackmail letter to Peacock and to send for the $5,000 which led to his capture.

According to the story he tells, the ire of the anarchists were raised by President Taft abrogating the Russian treaty. Paorstorius only returned from Europe some months ago, and while crossing the ocean he met a man named Carlow.

After reaching New York they separated. Paorstorius did not see him again until April, when he met him on the street here. Carlow disclosed to him the plot to take the life of the president. Carlow was to return to Europe and, according to the arrangements which had been made, he was to sail for this country from Liverpool, England, while the other members of the gang was to leave from Rome, both to meet in New York.

SENATOR LORIMER WILL NOT RESIGN

Vice President's Chicago Trip Made in Vain.

UNSEATING SEEMS INEVITABLE

Washington, May 27. — Vice President Sherman has returned to Washington, but declines absolutely to comment on the obect of his visit to Chicago or the result of it.

There appears to be no doubt in the minds of senators that the vice president's mission, which was to induce Senator Lorimer to resign, failed signally and that the case will have to be fought on the floor of the senate at an early day. That Senator Lorimer will be ousted is generally conceded, even by his friends in the senate.

Neither the vice president nor any senator familiar with the case would admit that he knew positively that Senator Lorimer has told the vice president that he would not resign, but information comes from Chicago that the senator from Illinois positively refused to act on the advice of the vice president when the latted called at Senator Lorimer's residence and urged the resignation of Lorimer.

SHERMAN'S FLYING VISIT

Chicagoans Speculate Over Vice President's Hurried Trip.

Chicago, May 27.—All Chicago, politicians, and private citizens alike, is still speculating upon the import of Vice President James S. Sherman's unannounced and rather clandestine visit to this city on Saturday.

The vice president was here six hours. During that time, so the papers say, he got the word to Senator William Lorimer that there will be a conclusive majority of votes against the junior senator in the United States senate when resolution to unseat him comes to a final vote. A poll of the senate on the question, as stated by the Associated Press and submitted to the senator's consideration, was:

Certain for Lorimer, 40; certain to oppose him, 39; doubtful, 16. There is one vacancy.

The attitude of the senators whose votes are classed as doubtful has given the friends of Senator Lorimer much concern, it is said. Although a week has gone by since the poll was made, the Lorimer supporters have not been able to add one name to their list. Those classed as doubtful have refused to give the Lorimer men any indications of their intentions.

Upon this showing the vice president, acting for the old line senate organization at Washington, and indirectly in behalf of the Taft-Sherman campaign for the renomination of the president and vice president, asked Senator Lorimer to resign forthwith.

Whether the vice president communicated this personally to Senator Lorimer or whether he transmitted the message through Elbridge Hanecy, Senator Lorimer's counsel, and William Lorimer, Jr., the senator's son—both of whom met him at the Englewood station of the Pennsylvania in the morning—is an unsettled question.

Precedent to all newspaper inquiries the vice president said:

"I shall neither affirm nor deny any question which may be asked of me," and he kept his word.

The vice president came into Chicago in company with Congressman James R. Mann of the Hyde Park district. Congressman Mann came to the gathering of the Republican leaders in his congressional district held at the Chicago Beach hotel, at which Governor Deneen was present.

Congressman Mann said he didn't know the vice president was aboard the train until after he had arisen in the morning. He said he merely walked along the Englewood platform with the vice president from the car. He asserted that in the conversation the vice president said he was coming on peronal business and that he—Congressman Mann—did not know that the trip had anything to do with the Lorimer matter until he had read it in the papers of the day.

The congressman further said he had not heard discussion of the Lorimer case in Washington and that he had not heard that Congressman William B. McKinley of Champaign, manager of the Taft presidential campaign, has been agreed upon as the successor of Senator Lorimer to be elected by the present special session of the legislature in the event that Senator Lorimer resigns or is deposed.

As for Mr. Hanecy and the younger Mr. Lorimer, they assert that they were at Englewood to meet Charles Ward, Senator Lorimer's confidential secretary, and that it was merely an incident that they greeted Vice President Sherman when he alighted from the Pennsylvania train. Mr. Ward did not arrive.

At 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon Vice President Sherman whisked into the Englewood station of the Pennsylvania over Sixty-Third street from the west. He boarded the fast train for Washington and was on his way.

FIND MANY DEAD REBELS

Mexican Federals Report 800 Killed and Wounded on Battlefield.

Rellano, Mex., May 27.—General Orozco's rebels, who were driven out of this town by General Huerta after a desperate battle, are retreating further and further northward. The rebels could be seen burning the big railroad bridge in front of Jiminez.

The federal advance guard under Generals Rebago and Tellez, searched the battlefield, seven miles north of here. They found 800 rebels, dead and wounded, on the field. They estimate that of the 8,000 men under General Orozco, 2,000 deserted.

DIP WOMAN IN TAR BARREL

Ocean City, Md., May 27. — Never has Worcester county been more stirred than it is today over the action of a gang of thugs, who, claiming official protection, dragged Mary Holzman, an unprotected woman from her home in Ocean City, showered blows and kicks upon her face and limbs, and concluded their cruel performance by dipping her into a vat of tar in the presence of her eleven-year-old son, who struggled to prevent the outrage.

Terrorized by her experience the woman has quit the town. She is now being sheltered by Tom Jones, a negro, who lives out in the country three miles. One of the most startling features of the incident is the fact that the town lights were out when the assault was committed.

INDIAN FAVORS CLARK

Chief of Quinaults Thinks He Will Be Next "Great Father."

Tacoma, Wash., May 27.—That Champ Clark will be the next "great white father" of the country is the opinion of Taholai III., chief of the Quinault tribe of Indians, just returned from Washington, where he attended the council of Indians. Taholai was sent to secure certain concessions from the government in the matter of making Quinault allotments. Taholai says he shook hands with Clarke and considers him the "good friend of the Indians."

This week he will call a council of his people, numbering 730, and describe his trip.

[illegible] Aids in Keeping Cuban Situation Uncertain.

Washington, May 27. — With more than a thousand stevedores and lighter men on strike in Havana, throwing many more men out of work by creating a shortage of imported supplies, and the negro insurrectionary movement continuing in resistance to the government forces, conditions in Cuba appear to the Washington authorities as far from reassuring.

Despite the acknowledged seriousness of the combined insurrectionary and strike situation it was authoritatively declared that there is no present intention to intervene, the dispatch of nearly three thousand marines and half of the Atlantic battleship fleet to Cuban waters being merely a precautionary measure to look after the protection of American interests.

High School Notes

Senior Reception

The home of Rev. and Mrs. B. R. Weld was a very pretty and attractive scene last Friday evening. The occasion being the Senior Reception of the High School. One side of the lawn was decorated with willow and maple boughs and was lighted by electric lights hidden by Japanese Lanterns. Pennants were also hanging everywhere about the yard,

At 8:30 the merry company, 64 in all, found their places at the small tables on the lawn, which were decorated with large bouquets of lilacs and tulips.

Ed. K. Sales, President of the Senior class very pleasantly introduced the worthy toastmistress, Anna E. Carson, After a response to the address of Welcome by the Junior President, Francis Peters, a piano duet was given by LaVera Shaw and Sylvia Andrews, which was heartily encored, "A straight line is the shortest distance between two points was cleverly given by Hazelle Tyson. Frank Hand then toasted or rather "roasted" the "girls."

Mrs. Weld very pleasingly sang, "The Rosary" and responded to the encore "The Lady with those Big Blue Eyes." "Graduated or be Graduated" was then discussed by LaVera Shaw and "Ich Weiss Nicht" was cleverly given by Geneva Satterthwaite.

Bonnie Brown very sweetly sang, "Just Her Way" and responded to an encore.

Ed. Sales gave some splendid remarks on "Our Products of Pedagogy"

The fine program was brought to a close by music by Mr. McAlpine and an encore.

A dainty lunch consisting of strawberries, sandwiches, salted peanuts, ice cream, cake, cocoa and mints was served by Geraldine Orr, Ivaline Lamkin, Ruth Curry and Olive Bloomer.

After some appropriate yells by the Seniors the guests departed to their homes. Glenn Kemp of Tipton and Mrs. M. J. Connely of Adrian were out of town guests

The members of the Y. W. C. A. were pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Frank Temple last Thursday evening. After a talk given by Mrs. Temple, light refreshments were served.

Miss Winnifred Mitchell visited the High School last Friday morning.

Mrs. M J. Connely of Adrian visited th eHigh School last Friday.

THE CRY OF CHICAGO STREET

OIL!

A year ago the cry went up for dustless roads, the Tecumseh Herald at once was interested and proceeded to investigate the different panphlets on on the subject.

The committee decided that crude oil was the cheapest and most practical.

There might be some question as to the method in which the oil was spread upon the street and apparently Tecumseh for several weeks lived breathed and floated in crude oil and then for the rest of the season had healthful, dustless, streets, instead of the clouds of dust that generally last through the summer months, experience is always a teacher, and the amount and manner in which the streets were treated again with the oil would be quite different having learned our lesson, another lesson that we should have learned and profited by is, not to spend the whole summer in discussing the subject, but to act at once and have the good of your money invested in the sanitary project. A year ago if you recall, we spent half the summer discussing the question before the oil was put upon our street, so we had the good of it only part of the season.

In a recent canvas made, the resident portion on Chicago St. signified their wish to have the street oiled again while with the business portion it is half and half. Of course the business portion has the street sprinkled which the resident portion has not Now it seems that the residents who wish this should have something done, at once, either oil or something simular or that the sprinkler should come in the residence portion and the price be paid with the taxes as it is done in other places. We should have relief from this terrible scourge of dust. Now who is it up to, the Council or the Business Men's Club?

AN UTOPIAN DREAM FOR TECUMSEH

Adrian gives us a good idea of what is lacking in our business Men's Club to make it rally, and no one could guess what the simple incentive is just an every day feed, in other words a banquet. This Adrian serves annually to her Adrian Industrial Association where the year's work is planned out for the betterment of every line that affects its interests.

This banquet will be held Wednesday evening May 29, at the Rink. Possibly it is thought Tecumseh is so perfect that we need few improvements, here are a few suggestions taken from improvements in other towns. Our two business blocks paved would be an improvement, these two blocks made a white way, would certainly be an improvement, fitting up our parks with fountains, flowers, lights and seats, an up to date high school building. But Arcadia does not materialize in a day, a week, a month or a year, all these things take time, but if we have an object and work steadily for it, it is often accomplished before we realize it is fairly begun. But it would call for several banquets.

LENAWEE BAPTIST ASSOCIATION, JUNE 5

The Lenawee Baptist Association which convenes Wednesday, June 5, at the Baptist church, is an event of considerable importance. Delegates will be here from churches in Monroe and Lenawee Counties. This year the Free Baptist churches will send delegates also.

The first session will begin at 10 a. m. Wednesday. At 11 o'clock Rev. H. Z. Davis of Morenci, will deliver the annual sermon. One of the features of the afternoon, will be the addresses of prominent Missionary Secretaries.

A Men's banquet had been advertised. but owing to the failure to land the speaker it has been abandoned.

On Wednesday evening Rev. W. R. Curtis of Rollin will preside, and the Young people's work will be emphasized. Rev. F. B. Bachelor of Ann Arbor will deliver an address on, "A Divine Call to busy people."

Thursday will be a big day, G. W. Morrow of the State Anti Saloon league will speak at 9:45 and at 10.15. Dr D. B. Reed of Hillsdale College will speak on, "Faith in the unseen and the relation of this faith to the development of Man." Dr. Reed will also speak at a meeting of the men in the afternoon, while the women have their missionary meeting.

The Women's meeting will be addressed by Mrs. John McGuire of Burma, and Miss Helen Tenhaven of Detroit.

Thursday evening Charles H. Carr will preside over the Sunday School session, and the address will be given by Prof. Gurney of Hillsdale on, "The Why, What and How of Teacher Training."

One of the features of these meetings will be the brief devotional addresses delivered at the opening of each session by Rev. Edwin Simpson of Adrian.

Plea for Proper Education.

Sir John Gorst is trying to rouse the British mind to a sense of the futility—even to the viciousness—of an educational system which bears small relationship to the practical needs of the time. His indictment is not lacking in directness. "A starved and stunted race," he says, "is being allowed to grow up as a legacy for the next generation to deal with, for in most elementary schools children are only drilled, not educated." Again, "The higher and university schools are still tettered by mediaeval systems which makes the acquisition of learning to be produced at examinations the main work of the students." It would seem that our American system is not the only one which needs overhauling.

Obituary

WALLACE E, GRAY

Wallace E. Gray departed this life, Monday May 20, 1912, after an illness of only four days, at the age of 73 years, at his home at Hills Station Ohio Mr. Gray was one of our Tecumseh boys, a brother of William and Charles Gray, all of whom have passed away within the past few years. For years the three brothers played together in the band, and Gray's orchestra will be remembered by their old friends as one of the pleasing features of many gatherings. Mr Gray has been in poor health for some time, and Friday May 17, was stricken with paralysis, never regaining consciousness till death came as a blessed release from pain and suffering. One by one they are being gathered in, the old friends that we cherished in the years of long ago.

RICHARD L. MCCONNEL

Richard L. McConnell of Hurley, Wisconsin formerly a resident of Tecumseh died May 19, at the age of 79 years. Mr. McConnell had been in business in Hurley for the past 26 years and was in good health up to twelve days before his death. He was out driving and the horse became frightened and ran away throwing him out. He was taken to his home in a badly bruised condition and never rallied from the effects of the accident.

One daughter, Miss Nellie McConnel who was his companion since the death of his wife and son, is left to mourn his loss

CONTROLLING THE SITUATION

One year, when the youngsters of a certain Illinois village met for the purpose of electing a captain of their baseball team for the coming season, it appeared that there were a number of candidates for the post, with more than the usual wrangling.

Youngster after youngster presented his qualifications for the post; and the matter was still undecided when the son of the owner of the ball-field stood up. He was a small snub-nosed lad, with a plentiful supply of freckles, but he glanced about him with a dignified air of controlling the situation.

"I'm going to be captain this year," he announced convincingly, "or else father's old bull is going to be turned into the field."

He was elected unanimously.

I. P. KEYSOR

I. P. Keysor for many years a resident of Tecumseh, passed away suddenly Sunday at one o'clock p. m.,

Mr. Keysor had not been in good health for some time, but was on the street Thursday, but for a few days had been confined to the house. For many years he has been a familiar figure upon the street, but for a few years has lived on his farm, moving into town this spring in the old home on Railroad street. He leaves a widow and daughter to mourn his loss The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. He was a member of the Jackson Commandery Knights Templars, under whose auspices the funeral will be conducted. He was also a charter member of the I O. O. F.

Mr. Keysor was quite a character about town, one of his characteristics being his generosity and kindliness to the many children to whom he and his wife have given homes, and more than homes, the love and assistance that has made life worth while.

John S. Temple was a Toledo visitor Monday, on business.

T. C. Harris was home from Fremont, O., for an over Sunday visit with his family.

Miss Iva Waldron has returned from her school work in Kingsley, for the summer vacation.

Some Uses for Hate.

Hate is only a passing emotion—something upon which little people cut eye teeth. We get a certain amount of diversion out of it and some salutary lessons. It is probably a friend in disguise and keeps us from wasting time and from spending forces where they are not needed. And when hate is dead what a comfortable feeling comes in its place.

Catching Up.

Retiring for the night, a tiny maiden climbed into her mother's lap and kissed her on both cheeks. Her manner being rather more effusive than usual, it was suspected that confession would be forthcoming. That was the fact, not long delayed.

"Mamma," said the child, "I've been naughty. I'm afraid the angels have marked my name in the Big Book as a bad girl."

"I hope not, dear," the mother replied. "What have you been doing?"

"It's something I haven't done, mamma," the little girl explained. "I have gone to bed for two weeks without saying my prayers."

"Why, dearie," chided the mother, gently, "that is really serious. What shall we do about it?"

"I've been thinking it over, mamma," the small delinquent said, "and made up my mind to say 'Our Father' and 'Now I Lay Me' every night until I catch up with my prayers."

NEW WAY CORN PLANTERS.

Never has there been such a demand for accurate planting as there is at the present time owing to the lateness of the season.

Do not bother along with some half worn out machine when you have your ground all fitted or be bothered by borrowing some neighbor's planter who hates to lend it.

Phone to us at once and we will bring and start for you the most up-to-date planter sold, the one that gives the satisfaction that so many other kinds only imitate, besides, you get with every planter TEMPLE'S SERVICE, which cannot be valued in dollars and cents when you are in a hurry and something goes dead wrong and you do not know how to fix it.

Don't wait for some other year to buy a planter as you never need one so bad. DO IT NOW, RIGHT OFF.

Barrett Brothers

SUIT ENDED, LENIENCY OF JUDGE SHOWN IN DECISION

20 Days and $50 For Each

A decision has finally been reached in the case of the Barrett Brothers, they plead guilty to the charges preferred and were given 20 days and $50 each.

Their Attorney John A. Riley made a strong plea to the Court for leniency, as his clients were successful young business men with untarnished records up to this time, and were guilty only in a technical sense, not in a willful flagrant manner. Earl C. Michner Prosecuting Attorney, stated that he was in favor of a distinction between those prisoners who entered pleas of guilty, and were ready to stand their sentence, and those who stood trial and stubbornly resisted the law. The Judge then called the prisoners up for sentence, and in a talk with them spoke of his regret to have them come before him in this manner, spoke of their excellent record, their success in business, and believed their offense to which they had entered a plea of guilty, was not as flagrant as other offenses of a like nature. He sentenced them leniently, Attorney Prosecutor and Judge all seemed to regard the offense as technical, rather than flagrant.

GASES IN STOMACH POISON THE BLOOD

Gas forms in your stomach because the food you eat ferments and turns sour.

Allow this fermentation to go on and these gases become poisonous and the poison gets into the blood.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets stop the fermentation almost instantly, turn the poisonous gases into liquid, and eliminnates the poison mostly through the kidneys.

If you have any stomach trouble such as gas, sourness, heaviness, flatulency or shortness of breath, MI-O-NA will give gratifying relief in five minutes.

They are sold on money back plan for acute or chronic indigestion, nervousness, dizziness, headaches, sleeplessness, ect. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son and dauggists everywhere for 05 cents a box.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

What Texans Admire

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Nobody is perfectly right, so what is the use in fretting when it is all a question of degree?

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become opertive:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. A Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy, in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

SLAYER KILLS HIMSELF

Former Jacksonville, Ill., Police Chief Shoots Friend.

Crime Is Caused by Politics—Ambrose Hurley Felt that C. W. Brown Had Wronged Him.

Jacksonville, Ill., May 27.—Charles W. Brown, city commissioner, was shot and killed by Ambrose Hurley, former chief of police. Hurley later committed suicide.

The cause of the shooting is a mystery. The two men had been close friends for years, but lately had fallen out, and Hurley is reported to have made threats to kill Brown.

The latter, however, attached no importance to these threats when they were reported to him and continued to employ Hurley as his assistant in his civil engineering work.

Hurley entered the office of Mr. Brown while the latter was dictating a letter to his stenographer. He walked close to the commissioner and called out the one sentence: "You cannot treat me like that any longer," and fired one shot.

Hurley then left the office and went to the street, where he engaged a carriage to take him to his boarding house. Arriving there he went to his room, undressed, lay on the bed, and shot himself through the head.

Hurley had been an employe of Brown for the greater part of the last ten years. He had charge of much of the work of drainage projects which Brown had carried out in the southern part of the state.

During the last administration he was appointed chief of police at the request of Mr. Brown and when Brown was elected as one of the city commissioners, with the duties of caring for the water works system, Hurley was appointed superintendent of the water department, but resigned immediately.

It was soon after this that Hurley was reported to have made threats against Brown. One of these threats was reported to Brown by D. E. Crabtree, and Brown, meeting Hurley before the office of Crabtree, took him inside, where they had a friendly interview and apparently settled their differences.

Brown was one of the best known civil engineers in this part of the state, and had been a leader in most of the drainage and reclamation work in southern Illinois. He was about fifty years old and is survived by a widow and one daughter.

here," advised Bailey, in the pause. "I guess Miss Emily is right, Mr. Ffrench; we've got nothing to do but look on; for David Ffrench was wiped out to make Darling Lestrange."

When Lestrange came into his camp for oil and gasolene, near eight o'clock, Dick seized the brief halt, the first in three hours.

"Emily's up in the stand," he announced. "Send her a word, old man; and don't get reckless in front of her."

"Emily?" echoed Lestrange, too weary for astonishment. "Give me a pencil. No, I can't take off my gauntlet; it's glued fast. I'll manage. Rupert, go take an hour's rest and send me the other mechanician."

"I can't get off my car; it's glued fast," Rupert confided, leaning over the back of the machine to appropriate a sandwich from the basket a man was carrying to the neighboring camp. "Go on with your correspondence, dearest."

So resting the card Dick supplied on the steering wheel, Lestrange wrote a difficult two lines.

He was out again on the track when Dick brought the message to Emily.

"I just told him you were here, cousin," he whispered in her ear, and dropped the card in her lap.

"I'll enjoy this more than ever, with you here," she read. "It's the right place for my girl. I'll give you the cup for our first dinner table, tonight. "DAVID."

Emily lifted her face. The tragedy of the scene was gone, Lestrange's eyes laughed at her out of a mist. The sky was blue, the sunshine golden; the merry crowds commencing to pour in woke carnival in her heart.

"He said to tell you the machine was running magnificently," supplemented Dick, "and not to insult his veteran reputation by getting nervous. He's coming by—look."

He was coming by; and, although unable to look toward the grand-stand he raised his hand in salute as he passed, to the one he knew was watching. Emily flushed rosily, her dark eyes warm and shining.

"I can wait," she sighed, gratefully. "Dickie, I can wait until it ends now."

Dick went back.

The hours passed. One more car went out of the race under the grinding test; there were the usual incidents of blown-out tires and temporary withdrawals for repairs. Twice Mr. Ffrench sent his partner and Emily to the restaurant below, tolerating his seat. Perfectly composed, his expression perfectly self-contained, he watched his son.

The day grew unbearably hot toward afternoon, a heat rather of July than June. After a visit to his camp Lestrange reappeared without the suffocating mask and cap, driving bareheaded, with only the narrow goggles crossing his face. The change left visible the drawn pallor of exhaustion under stains of dust and oil, his rolled-back sleeves disclosed the crimson badge on his right arm and the fact that his left wrist was tightly wound with linen where swollen and strained muscles rebelled at the long trial.

"He's been driving for nineteen hours," said Dick, climbing up to his party through the excited crowd. "Two hours more to six o'clock. Listen to the mob when he passes!"

The injunction was unnecessary. As the sun slanted low the enthusiasm grew to fever. This was a crowd of connoisseurs—motorists, chauffeurs, automobile lovers and drivers—they knew what was being done before them. The word passed that Lestrange was in his twentieth hour; people climbed on seats to cheer him as he passed by. When one of his tires blew out, in the opening of the first hour of his driving and the twenty-fourth of the race, the great shout of sympathy and encouragement that went up shook the grand-stand to its cement foundations.

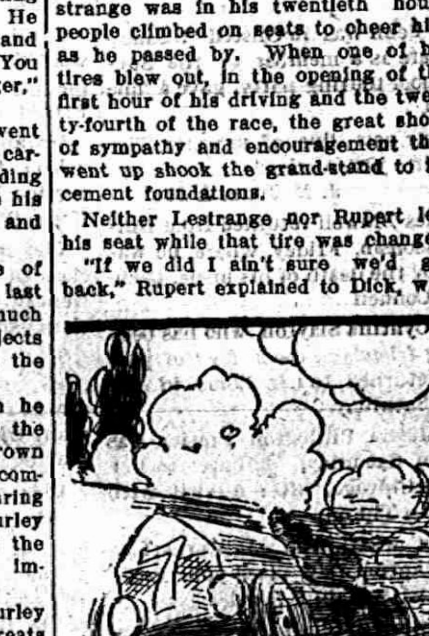
"If we did I ain't sure we'd get back," Rupert explained to Dick, who hovered around them agitatedly. "If I'd thought Darling's mechanician would get in for this, I'd have taken in sewing for a living. How much longer?"



Reappeared Without the Suffocating Mask and Cap.

"Half an hour."

"Well, watch us finish."

A renewed burst of applause greeted the Mercury car's return to the track. Men were standing watch in hand to count the last moments, their eyes on the bulletin board where the reeled-off miles were being registered. Two of the other machines were fighting desperately for second place, hopeless of rivaling Lestrange, and after them sped the rest.

"The finish!" some one suddenly called. "The last lap!"

was dangling over the paddock fence when the car shot by amidst braying klaxons, motor horns, cheers, and the clashing music of the band. Frantic, the people hailed Lestrange as the black and white checked flag dropped before him in proclamation of his victory and the ended race.

Rupert raised his arms above his head in the signal of acknowledgment, as they flew across the line and swept on to complete the circle to their camp. Lestrange slackened speed to take the dangerous, deeply furrowed turn for the last time, his car poised for the curving flight under his guidance—then the watching hundreds saw the driver's hands slip from the steering-wheel as he reached for the brake. Straight across the track the machine dashed, instead of following the bend, crashed through the barrier, and rolled over on its side in the green meadow grass.

"The steering-knuckle!" Bailey groaned, as the place burst into uproar around them. "The wheel—I saw it turn uselessly in his hands!"

"They're up!" cried a dozen voices. "No, one's up and one's under." "Who's caught in the wreck—Lestrange or his man?"

But before the people who surged over the track, breaking all restraint, before the electric ambulance, Dick Ffrench reached the marred thing that had been the Mercury car. It was Lestrange who had painfully struggled to one knee beside the machine, fighting hard for breath to speak.

"Take the car off Rupert," he panted, at Dick's cry of relief on seeing him. "I'm all right—take the car off Rupert."

The next instant they were surrounded, overwhelmed with eager aid. The ambulance came up and a surgeon precipitated himself toward Lestrange.

But it was he who halted before a gesture from Lestrange, who leaned on Dick and a comrade from the camp.

"Go over there, to Rupert."

"You first—"

"No."

There was nothing to do except yield. Shrugging his shoulders, the surgeon paused the necessary moment. A moment only; there was a no protests, but he himself never left scattering of the hushed workers, a metallic crash.

"Where's Darling Lestrange?" was hurled viciously across the silence. "Gee, you're a slow bunch of workers! Where's Lestrange?"

The tumult that broke loose swept all to confusion. And after all it was Lestrange who was put in the surgeon's care, while Rupert rode back to the camp on the driver's seat of the ambulance.

"Tell Emily I'll come over to her as soon as I'm fit to look at," was the message Lestrange gave Dick. "And when you go back to the factory, have your steering-knuckles strengthened."

Dick exceeded his commission by transmitting the speech entire; repeating the first part to Emily with all affectionate solicitude, and flinging the second cuttingly at his uncle and Bailey.

"The doctors say he ought to be in bed, but he won't go," he concluded. "No, you can't see him until they get through patching him up at the hospital tent; they put every one out except Rupert. He hasn't a scratch, after having a ninety Mercury on top of him. You're to come over to our camp, Emily, and wait for Lestrange. I suppose everybody had better come."

It was a curious and an elevating thing to see Dickie assume command of his family, but no one demurred. An official, recognizing in him Lestrange's manager, cleared a way for the party through the noisy press of departing people and automobiles.

The sunset had long faded, night had settled over the motordrome and the electric lamps had been lit in the tents, before there came a stir and murmur in the Mercury camp.

Emily started up, Dick sprang to open the canvas, and Lestrange crossed the threshold. Lestrange, colorless, his right arm in a sling, his left wound with linen from wrist to elbow, and bearing a heavy purple bruise above his temple, but with the brightness of victory flashing above all weariness like a dancing flame.

"Sweetheart!" he laughed, as Emily ran to meet him, heedless of all things except that he stood within touch once more. "My dear, I told them not to frighten you. Why, Emily—"

For as he put his one available arm about her, she hid her wet eyes on his shoulder.

"I am so happy," she explained breathlessly. "It is only that."

"You should not have been here at all, my dear. But it is good to see you. Who brought you? Bailey?" catching sight of the man beside Dick. "Good, I wanted some one to help me; Rupert and I have got to find a hotel and we're not very active."

Emily would have slipped away from the clasp, scarlet with returning recollection, but Lestrange detained her to meet his shining eyes.

"The race is over," he reminded, for her ears alone. "I'm going to keep you, if you'll stay."

He turned to take a limping step, offering his hand cordially to the speechless Bailey, and faced for the first time the other man present.

"I think," said Ethan Ffrench, "that there need be no question of hotels. We have not understood each other, but you have the right to Ffrenchwood's hospitality. If you can travel, we will go there."

"No," answered David Ffrench, as quietly. "Never. You owe me nothing, sir. If I have worked in your factory, I took the workman's wages for it; if I have won honors for your car, I also won the prize-money given to the driver. I never meant so to establish any claim upon Ffrenchwood or you. I believe we stand even. Dick has taken my place, happily; Emily and I will go on our own road."

They looked at each other, the likeness between them most apparent, in the similar determination of mood which wiped laughter and warmth from the younger man's face. However coldly phrased and dictatorially spoken, it was an apology which Mr. Ffrench had offered and which had been declined. But—he had watched

Sold Wife to Friend.

At the village of Utsnach, Switzerland, the other day, a curious sale took place. With her own consent a woman was sold by her husband to another man, an Italian, and a friend of the Swiss couple. The price asked by the affectionate husband was four dollars. To further "legalize" the bargain, the Italian procured two witnesses to the transaction and had a contract written on stamped government paper.

LATEST OHIO RETURNS

Roosevelt's Plurality Now Given as 80,000.

Returns show Roosevelt carried the Ohio Republican primaries by a plurality of 30,000, and that Governor Harmon carried the Democratic preference vote over Governor Wilson of New Jersey by 15,000 to 20,000.

Out of forty-two district delegates from Ohio at Chicago, Colonel Roosevelt will have thirty-one or thirty-two and Governor Harmon will have twenty-seven or twenty-eight. Harmon will also have six delegates-at-large. The six Republican delegates-at-large probably will be instructed for Taft, since his friends are likely to control the state convention which will name them. However, the Roosevelt forces will use the verdict registered in the districts as convincing proof of the sentiment of Republicans in the state and will fight against the big six for Taft.

Late returns tended to show a lessening of Governor Harmon's lead as indicated earlier. The progressives declared they might corrall as many as twenty-three of the forty-two delegates for Wilson.

President Taft, as expected, was hard hit in the farming, mining and industrial districts. He was thought to be strong in the cities, but carried only Portsmouth and Cincinnati. In the latter Roosevelt made no fight.

LORIMER WILL NOT RESIGN

Trip of the Vice President to Chicago Was Made in Vain.

Mr. Sherman has returned to Washington, but declines absolutely to comment on the obect of his visit to Chicago or the result of it.

There appears to be no doubt in the minds of senators that the vice president's mission, which was to induce Senator Lorimer to resign, failed signally and that the case will have to be fought on the floor of the senate at an early day. That Senator Lorimer will be ousted is generally conceded, even by his friends in the senate.

Neither the vice president nor any senator familiar with the case would admit that he knew positively that Senator Lorimer has told the vice president that he would not resign, but information comes from Chicago that the senator from Illinois positively refused to act on the advice of the vice president when the latted called at Senator Lorimer's residence and urged the resignation of Lorimer.

CROP OUTLOOK POOR

Severe Winter Has Worked Great Injury, Declare Farmers.

Pontiac, Mich., May 28.—That crops in Oakland county this year will not be bountiful is the prediction of Oakland county farmers in response to inquiries sent out in all directions from Pontiac.

The wet weather has been of advantage to hay and all farmers who have meadows promise to reap abundant harvests. The cold winter was hard on wheat and the outlook for oats is not encouraging.

SLAYS WIFE, THEN SELF

Kalamazoo Man Had Been Refused Money for Liquor.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 25.—Enraged because his wife had refused him money with which to buy intoxicants, William E. Kane shot and instantly killed his wife.

He then turned the revolver upon himself, inflicting wounds from which he died three hours later in Borgess hospital.

Allegan Pioneers Die.

Allegan, Mich., May 27.—George Lowe and James W. Coburn, both natives of New York state and old residents of Allegan, are dead, aged seventy-five and eighty-two respectively.

NEGRO UPRISING IN CUBA MOST SERIOUS

United States Warship and Marines May Be Needed.

Fifteen Hundred Negroes in Arms in Santiago Province and White People Fear General War Is Upon Them.

Late reports from Cupa place a serious aspect on the negro uprising there in the minds of state department officials.

The matter of sending one or more warships to Cuban waters to back up the request made for protection of American life and property was discussed at the state department. Already doubt is felt of the ability of the Gomez government to afford such protection against the negro bands, no matter how good his intentions.

If a ship is sent it will be one of the larger vessels oft he nacy, with a considerable force of marines available for landing purposes.

The white people in Santiago province, where it is estimated 1,500 negroes are already in arms, fear that a general war is upon them.

The government has dispatched about 1,000 soldiers to the affected provinces and its officials continue to express confidence in the ability of the government to suppress the revolt.

The secretary of government declared that the so-called uprising of the negroes had been quelled in Santa Clara province, where the bands had been dispersed and the leaders were hiding in the woods. He expects also that a few hours will see the end of the movement in Santiago province.

Nevertheless the rushing of troops to the disturbed centers by the government continues and President Gomez issued a decree commandeering 3,000 horses, 1,000 each in the provinces of Santiago, Santa Clara and Havana.

EIGHT BISHOPS CHOSEN

Methodist General Conference Fills Ranks of the Episcopacy.

The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session at Minneapolis, finally completed its selection of eight new resident bishops when Dr. Wilbur Patterson Thirkleld, president of Howard university, was elected to the episcopacy on the twenty-sixth ballot.

Rev. Franklin D. Leete of the Detroit conference and Rev. R. J. Cooke of New York were elected to be bishops on the twenty-third and twenty-fourth ballots.

The complete list of new bishops is composed of Stuntz, Shepard, Henderson, Luccock, McConnell, Leete, Cooke and Thirkleld.

PRINCE KILLED IN AUTO

George William Meets Death While Going to Frederick's Bier.

Near Friesack, in Prussia, Prince George William, the eldest son of the Duke of Cumberland, and his chamberlain, Von Greve, were instantly killed in an automobile accident on the highway.

They were on their way from Berlin to Copenhagen, by way of Hamburg, to attend the funeral of the prince's uncle, the late King Frederick VIII.

The prince, who was at the steering wheel, probably failed to observe the signs of warning that the highway was being repaired, and drove the machine at full speed into a part of the roadway which was being macadamized.

He lost control, the machine being ditched and turned on its end. The prince's head was crushed. Chamberlain Von Greve's neck was broken. The chauffuer, who was inside the automobile, suffered from a broken arm.

MICHIGAN FLOOD CREST HAS PASSED

Conditions Begin Slowly to Improve at Saginaw.

Damage Wrought by High Water Will Be Enormous, Both in the City and [illegible] Country.

Saginaw, Mich., May 27.—The flood crest has passed, according to Weather Forecaster Schneider, and the river is falling slowly. Conditions are far from normal in the business district and the pontoon sidewalks over several of the streets will be in use for several days at least.

Traffic conditions are slightly improved. For the first time in days, the Saginaw and Flint is in operation. It is expected that the schedule will be followed regularly from now on.

The big washout at Paines station prevents any traffic to Jackson over the Michigan Central and to Grand Rapids via the Pere Marquette. On the Michigan Central trains are run south from St. Charles to Chicago.

The damage done by the flood cannot be estimated at this day, but it is known that it will be enormous. To many sections of the farming country, it may be beyond repair. Crops have rotted in the ground and the lateness of the season will probably prevent replanting. Hundreds of men are out of employment in the manufacturing plants in the lowlands and along the river front, owing to forced shut downs.

Carcasses of horses and cattle are common sights floating down the river and it is expected that as soon as the river recedes to normal, the health authorities will make special effort to rid the shores of any animal matter which might be left along the lowlands.

Forty-five passengers on the Michigan Central train northbound on the Jackson division were rescued from Paines station, where they had been marooned for several hours. The passenger train pulled into the station and encountered a washout 300 feet long. The train could not back up, as another washout had occurred south. The passengers slept in the coaches and were fed by citizens of Paines. Later small boats were pressed into service. They carried passengers to dry land, where they embarked on a work train for Saginaw.

While driving home Mr. and Mrs. Albert Milkie had trouble which nearly cost their lives. They drove into a washout at the easterly approach of the Gratiot road bridge. They were rescued, but their horse was drowned.

George Dashner of LaPorte was drowned while attempting to swim Swan creek. Fayette Cooper was drowned in the Maple river at St. Joans when he fell from a launch.

FARMER DROWNS IN CREEK

Body of Missed Thetford Township Man Is Found.

Flint, Mich., May 24.—The body of Louis Albro, a Thetford township farmer, who disappeared Tuesday night while returning to his home from Birch Run, was found by a party of searchers headed by Deputy Sheriff Powers of Clio, about 100 rods from an open culvert over Pine creek, into which he had driven in spite of a warning light which had been placed at the danger point. The horse that he drove was also drowned and swept down stream.

Albro was forty years old and leaves a widow and two small children.

SLAYER KILLS HIMSELF

Former Jacksonville, Ill., Police Chief Shoots Friend.

At Jacksonville, Ill., Charles W. Brown, the city commissioner, was shot and killed by Ambrose Hurley, former chief of police. Hurley later committed suicide.

The cause of the shooting is a mystery. The two men had been close friends for years, but lately had fallen out, and Hurley is reported to have made threats to kill Brown.

The latter, however, attached no importance to these threats when they were reported to him and continued to employ Hurley as his assistant in his civil engineering work.

Hurley entered the office of Mr. Brown while the latter was dictating a letter to his stenographer. He walked close to the commissioner and called out the one sentence: "You cannot treat me like that any longer," and fired one shot.

Hurley then left the office and went to the street, where he engaged a carriage to take him to his boarding house. Arriving there he went to his room, undressed, lay on the bed, and shot himself through the head.

CUBAN NEWSPAPERS RAVE

Resent Action of United States in Sending Warships There.

The despatch of the United States warships and marines to Cuba, especially the sending of a gunboat to Nipe Bay to protect the huge American interests there, has greatly angered some of the Cuban newspapers, which highly praise the letter of President Gomez to President Taft, protesting against this action and declaring that Cuba was able to cope with the situation and that he would be able to put down the revolt within ten days.

General Estenoz, the negro rebel leader, has issued a manifesto proclaiming himself president and General Ivonet commander-in-chief. He has adopted the tactics of the late General Maximo Gomez by threatening to burn the sugar mills unless the owners pay large sums of money within seventy-two hours.

The negroes burned the barracks of the rural guards at Magrisillos, a village near Santiago. The governor of Santiago province telegraphs the government to the effect that he has received advices from the mayor of Guantanamo stating that Commandant Brooks of the American naval station there had called and asked him about the situation and if the government was able to protect life and property. The governor urged the federal authorities to protect American property in Cuban territory.

ROOT TO OPEN CONVENTION

Accepts Temporary Chairmanship of Big Chicago Gathering.

Senator Elihu Root of New York has wired his acceptance of the temporary chairmanship of the Republican national convention to be held in Chicago beginning June 18. He is President Taft's choice for the honor.

The telegram from Senator Root was received by Colonel Harry S. New, chairman of the sub-committee on arrangements, almost simultaneously with the arrival in Chicago of former United States Senator Dick of Ohio. Politicians consider the two events significant. Mr. Dick has been picked by Mr. Taft to represent him in the contest hearings before the national committee here.

WEALTHY WIDOW CREMATED

Clothes Catch Afire While She Sleeps and She Burns to Death.

At Chicago Sunday Mrs. John J. Dunn, wealthy widow of one of Chicago's pioneer coal merchants, was burned to death on the back porch of her home, 5045 Michigan avenue.

She fell asleep in a rocking chair on the porch. In some way, with the shifting of the chair, one of the rockers struck a box of matches on the floor. The whole box was ignited and her clothing caught fire.

ATTACKS TEACHER; FINED

Tawas Woman Objects to Punishment of Daughter.

Cheboygan, Mich., May 24. — Mrs. John King was found guilty in justice court of assaulting Miss Victoria Rouleau, a teacher in Tawas. Her daughter Gladys misbehaved and was punished by the teacher. The mother entered the schoolhouse and it is alleged called the teacher names, choking and striking her.

The teacher defended herself with a hatpin. The fight was finally stopped by Principal Decker. Mrs. King was fined $50 and appealed.

DECORATION DAY

Thursday morning ushered in an ideal day for Decoration Day, and sunshine and flowers greeted us on every hand. All the morning men, women and children laden with flowers went to our beautiful Brookside to pay their tribute to their departed friends.

Promptly at 1:30 p m. the exercises of the day were given to a most appreciative audience, who listened with marked attention, The music rendered by the Tecumseh band was most excellent, and suitable to the hour. The duet, "The Blessed Abode", by Misses Edna Gaston and Metta Mc Kinney, "The Dear Homeland," by Miss Stella Brush and the closing duet by Misses Edna Gaston and Metta McKinney were most beautiful, and the young ladies voices were at their best, leaving the audience wishing that there was more to follow. Comrade Smith read Lincoln's Gettysburg speech in a very feelingly manner and the recitation "Memorial Day," by Mrs Jennie Collins was given in a charming manner.

The Memorial address by Dr. J. W. Gray of Adrian, was the leading feature of the day. He paid most loving tribute to the living, as well as to the dead, to the comrades of the G. A. R who are with us, but whose ranks are growing less day by day, "Lest We Forget" was the theme he wished most forcibly to impress upon those of the present generation, urging upon all to remember the deeds of valor, the suffering, privation and achievement of those who wore the blue, and what it means for us, who are enjoying the liberty they purchased with their blood

At the close of the exercises the procession was formed and marched to the cemetery, where they scattered the flowers on the graves of the departed comrades, a loving memorial. The crowd then dispersed to their homes, feeling that the duty they owe to the G. A. R had been faithfully fulfilled.

CHOKED BIG DOG TO DEATH

With his bare hands, Harry Edise, 17 years old, fought and choked to death a Newfoundland dog, which had attacked several school children. Only the heroic work of Edise saved the children from being mangled by the savage animal, but he himself was badly bitten.

Edise is a truck driver. He was driving in Hinsdale street when he saw a group of children on their way from school at the noon hour, running and screaming. Following them was a great black dog, snapping at the little ones, but fortunately failing to fasten his teeth in any of them.

Edise was without a weapon of any kind, but he leaped from his truck, ran at the dog and kicked him. The brute immediately turned its attention to its assailant and leaping at Edise fastened its teeth in his left arm. Edise succeeded in breaking the hold when the dog again seized him, this time catching the fingers of his left hand.

With his free hand Edise grabbed the dog by the throat and despite its struggles, held on. The choking forced the animal to release its grip on the left hand of Edise, and he threw the beast to the sidewalk, knelt on it to prevent it squirming loose, and while a great crowd gathered and stood helpless he choked the animal to death.—New York Globe.

RAPID SYSTEM CO.

Business Men of Tecumseh Met Tuesday Morning to Consider Plans for This New Industry.

A meeting of the business men of Tecumseh was held at the Lilley State Bank at 10 a. m. Tuesday to meet Messrs. Ide and Childs of Los Angeles California who wish to form a company to manufacture the Rapid System Register.

There was a representative company of business men present who listened with a great interest to their explanation of the advantages of this system over others.

Questions were asked relative to advantage to the investor and to the town. There are between 20 and 30 people employed in their factory in Los Angles and they wish to have an eastern factory for the manufacture of their goods.

The "one writing" system has advanced rapidly in favor with the retail merchant during the past few years.

Many different forms of registers have been devised, the latest improvement is known as the Rapid System Register Manufactured in Los Angele California, it is in the form of a loose leaf book, that can be closed and placed in the safe at night. This feature together with its simplicity and low cost, compared with other registers has brought it rapidly forward on the Pacific Coast where it has been before the public for the past two years.

The company have realized that to secure Eastern business, they must have a factory at some point in the East, and the Treasurer of the Company Edgar L. Ide, a Tecumseh boy and the General Sales Manager, George W. Childs formerly in the manufacturing business in Detroit, have been here the last week, and will be here for some time with a view to interesting capital and establishing a factory in Tecumseh.

A committee from the business men of Tecumseh have carefully investigated and made a favorable report, both on the construction and salability of register and on the plan proposed for financing.

We all wish them success and that Tecumseh may add one more solid factory to her already prosperous factories.

STRANGE KINGDOM OF NEPAL

The ancient and interesting little kingdom at the foot of the Himalayas to which the king went for his shoot is nearer to being an independent territory than any other of the Indian states.

Since the eighteenth century it has been ruled by the Gurkhas, who furnish to the Indian army some of the most perfect soldiers in the world. For practical purposes the country is almost as closely secluded from Europeans as Thibet, to which in many respects it is akin.

The Terai, where King George was lately encamped, is the low-lying jungle tract bordering on the Indian plain, a region extraordinarily rich in wild animals, including elephants, the capture of which is a highly organized and valuable industry.

The maharaja of Nepal, whose death by the way occurred on December 11, was a titular sovereign only, the real ruler being the hereditary prime minister, who visited England a few months ago. He has the title of maharaja, and is entitled to a salute of nineteen guns.

One result of the jealous exclusion of foreigners, which the Indian government thoroughly respects, is that very little is known of a great part of Nepal, and that much of the available information as to social and economic conditions is mere guesswork. For close upon a hundred years the rulers have been our very good friends, and the force of eight thousand men headed by Jung Bahadur in the Mutiny was of inestimable service. —Westminster Gazette.

ALBERT FORD

The remains of Albert Ford were brought here from Ann Arbor Thursday where he had been in the hospital for a number of weeks. He was taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Will Chiverall. The time of the funeral has not been decided upon as we go to press, awaiting the arrival of relatives.

IN MEMORY OF JOHN BUNYAN

Ornate Window Placed in Westminster Abbey Depicts Scenes From "The Pilgrim's Progress."

Two hundred and twenty-three years after the death of the famous tinker of Bedford an ornate window in his memory has just been placed in Westminster Abbey. Naturally it depicts scenes from the "Pilgrim's Progress," the chief episodes illustrated being:

His admittance at the Wicket Gate.
His deliverance from the burden of sin at the foot of the Cross.
Fight with Apollyon.
Vanity Fair.
Crossing the river to the Celestial City.

Round the center panels, which are 20 feet high and six feet in width, run a series of vignettes representing minor scenes in the allegory, the first of course, being Pilgrim's wife and family trying to dissuade him from making the journey. The headlight contains a portrait of Bunyan, and at the base of the window is the inscription, "In memory of John Bunyan: B. 1628. D. 1688. The Pilgrim's Progress."

The window is in the west aisle of the north transept. Altogether the memorial has cost £1,200, raised by lovers of the "Pilgrim's Progress," but the project has chiefly been carried on by the exertions and liberality of the Baptist denomination, on whose behalf Dr. Clifford will formally hand over the window to the dean and chapter of the abbey.—London Daily News.

HAD LOST HIS FINGER-STALL

Little Mishap That Befell Frank Marshall While He Was Making Delicious Salads.

In his "Random Reminiscences" Mr. Charles Brookfield tells an amusing story of an actor friend, Frank Marshall, an exceedingly popular and accomplished member of the profession, who had lost a finger in early life, and who wore a kid finger-stall partially to conceal the deficiency. Marshall had a pretty talent for mixing salads, and one evening at the Sheridan club, as his friends dropped in to dine, they noticed him preparing one of the delicious salads of which he alone seemed to know the secret.

Immediately there were cries of "Frank, make me one at the same time;" and "Oh, Frank, make enough for me, too," and, beaming with satisfaction at the compliment to his skill, Frank called for more lettuces, chives, tarragon and other ingredients. And when he had chopped up his herbs into minute fragments and mixed his salad in his own way everyone was delighted.

A few more neighbors begged for stray leaves, and finally one enthusiastic gourmand wiped the bowl round with a ball of bread, and turned up his eyes in ecstasy as he gulped down the savory morsel. But the face of the founder of the feast wore a troubled expression.

"Oh, nothing," replied Frank, peering round the polished bowl, "only—only I seem to have lost my finger-stall!"

GLASS PAVING A FAILURE

Experiments in France Show the Material Will Not Stand the Traffic in Streets.

Seven or eight years ago a plant was established at La Demi Lune, a suburb about four miles from Lyon, France, for making glass paving material under the name of "pierre de verre Garchey." After many experiments carried out at the factory the manufacturer applied to the Lyon municipality for the right to make a trial on one of the chief thoroughfares. The necessary authorization was granted, provided that the inventor would bear the entire expense of the undertaking.

The place chosen for laying the glass pavement was a section of the Place de la République, where traffic of cabs, automobiles and wagons of all kinds is very heavy. The glass bricks remained in place for less than two years and were then taken out as they were in very poor condition, the edges were all broken, and in many cases the blocks were split through and through. The opinion of officials here at that time was to the effect that this glass pavement could be used under favorable circumstances for sidewalks, but not for the middle of streets.—Consular and Trade Reports.

Wholesale Burning of Books.

The French should win Edmund Gosse's commendation for the wholesale manner in which they have destroyed books. They have even gone to the extent of coining a special word, "bibliolytie," to donate "la destruction volontaire des livres." The greatest date in the annals of bibliolytie is 1790, when church property was confiscated by the revolutionary government. During that year, in Paris alone, 808,120 volumes taken from monasteries and convents were burned, and throughout the whole country the total destroyed is said to have amounted to 4,194,400.

RAGTIME AT HIS FUNERAL

Louisville Barber Provides Funds to Make It Occasion of Jollity and Feasting.

Basing his belief on the argument, "The only weeping that should be done over a man should be 'wept' at his birth," Frederick G. Burghardt, barber, living at 211 South Shelby street, has made his will, wherein he provides funds for the hiring of a brass band to play only ragtime tunes at his funeral, another sum of money for the serving of a lunch and accompanying drinks, and an additional sum for his undertaker, who is to place him face down in the casket that "he may rest comfortably." His body he wants covered with hyacinths and rosebuds.

Burghardt does not look upon the provisions of his will as being humorous. On the contrary he declares he is so serious that he has frustrated the secretary of the Barbers' Aid to set aside the benefits accruing to him from that organization for the purposes outlined. Asked for the reason for his unusual desires, he said:

"I don't see anything unusual about them. A will, as I understand it, generally is the last wish of a man, and if I cannot do as I wish, what is the use of making a will?

"For a number of years before becoming a barber," he continued, "I was employed by undertakers. I saw so many dead persons that I became hardened. I wondered why people cried at funerals, for I always have insisted that as we don't know whether the dead person is happy or otherwise, his friends should not cry over him. I have witnessed the passing of fourteen members of my family and while my feelings were sorrowful, not a tear have I shed. In fact, I cannot recall the time when I did cry. I have no one in the world to whom I should leave my little insurance money and I think I ought to be allowed to do as I please."

They Put an End to it

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

So ne so much that they actually think it musical.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pill, to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amou claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. DROWNS IN OLD WELL

Child Just Learning to Walk Breaks Through Loose Boards.

Port Huron, Mich., May 28.—Falling into a well which was thought to have been empty, Charles Chase, the fourteen-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph P. Chase, met death by drowning. The fatal accident occurred in the rear of the parents's home on the river road, several miles west of this city. The boy was the youngest of five children.

He was just beginning to walk and was playing about the farm alone at the time. The well had been covered with some loose boards. It had been unused for several years and as a result of the heavy rains during the past few days there was nearly two feet of water in it.

MAN STARVES TO DEATH

Entrance to Esophagus Closed by Foreign Growth.

Petoskey, Mich., May 28.—As the result of a growth which pressed against and finally closed the esophagus, thus preventing the consumption of food and causing a process of gradual starvation, Colonel George W. Dickinson, clerk of Emmet county for seventeen years, died at the age of seventy years.

He was a Civil War veteran, came to Harbor Springs in 1874 and moved to Petoskey in 1900. He belonged to several Masonic lodges, the Elks, Knights of Pythias and the G. A. R.

ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN

Newly Chosen President of Amherst College, Formerly of Brown.

AMHERST, MASS.—Alexander Meiklejohn, the newly chosen president of Amherst college, is in his forty-first year. For eleven years he was dean of Brown university, of which he is a graduate. Like President Schurman of Cornell and Dr. G. L. Patton, who was president of Princeton for fourteen years, he was born outside the United States, being a native of Rochdale, England.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—Owing to the fact that the Michigan state board of auditors is not authorized to spend more than $100,000 in a year to repair state buildings destroyed by fire or storm it will be necessary for Governor Osborn to call a special session of the legislature in order to secure an appropriation to rebuild the structure destroyed at the Michigan School for the Deaf at Flint if any action along that line is to be taken this year. Unless the governor does this building operations will have to be postponed until the legislature of 1913 relieves the situation.

BATTLE CREEK—A most severe storm of cyclonic fury accompanied by thunder and a cloudburst visited Joppa, a little town eight miles south of Battle Creek. Every window and windmill in the vicinity was blown down, six barns were destroyed while chicken coops, corn cribs and other outbuildings were carried into distant fields. Fred Sigourney, a farmer, was struck by lightning while unhitching his horse, and rendered unconscious. He is suffering temporary attack of paralysis as the result.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

KALAMAOO—When eight of the striking Kalamazoo corset workers were released from jail at the expiration of their sentences, they were escorted to the Trades Council hall, where a rally had been planned in their honor. Three more gain their liberty Thursday, only one having received a sentence longer than ten days. There were practically no new developments in the strike situation.

OLIVET—By vote of 231 to 5 residents of Olivet voted to grant the Commonwealth Power company a thirty-year franchise to construct and operate its electric light lines in the village. For a number of years there has been opposition to granting any kind of a franchise for electric lights. The Olivet people have been perfectly satisfied with kerosene lights and have been fearful that the cost of electric street lights would make them too much of a luxury for the size of the town.

JACKSON — Suddenly awakened from his sleep by the smashing of glass, John Hemans, Michigan Central station agent at Rives Junction, found himself looking down the barrel of a revolver in the hands of a masked man who demanded that he hand over the contents of the cash drawer in the office. Hemans complied with the demand and the burglar made his escape with $60 from the till, as well as a few dollars which Hemans had on his person.

Frederick VIII Placed in Abbey near Predecessors.

Preacher Makes Remarks About Germany in the Presence of its Crown Prince—Widowed Queen Overcome at Private Services.

At Roskilde, Denmark, the body of King Frederick VIII. of Denmark was buried in Denmark's abbey among the tombs of thirty-three of his predecessors on the Danish throne.

The service, which lasted an hour, was impressive, the feature being the hymns and anthems sung by singers connected with the royal opera and a special "Farewell" by the noted Danish composer, P. E. Lange-Moeller.

The cathedral was draped simply in black and white, and the coffin rested on a high catafalque beneath a black canopy. King Christian X. and Queen Alexandrina, their relatives and many foreign princes and special envoys were grouped around the bier.

Two hundred thousand mourners thronged the short route along which the funeral procession passed from the railroad station to the cathedral. Preceded by a military band playing funeral marches, the hearse was followed by the kings of Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Greece and all of the male members of the Danish royal family, with a number of foreign princes and special envoys on foot. The queens and princesses were in carriages.

Before the body was removed from Copenhagen, where it had lain in state, a family service was held in the chapel of Christianborg palace. All the members of the royal family attended. The widowed queen, Louise, was so overcome that King Christian X. and his brothers had to support her when she left the chapel. The coffin was removed from the catafalque by officers of the army and navy and placed in the hearse. When the procession moved off all the royal personages, special envoys and a huge gathering of deputations from various cities and societies followed to the station, where the coffin was placed in a funeral car draped with black cloth with an immense crown on the top.

A memorial oration was delivered by the officiating chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Paull, and was marked by two references to Germany's attack on Denmark during the youth of Frederick VIII. As the crown prince of Germany was sitting in the front row of the princes the remarks of the chaplain caused a mild sensation.

MAN IS HANGED TWICE

Rope Breaks When Trap Is Sprung First Time.

As he wildly shreiked out a vain protestation of innocence when the trap was sprung at Lancaster, Pa., the body of Antonio Romezzo, doomed to die for the murder of a companion, Tony Serafino, was shot downward from the gallows here.

As it reached the bottom of the drop the rope broke just above the knot and the body crashed down to the prison court yard, where several of the spectators toppled over, horrified by the occurrence.

The sheriff and his deputies hurried down and picked up the form of the murderer, rendered unconscious by the fall. Another knot was tied in the rope and it was readjusted and the trap sprung for the second time. This time the hemp held, and the condemned man died slowly of strangulation.

GRAND RAPIDS—Following directly the sensational testimony given by Head Nurse Lueka during an investigation of an inmate's death several weeks ago that the patients at the county house were given hypodermic injections to end their misery, the building committee of the board of supervisors is making a rigid inspection of the county farm. A new infirmary will be recommended.

GRAND RAPIDS—As many as thirty molders of the Grand Rapids Foundry company walked out, demanding that the interior of the building be cleaned and the many obstacles lying on the floor be removed so as to better facilitate working conditions. The walkout came a few moments after an accident to William Andrews, a sixty-one-year-old employe, when a 500-pound flask fell on him.

PETOSKEY—During a remarkably severe electric storm, lightning struck the home of Joseph F. Finney, causing considerable damage and rendering four members of the family unconscious. Two girls, Marie Kethlidge and Ruth Marsh, were injured when they fell five feet through an undermined cement sidewalk. The rain descended in torrents.

GRAND RAPIDS—Clay H. Hollister, who is vice president of the old National bank, announces that the project for a new Pantlind hotel has been approved. The tentative plans of Frank M. Andrews of New York for an eight-story modern hotel, costing upwards of $1,250,000, will be accepted.

ALMA—Four Michigan joy riders came to grief as the result of a joy ride. The excitement seekers borrowed the touring car of S N. Sweet, and journeyed to Riverdale to a dance, returning the car in the wee hours of the morning. Warrants were issued for their arrest.

HASTINGS—John W. Scheidt who is a well known Lake Odessa merchant, and his wife and four children had a remarkable escape from death when their motor car, which had just been purchased, turned turtle on Doty hill, in the northern part of Woodland township.

LAPEER—After a painful and lingering illness covering a period of years, Mrs. John T. Rich, wife of Former Governor Rich, now collector of customs at Port Huron, died at the old farm home in Elba, aged seventy-six years.

MONROE—A special interurban car, southbound on the Detroit, Monroe and Toledo electric line, struck and almost instantly killed Mary Lobb, seven years old, near Sibley. It was said the child became confused and got on the wrong track.

"I Am So Happy."

Lestrange all day; he did not lift the gauntlet.

"You are perfectly free," he conceded, "which gives you the opportunity of being generous."

His son moved, flushing through his pallor.

"I wish you would not put it that way, sir," he objected.

"There is no other way. I have been wrong and I have no control over you; will you come home?"

There was no other argument but that that could have succeeded, and the three who knew Lestrange knew that could not fail.

"You want me because I am a Ffrench," David rebelled in the final protest. "You have a substitute."

"Perhaps I want you otherwise. And we will not speak in passion; there can be no substitute for you."

"Ffrench and Ffrench," murmured Dick coaxingly. "We can run that factory, Lestrange!"

"There's more than steering-knuckles needing your eye on them. And you love the place, Mr. David," said Bailey from his corner.

From one to the other David's glance went, to rest on Emily's delicate, earnest face in its setting of yellow-bronze curls. Full and straight her dark eyes answered his, the convent-bred Emily's answer to his pride and old resentment and new reluctance to yield his liberty.

"After all, you were born a Ffrench," she reminded, her soft accents just audible. "If that is your work?"

Very slowly David turned to his father.

"I never learned to do things by halves," he said. "If you want me, sir—"

Rupert was discovered asleep in a camp-chair outside the tent, a few minutes later, when Dick went in search of him.

"The limousine's waiting," his awakener informed him. "You don't feel bad, do you?"

The mechanician rose cautiously, wincing.

"Well, if every joint in my chassis wasn't sore, I'd feel better," he admitted grimly. "But I'm still running. What did you kiss me awake for, when I need my sleeps?"

"Did you suppose we could get Lestrange home without you, Jack Rupert?"

"I ain't supposing you could. I'm ready."

The rest of the party were already in the big car, with one exception.

"Take a last look, Rupert," bade David, as he stood in the dark paddock. "We're retired; come help me get used to it."

Rupert passed a glance over the deserted track.

"I guess my sentiment-tank has given out," he sweetly acknowledged. "The Mercury factory sounds pretty good to me, Darling. And I guess we can make a joy ride out of living, on any track, if we enter for it."

"I guess we can," laughed David Ffrench. "Get in opposite Emily. We're going home to try."

THE END.

BUTCHER'S SON WAS A KING

But Orelius Antony I. Did Not Rule Long Over Araucania in South America.

The death of "Princess" Marguerita, daughter of "King Orelius Antony I.," in a poorhouse on the Danish island of Reyagade brings to light a romance known to few, and half forgotten even by these.

"King Orelius Antony I." was the son of a French butcher who lived at Perigord, the city of pies. His name was Antoine Tounens. He studied law, but having a taste for adventure, set out for South America. That was in 1861.

His wanderings took him to Araucania, where he persuaded the inhabitants to set up an independent monarchy and make him king. This did not suit Chile, which sent a force of troops to Araucania. King Orelius Antony I. was put in prison and remained there until the French government obtained his release. His efforts to be reinstated on the vacant Araucanian throne were futile and the former king returned to France and obtained employment as a waiter in Asnieres. He died there in 1878.

While her father reigned in faroff Araucania the Princess Marguerita, an only child, was supported by revenues from the Araucanian treasury. It was a generous supply of money that was sent to her and she had many suitors. Eventually she married a Danish officer, who had saved her life in a shipwreck.

Just before King Orelius Antony I. was deposed the consort of the princess committed suicide. The princess went to live in Denmark, and, her supplies having ceased, she was obliged to seek refuge in the almshouse, where she died.—New York Sun.

Sold Wife to Friend.

At the village of Utznach, Switzerland, the other day, a curious sale took place. With her own consent a woman was sold by her husband to another man, an Italian, and a friend of the Swiss couple. The price asked by the affectionate husband was four dollars. To further "legalize" the bargain, the Italian procured two witnesses to the transaction and had a contract written on stamped government paper.

ARCHBALD CASE CHARGE DENIED

Edward E. Loomis Demands His Name Be Cleared.

RAILWAY OFFICIAL INDIGNANT

Calls the Testimony Concerning Him in the Archbald Investigation "Vicious Lies"—Strong in Denunciation.

Washington, June 3. — Edward E. Loomis, vice persident and general manager of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, demanded that the house judiciary committee clear his name of "vicious lies" which he said appeared in the testimony concerning him in the investigation of charges against Judge R. W. Archbald of the commerce court.

Loomis was indignant over the statements of C. G. Boland, who told the committee he understood that Judge Archbald, Mr. Loomis, and President Truesdale of the Lackawanna and Western were to be the beneficiaries of a $60,000 increase in the price for which Boland and his brothers were to sell the Marion Coal company to the railroad.

Mr. Loomis denounced this testimony as an "unqualified lie." He testified that he believed that Judge Archbald's interest in the sale of the Marion Coal company to the railroad was simply the result of Archband's friendship for the Bolands and his acquaintance with the railroad officials.

William S. Jennin, vice president and general counsel for the Lackawanna, denied that an attempt had been made to secure from Judge Archbald, when he was on the district bench, a decision which would eliminate the Marion Coal company as a complainant against the Lackawanna before the interstate commerce commission.

Judge Robert W. Archbald's negotiations with the Girard estate of Philadelphia for culm banks on the Lehigh Valley railroad were considered.

Superintendent George E. Kirkpatrick of the Girard estate described the transaction. He read from his files letters showing that Judge Archbald and three partners applied to James Archbald, Jr., engineer of the estate of the Pottsville, Pa., to lease the culm banks of the Girard mines being operated by the Leight Coal company. James Archbald, Jr., is a nephew to the commerce court judge.

In addition to letters to the judge the witness described his personal application for the lease. The bank was not leased.

TO PREVENT FOREST FIRES

Rural and Star Route Mail Carriers to Co-Operate with Rangers.

Washington, June 3.—By an order he has issued Postmaster General Hitchcock has strengthened the forest fire preventive forces by almost 65,000 men. These men are the rural and star route carriers of the postal service, who are directed to co-operate with the forest rangers and wardens whenever and wherever possible.

Forest fires last year destroyed approximately $50,000,000 worth of property.

Rejected Suitor Kills Himself.

Keota, Ia., June 3.—George Hubbs, aged twenty-one, a farm hand, after quarreling with Miss Cora Anderson, for whose father he worked, stepped into the road in front of the house, pressed the muzzle of a double barreled shotgun to his heart and killed himself instantly.

IOWA PRIMARIES TODAY

Fierce Fight Has Raged between Kenyon and Young.

Three-Cornered Contest for Republican Gubernatorial Nomination Now Ended.

Des Moines, Ia., June 3.—The contest for the United States senatorship which will be decided at the statewide primaries today between Senator W. S. Kenyon, a leader of the progressives, and Lafe Young, former senator, a standard bearer for the old guard, has been one of the most sensational ever known in this state. Cheered by the defeat of Cummins in the delivery of the state to Taft, the regulars went into the fight to administer a body blow to the progressives.

A three-cornered contest has been waged between P. G. Holden, George W. Clarke and A. V. Proudfoot for the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket. Holden is a progressive and is running on his record as a "seed corn man."

Owing to the interest centered in these two contests it is expected that the vote will be unusually large. Both county and state officers are being nominated.

Man 26 Years in Service Stops Train As He Gives Up Life.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 3.—After twenty-six years' service as an engineer George Hogle, fifty-three years old, died of apoplexy in the cab of his locomotive at East Buffalo.

When the train came to a sudden stop a switchman noticed that the engineer's seat was vacant. He found Hogle lying dead on the floor. In falling the engineer had retained his grip of the throttle lever, stopping the train as he dropped unconscious from his seat.

SLOAN UNCONFIRMED

MORE NEW YORK WAITERS GO OUT

Hotel and Restaurant Keepers Not Perturbed.

ASK RECOGNITION OF UNION

Ritz-Carlton About Only First Class Place Not Affected—Of 52,000 Employes in 225 Hotels, Only 7,000 or 8,000 Are Striking.

New York, June 3.—The strike of the waiters and other hotel and restaurant workers continued its onward way with a walkout of more waiters during the dinner hour at Pabst's restaurant in One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth street, at the New Weston "family" hotel at Madison avenue and Forty-Ninth street, at the Empire and at the Hotel Navarre.

The troubles at these hotels followed a quiet Sunday, during which the waiters held all-day committee meetings that were anything but harmonious, judging from the angry exclamations that issued from open windows. The Ritz-Carlton is now about the only hotel of the first class in the city not affected by the strike and the hotel men seemed to be anything but perturbed.

There are about 52,000 employes of all kinds in 225 of the big hotels, according to Mark A. Caldwell, and of these the strike leaders say there are from 7,000 to 8,000 on strike. The hotel men laugh at these figures, as they laughed pretty generally about the strike as a whole. The proprietors would cut the strikers' figures about in two.

President Reed of the Hotel Men's association, Managing Directer Laupter of Delmonico's, Manager Snedeken of the Knickerbocker and other hotel managements said that there is an applicant for every vacancy, at some hotels two applicants for each job, and in many cases no vacancies for any applicants. On the other hand it was said by strikers themselves that they have only about $8,000 or $9,000 in their treasury. Around strike headquarters it was admitted that strikers are already beginning to apply for local assistance.

The insurmountable difficulty at this stage of the strike is the question of recognition of the union. Edward M. Tierney, and, in fact, all the hotel men, repeated that they will close up their dining rooms altogether rather than recognize the union.

PREFERS TEACHERS PAST 30

Elwood Superintendent Will Discard Applicants Susceptible to Cupid.

Elwood, Ind., June 3.—One woman teacher in the high school and eight in the grades announced to Superintendent J. L. Clauser before leaving the city for the summer vacation that they are to be married during the next few months.

Mr. Clauser says Cupid has hit the schools a heavier blow this year than ever before, and future applicants who have passed the thirty mark and are still single will be given the preference.

London, June 3.—There is now every indication that the strike of the dock employes will be a fight to a finish. The only remaining hope of adjustment is placed in the government, which is expected to pass some legislation acceptable to both sides.

The strikers are in an ugly and defiant mood while the employers earnestly believe that if they put up a stiff front they will be able to break the transport workers' union for all time.

HOSTS OF G. O. P. BEGIN TO GATHER

NOW NO OPPOSITION TO ROOT

Republican National Convention Promises to Furnish Gay Social Season for Leading Women of Country Who Will Gather There.

Chicago, June 3.—Early arrivals for the preliminaries to the Republican national convention at the Coliseum, June 18, are turning the annex to the great hall into a place of bustle and stir.

Members of the committee and subcommittee of arrangements have work a-plenty and already they are wondering what it is going to be later on, when there is so much to do now.

There will be no opposition offered by the Roosevelt forces to the election of Senator Root as temporary chairman of the convention.

Such a decision is the result of a conference at Sagamore Hill in which the Roosevelt delegations from the three states of Illinois, Maine and North Carolina, were more or less officially represented. Futhermore, the preliminary plan of action, which is to be followed, was fairly well defined.

Executive committees of the Roosevelt delegation from each state, will foregather in this city at a date several days in advance of that set for the opening of the convention and they will define the organization and work out a plan for the struggle in the convention.

That a social side will be a feature of the Chicago convention is presaged by the fact that many of the committeemen now gathering are bringing their wives with them.

Mrs. New, wife of Colonel Harry S. New, chairman of the committee on arrangements, was one of the first women to arrive in Chicago for the convention. She is from Indianapolis, as is also Mrs. James B. Kealing, who arrived to join her husband, one of the Taft leaders.

From Portland, Ore., comes one of the belles of far western society in the person of Mrs. Ralph E. Williams. Mr. Williams is a member of the subcommittee on arrangements and the couple are stopping at the Blackstone hotel.

No formal plan for entertainment of the visiting wives have been made, but they are expected to form themselves as needed.

BURNHAM IS CREMATED

Wife of Architect Returns with Ashes of Late Husband.

Heidelberg, Germany, June 3.—Daniel H. Burnham, the Chicago architect who passed away here, died at the Academic hospital of Bright's disease and hardening of the arteries. The body was cremated.

Mr. Burnham arrived here a week ago accompanied by his wife, daughter and son-in-law. His strength was exhausted by the trip and he took a turn for the worse. He was unable to rally and the physicians held out no hope when he was received at the hospital from the hotel.

Mrs. Burnham and her son-in-law will leave for Chicago with the ashes on the first steamer.

CLAUDE ALLEN FOUND GUILTY

Convicted of Killing Judge Thornton L. Massie in Hillsville Courthouse.

Wytheville, Va., June 3.—The jury found Claude Swanson Allen guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Judge Thornton L. Massie at Hillsville in March. It recommended his punishment be fixed at fifteen years in the penitentiary.

Sentence was suspended in order that he may testify in the other cases growing out of the shooting up of the Carroll county court.

WARRANT FOR THOS. WATSON

Man Who Ran for President Accused of Misuse of Mails.

Macon, Ga., June 3.—A warrant for the arrest of Thomas E. Watson, once candidate for president on the Populist ticket, was issued by United States District Attorney Alexander Akerman. The warrant charges Mr. Watson with sending obscene matter through the mails.

The warrant is an outcome of an article in Mr. Watson's magazine alleged to reflect on the Catholic religion.

LINER CARMANIA DAMAGED BY FIRE

Destructive Flames Attack Vessel at Liverpool Dock.

UPPER DECKS ARE WRECKED

Finest Staterooms Ruined by Smoke, Fire and Water—Steerage Also Reported Gone—Fire Finally Under Control.

Liverpool, June 3.—The Cunard liner Carmania was greatly damaged by fire here at the West Huskissen dock, in the same berth where the Lucania was burned a year ago.

The outbreak was discovered at 5 p. m. The fire was a stubborn one. There seemed to be a separate fire in half a dozen centers and columns of thick smoke poured from every opening amidships from the boat deck to the water line.

Engine after engine arrived from the city in response to the alarm of fire until every available fireman in Liverpool, besides hundreds of police, were engaged in fighting the flames. The Carmania soon had a considerable list to starboard, which was caused by the immense volume of water that had been pumped into her. The list kept on increasing as the night wore on. The upper decks have apparently been completely wrecked. These include all the finest staterooms. The steerage too seems to be gone, but it is impossible as yet to determine this as an investigation is impossible owing to the heat and smoke.

It was rumored that there were 1,000 barrels of oil on board the Carmania and this caused a fear of a general conflagration which would involve the dock and other ships, but after several hours, although the fire on the Carmania was still burning, the danger of its spread was regarded as having passed.

DOYLE SUCCEEDS ROSE

Fire Marshal Takes Hold as Secretary of State.

Assumes Duties Monday Morning, and Will Make No Radical Changes in Clerical Force.

Springfield, Ill., June 3.—Cornelius J. Doyle of Greenfield was appointed secretary of state of Illinois by Governor Deneen to fill the vacancy caused by the sudden death of Secretary James A. Rose.

The governor's action followed the unanimous election of Mr. Doyle by the Republican state committee as the successor to Mr. Rose as the Republican nominee for secretary of state on the Republican state ticket.

The name of Louis L. Emerson of Mount Vernon was suggested in the state committee meeting, but was withdrawn after a discussion of the situation. Mr. Emerson will have the support of the regular state organization for the Republican nomination for state treasurer two years hence.

To qualify as secretary of state, Mr. Doyle filed a bond in the penal sum of $100,000, which was approved by two justices of the supreme court and by the governor The bond was prepared in Springfield and submitted to Justice Vickers at East St. Louis and to Justice Farmer at Vandalia.

Mr. Doyle took over the office Monday morning.

Mr. Doyle resigned as state fire marshal before he was sworn in as secretary of state.

The understanding in Springfield exists that Mr Doyle will make no radical changes in the personnel of the clerical force in the department. Secretary Rose had been in office since 897, and had built up a trained and experienced force of experts in charge of the many bureaus in his office. Some are under civil service, but many of them are not, and some of those who are within the merit law attacked the constitutionality of the law in the courts.

BILLS FAIL TO PASS

Illinois Legislature Adjourns Until Evening of June 3.

At Springfield, Ill., Thursday without the necessary two-thirds attendance present to pass the remaining appropriation bills, the two houses adjourned under point resolution until Monday, June 3, at 5 p. m. At that time two days will intervene before final adjournment, giving the senate an opportunity to pass the house bills which are before it.

With only eighty-six house members present, the remaining appropriation bills were not put upon their passage

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

The editor has been having a bushel of fun for a few days clearing his west field of stone while it is being plowed for corn The field is a little over half plowed and he has already used fifty pounds of dynamite. We have drawn about that many loads of stone off the field by the help of four or five of the beet weeders who are here waiting for business to open up in the beet fields. We have been taking all these pains so that in the future Horace Brown can plow it with a sulky plow.—Clinton Local.

We learn that E. Cory DePuy of Detroit was granted a verdict of $1,000 against the estate of Catherine N Cushman for whom Miss Depuy was business manager. She was to be remembered by Mrs. Cushman, in her will, for services rendered, but Mrs. Cushman failed to do so, hence the suit. Miss Depuy was a Macon girl and was quite well known in this village as a relative of the first Mrs. S. W. Lockwood.—Manchester Enterprise.

Miss E. Cora Depuy was a former Tecumseh girl and has many friends in town who are interested in her career.

BROUGHT DOWN TWO VICTIMS

But the Deer Hunter Got Surprise of His Life When He Examined Them.

One of the best hunting stories of the season comes from northern Wisconsin, where a prominent resident of Phillips, accompanied by a friend, slipped out of town one evening two days in advance of the legal opening day of the season for killing deer. His object was to hunt deer at night by the air of a strong reflector dark lantern. He succeeded in a way far beyond his most optimistic hopes in killing something, but his overwhelming surprise on first viewing the "game" may be better imagined than written, and his language was horrid.

He drove his own team of horses, valued at $600, and some distance from town he turned into an abandoned logging road, traversing it for several miles. Then he tied up the team and prowled about in the woods for half an hour with his light.

Suddenly he heard a snort, and the light revealed a pair of glaring eyes from some animal a short distance away. In his excitement he handed the light to his friend and banged at the eyes. Down tumbled the animal, and instantly there was a commotion in the same spot, and the light revealed another pair of glaring eyes. The hunter quickly fired and the second animal dropped.

The hunters rushed forward with their light, and to their dismay found that both their horses were shot and killed. They had circled about and confronted the team in their ramblings.

MORE DIAMONDS IN BRAZIL

Excitement Caused By New Discovery of Great Field in the State of Goyaz.

Newspapers just received from Rio de Janeiro show symptoms of excitement over reports of the recent discovery of a great diamond field in the state of Goyaz, republic of Brazil, in a little stream called the Garcas, one of the minor affluents of the Araguaya, which flows north toward the Amazon. The state of Goyaz is directly west of the state of Bahia and lies near the center of Brazil. It is a wild and thinly settled region, the scant population about the diamond fields being composed of Indians.

The news of this find has already, it is said, brought to the diamond country a thousand eager "garimpeiros" (diamond hunters). The first finds in the field indicate that the stream of Garcas contains prodigious riches which may be secured without extreme labor. The exact location and course of this stream are scarcely known, as it appears on few maps. The states that are even within three or four hundred miles of the field are now interested in exploring their own rivers in the hope of finding like diamond deposits.

TO ABOLISH GERMAN SALUTE

Movement Afoot Against Taking Off the Hat on Occasions of Meeting and Separation.

The progress in urbanity—the art of city life—which is taking place among modern Germans is illustrated by the movement for modifying, or altogether doing away with the "German salute," says a cablegram to the New York American. Under the expression is meant the traditional fashion of taking off the hat on occasions of meeting or separation. It is a highly elaborate performance, in three motions, suggesting military precision, the first being the raising of the hat with stiffly extended arm, the second the lowering of it to the knee with a downward cutting motion and the third the similarly precise replacement on the head. The action between adults appears formal enough to draw a smile from foreigners of easier manners, but it becomes laughable when one sees it practiced with all gravity between a pair of schoolboys or college students. How deeply the "German salute" is engrained in the national forms of so-called politeness is proved by the story of the independently minded subordinate official who steadily refused to make the traditional obeisance to the "chief" and got the alternative of making it or being dismissed. In Germany it is etiquette for a gentleman meeting a lady of his acquaintance in the street to take off his hat to her before she bows. In Anglo-Saxon countries the reverse is the practice, and an American woman would feel not a little astonishment, as well doubtless as some amusement, if she were brought up against one of her male friends saluting her in the German fashion.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

"Oddfellowship!
Working in manhood's prime and ardent youth
In that sublimest, most ennobling strife,
To show for man, best Friendship, Love and Truth."

In Memory of Brother I. P. Kaiser P. G. who died May 26, 1912

"So let him sleep that dreamless sleep, our sorrows clustering 'round his head:
Be comforted, ye loved who weep, he lives with God—he is not dead."

Once again Death hath summoned a Brother Odd Fellow, and the golden gateway to the Eternal City has opened to welcome him to his home. He has completed his work in the ministering to the wants of the afflicted, in shedding light into darkened souls and in bringing joy into the places of misery, and as his reward has received the plaudit, "well done," from the Supreme Master.

And Whereas, The all-wise and merciful Father has called our beloved and respected Brother home,

And Whereas, He having been a true and faithful brother of our Mystic Order therefore be it

Resolved, That Tecumseh Lodge No. 14 I. O. O. F., in testimony of her loss, tenders to the family of the deceased brother our sincere condolence in this deep affliction, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family.

Green be his memory, in the Order's heart
He loved so well, through all his true life's span;
Bless'd be his rest, who acted well his part,
Who honor'd God in doing good to man.

BACCALAURATE SERVICES

The Baccalaurate services were held Sunday evening in the Methodist church Rev. G. N. Kennedy delivering the sermon. A short musical program was given before the address Miss Mary Kreidler gave a solo, "Oh Lord Have Mercy" which she rendered in a most charming manner, her voice being at its very best,

Mr. Fenn also gave a solo "Abide With Me" with fine effect.

A violin and cornet duet by Lynn Rogers and Clare Camburn was received with much pleasure by the audience.

The girls quartet, Bonnie Brown, Blanche Snyder, Vera Shaw and Josephine Orr also favored the audience with a fine selection, and the choir gave the anthem "Rejoice in the Lord."

The address by Rev. G. N. Kennedy was listened to with marked attention and was full of good suggestions for the class of 1912.

Stead's Service on the "Pall Mall Gazette"

In 1880 Mr. John Morley, now Lord Morley, became editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, and Mr. Stead was invited to become his assistant editor. Mr. Morley, after two or three years, went into Parliament and gave up the editorship. Mr Stead being appointed to succeed him. Whereupon great things happened in London journalism. Mr Stead put amazing energy and fertility of resource into his editorial work, and surrounded himself with young men of talent and brilliancy who helped him make the paper the most alert and the most interesting in England, while also leading its contemporaries in intellectual and literary qualities. It was in those days that Mr. Stead's sensational but well-informed work achieved the reconstruction of the British navy. The Pall Mall Gazette led in every field of moral, social, and political progress. It was the apostle of friendship rather than enmity between England and Russia. Its daring exposure of conditions under which young girls were forced into "white slavery" led to the enactment of better laws and to permanent social reforms, although Mr. Stead went to jail for three months on a technical charge resulting from methods used by his assistants to obtain evidence.—From "William T. Stead," by Albert Shaw, in the American Review of Reviews for June.

GEORGE W. MARSDEN

Mrs. Alen Titus
Tecumseh, Mich.,

Madam:—I am directed by the Governor to state it is with regret you are informed that George W. Marsden late C Co., 8th Regiment, Iowa Inf., died in the hospital here at 6:20 o'clock a. m. today. Body will be interred in the Home Cemetery with military honors at 8:30 o'clock a. m. Monday the 3rd instant, unless the relatives call for the body before that hour.

Very respectfully,
A. S. Galbraith,
June 1, 1912 Adjutant.

The above letter was received by Mrs. Alen Titus Monday, but to late to consult the relatives as to the disposition of the body of Mr. Marsden and he was buried in the Home Cemetery at Dayton. Mr. Marsden was 75 years old at the time of his death, and had been in the hospital for the past two years For the past nine years he has made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Alen Titus when ever he has been in Tecumseh, and they feel that they have lost a dear and faithful friend.

CARD OF THANKS

We heartily thank our kind neighbors and friends, who so kindly assisted us during our sad bereavement. We also thank them for the beautiful floral pieces.

15TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harris celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage on Saturday evening June 1. About sixty of their friends and neighbors gathered for the occasion, and a very pleasant time is the report from those present.

They were the recipients of several pieces of cut glass and table linen as reminders of the good will of their friends.

Light refreshments were served during the evening. The children of the company of whom there was quite a number had a marshmallow roast on the lawn. The guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Eli Bush of Philidelphia, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Will McIntyre and daughter of Dundee, Messrs. Geo. and Frank Harris and wives of Adrian. That they may have many more happy returns of the day, is the wish of there many friends.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Misses Anna and Alice Cutting gave a very pretty miscellaneous shower for Miss Mae Lowry Friday night. Short pieces of poetry were tied to strings which the bride to be followed to the end where the gifts were concealed. The poems were both very appropriate and witty causing much merriment.

A dainty lunch was served.

Those present were the Misses Edith Gray, Jennie Gillespie, Helen Wilson, and Sarah Platt. Mesdames Robt McCoy, Geo. Field, Herbert Temple, Edward Lowry, B. R. Weld and Howard Bredow.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Master Webster Anderson had a birthday party Saturday June 1, celebrating his 6th birthday. About fifteen of his little friends met him at the home of his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hicks and a very merry time was enjoyed by all.

Dainty refreshments were served and the tables were made beautiful with flowers. The place cards were very unique and were presented by his aunt Mrs. H. T. Dunn who bought them while she was abroad. The young man received a number of birthday gifts from his friends

A FORMER MARSHALL RECTOR FOR TECUMSEH

Rev. Frederick Hewitt Will Take Charge of St Peter's Parish and the Clinton Church Also,

Marshall, Mich., June 1.—Rev. Frederick Hewitt, formerly pastor of Trinity Episcopal church of this city, has accepted a call to St. Peter's parish at Tecumseh. He left there to become chaplain of Riverside hospital and Blackwell prison in New York city He has also occupied a pulpit at Midland.

1 O'CLOCK TO 24 O'CLOCK

France has inaugerated a new system of time to do away with the awkward a. m. and p. m. in the railroad and telegraph service. the numerals on the face of their time pieces now run from one to twenty four. The change has been made in all parts of France. It is claimed that the new order of recording time will result in greater accuracy and speed in dispatching trains and sending telegrams as has been proved by experiments in the telegraph branch,

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

There will be four women delegates from the equal franchise States to the Republican National Convention which meets in Chicago in June.

Cables from Wales report that the Independent Labor Party in annual conference on May 27 adopted resolutions strongly declaring for equal suffrage and favoring legislation to to that effect. The Independent Labor Party being very powerful in Wales, this action is regarded as an unusual victory for woman suffrage.

Ohio suffragists claim the city of Cleveland as their strenghold. It is said that all the city officials, from Mayor Baker down, are not only in favor of the amendment but actively supporting the campaign now being waged in the interest of votes for women.

In Portland, Oregon, the leading hotels have placed their parlors and assembly rooms at the disposal of the suffragists, free of charge, and rousing suffrage meetings are constantly held, addressed by forceful speakers of prominence and standing.

The Community Welfare League of Missouri is endeavoring to bring woman suffrage before the voters of the State under Initiative, Ten thousand petitions have been circulated, and if a sufficent number of petitions are secured the question will be voted on at the presidential election in November.

TECUMSEH BEAUTIFUL

Among the good things that are agitating the cities and our State is that of Forestry as applied to town life, and at present Tecumseh is in great need of intelligent understanding of tree life for the trees of our village have reached that state where they need trimming, so many dying at the top.

Also new trees, new varieties, and everything that tends to make our village more artistic and beautiful,

UNIVERSAL
Portland Cement

The contractors who are building the Mausoleum at Tecumseh use nothing but the UNIVERSAL brand of cement. They claim that this class of work is the highest grade of concrete work and only the most uniform cement can be used.

Upon test it has been found by the contractors that every sack of this brand is absolutely uniform and is always just exactly alike. Mausoleums over the whole country are built of this cement for the above reasons. The prices are no higher than the common kinds. We are the sole agents for this vicinity.

INSURANCE $180,000

Fire was discovered by W. C. Knapp the night watchman as he was making his midnight rounds. He saw the blaze through a window as he was coming out of another part of the building. He at once called the fire department and in seven minutes from the time he saw the fire they were on the spot.

Owing to the low pressure it was almost impossible to reach the second story windows and then it was not strong enough to break the glass in the windows. The delay in getting proper water pressure was said to be due to defective working of the alarm system. The telephone exchange reported the fire to the department, thus locating the fire when they turned in the electric alarms, the fire bell gave only two or three taps. The firemen however make no complaint against the company considerdig the conditions.

Frantic efforts were made to save the cars and tools from the machine rooms, but the fire made such a rapid headway that their efforts were almost useless.

One of the veteran fireman of the city Christian Schoen was instantly killed by the falling walls and Leo Robb, a college student who volunteered in the department was slightly injured.

Through nearly every foot of the city's hose was used and the water pressure steadily increased yet it was impossible to save the factory which is practically a complete ruin.

RUNAWAY

Oscar Lidke had quite a a novel experience for his first day on the milk wagon, Monday.

Coming down Waldron's hill the holdback strap broke and the horse started on a run and was not stopped until he reached Williamson's corner, Mr. Lidke held on the lines bravely but was unable to stop him.

No particular damage done except that the milk was quite thoroughly churned during the rapid transit over the road.

Down with the Weeds.

If you want a banner corn crop any year you must cultivate the corn and this year special attention should be given the crop on account of the lateness of planting. Weeds must be subdued or the corn does not have a fair chance, and the good early start is what counts. The Oliver Cultivator is death to weeds and is easy for team and man. Balance frame, horse lift and many features not shown by others. The large sales we have had for 3 years show how well they take where introduced. We have them ready for you. They Put an End to it

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills, For sale by all druggists.

CANDLES IGNITE COFFIN

Man and Mother Seriously Injured by Flames.

New York Tenement Is Set Afire and Many Persons Escape Across Roofs.

New York, June 3.—Two candles beside a casket containing the bodies of Mrs. Oscar Warner and her baby on the third floor of 441 West Forty-Ninth street, tipped over and set fire to the drapings of the coffin. Mr. Warner, who had been sitting beside the casket most of the night, jumped up and with the help of his mother attempted to beat out the flames with his hands.

They spread too rapidly to the furnishings of the room and finally with their clothes on fire, Warner and his mother rushed from the room and fell in the hallway. There they were found by policemen a few minutes later and the flames in their clothing extinguished, but both were seriously burned and were taken to the hospital.

The fire in the apartment cut off escape to the street by the stairs and the police and firemen helped many of the tenants to escape by the roof and across to other tenements. The fire was put out in a few moments after the firemen arrived and they carried the coffin across the street to an undertaker's shop

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

DUBIOUS FOR LORIMER

Poll Indicates He Will Be Ousted on Second Ballot.

Latest Canvass of Senate Shows 54 Votes Against Him, 37 for Him and Three Doubtful.

Washington, June 3.—Senator William Lorimer, according to the most reliable polls that have been made of the senate, will be ousted from his seat on the second vote on the question of his eligibility by a majority of 74 to 17.

The latest canvass of the senate shows fifty-four votes against Lorimer, thirty-seven in his favor and three doubtful. A poll made by Vice President Sherman before he went to Chicago to urge Senator Lorimer to resign gave Lorimer thirty-nine votes as a maximum. Two of these votes have changed within a few days, leaving the senator from Illinois, but thirty-seven.

It is possible that his vote may be even smaller whent he test comes, as a number of Lorimer's friends have expressed disgust because he refused to resign and forced the issue.

The Progressive Republicans to a man are against Lorimer. The regulars who were opposed to him last year have had their convictions strengthened by the additional evidence obtained by the Dillingham investigating committee.

Chicago, June 3.—Mrs. Jane Quinn, accused of shooting and killing her third husband, John M. Quinn, last December, was found not guilty by a jury. Mrs. Quinn maintained that her husband was killed by a burglar. She fainted when the verdict of acquittal was read.

Love On Ice

By Donald Allen

School district number one in the county of Rose was at the foot of Plum lake, and school district number two was at the head. Plum lake was three miles long. Justice of the Peace Flemming was moderator of number one, and Farmer Davis of the other. The moderator is the chairman of the school board in a country district, and what he says is law.

There was a time when the two schools dwelled together in unity, but now there is war between them. It started with an outside thing that should not have been dragged into the schools at all. One day Farmer Davis met up with the justice in the village and challenged him to a horse trade in the following language;

"Judge, how much boot will you give me between this hoss and your gray mare?"

"You are moderator of school district number one, I believe?" replied the judge in judicial tones.

"Of course."

"And it's your duty to push the cause of education along?"

"It is."

"And yet you say 'hoss' for 'horse!'"

"It is 'hoss.'"

"Any child five years old knows better."

"Look a-here, judge, I'm fifty years old, and I've always said 'hoss' and no one has had the impudence to say that I was wrong. Where do you get your authority?"

"In the dictionary."

"Show me."

Farmer Davis was taken into the office and the word pointed out. It was spelled and pronounced 'h-o-r-s-e.'

"That's all right," said the farmer. "That probably means a bay horse, but I'm talking about a black hoss. I've been charged with hindering the cause of education. Let's see whether I have or not."

The word couldn't be found, but Farmer Davis owned the only windmill in the township and had the biggest barn, and it was not for him to give up. Other people interfered and one school district became 'hoss' and the other 'horse' district. There had been spelling contests in the winter, and now these were abolished. There had been sleighrides, but they were given up. Both had always hired men teachers, but now Farmer Davis said to the others on the board:

"What we want here is a female teacher, and the best looking one in four counties—one to take the rag right off the bush."

"But she can't lick the big boys," was objected.

"She won't have to. We'll be the licking committee ourselves."

"But a gal can't wade through snow drifts."

"Some of us will drive her to school and back in a sleigh."

"But if they have a young man in the other district and we have a gal in this won't they fall in love?"

"Not by forty ring-tailed coons!" replied the moderator as he smashed his fist down on the desk. "Our gal has got to be told in advance that there's got to be nothing of the sort going on. The minute she falls in love away she goes. We ain't going to run a matrimonial bureau at this end of the lake."

When the winter term came on one school district had Mr. Edward Carston for teacher, and the other had Miss Mary Burton. Mr. Carston was about twenty-four and Miss Burton three years younger. It was agreed on all sides that both had style. When contracted with, both received plain warning as to what would be expected of them. They were to look upon each other as enemies, and if they happened to meet on the highway they were to pass each other with the most supreme indifference.

Mr. Carston was a fine skater. So was Miss Burton. On Saturdays, if the weather permitted, they were on the ice, also, on moonlight nights and after school hours. A line was drawn across the center of Plum lake, each district kept to its half.

One night, when skating alone, Mr. Carston crossed the boundary and went on a scout into the 'enemy's country. He saw a girl dodge into a little bay. He paused for a moment. Her movements on the steel runners were so graceful that he knew it must be "the gal teacher." They were alone on the lake, but they must not come within ten rods of each other. Mr. Carston went his way, but at daylight next morning he was skating into that bay. The ice there was as smooth as glass. Only one pair of skates had left marks there. After a look around he wrote this message on the ice with the heel of his skate:

"Greeting To You."

That night, after the lake was well clear of skaters, he scouted down to the bay again. His message had been scratched out and another left. It read:

"And The Same To You."

That was the beginning. She had known who left that greeting, and she had answered. They must not cross that line by day or even bow to each other. They must be careful not to be seen at night. The fight was on more bitter than ever. The judge had said of Farmer Davis:

"Think of a moderator who says 'hoss' for 'horse!' Is it any wonder that some of the greatest men in the country are saying that the cause of education is going down hill?"

And Farmer Davis had said of the judge:

"The blamed old jackass is a back-number in education! He hasn't found out yet that it's pronounced 'hoss' to make it easier for the children. It was getting this good-looking gal teacher that gave him the colic."

And Mr. Carston's next message read:

"What A Queer Lot Of Folks!"

And the answer to it was:

"I Should Say!"

And then:

"Let's Resign."

And the answer:

"Can't. I need The Money."

Then came a few days of soft weather when no skating could be indulged in, and no more messages written. During this interval Mr. Carston sounded the judge by saying:

"I hear they have a very thorough teacher in the lady in the other district."

"And I don't hear any such thing!" was the vigorous reply. "I hear she ain't worth her salt, and that she says 'horse' can be called 'hoss' under certain circumstances."

"I doubt if she said that."

"Well, I don't care whether she did or not, Davis has called me a blamed old jackass, and this 'ere quarrel is to keep right on."

And then came freezing weather and Mr. Carston visited the bay and wrote on it's surface:

"I'm Going To Raise A Row!"

And within 24 hours he got the answer:

"What About?"

And he replied:

"So As To Get Introduced To You!"

This was the last message on ice. Mr. Carston got out handbills calling a public meeting in the village, and when he had his crowd assembled he rose up and gave them fits. He showed them the envy, spite and foolishness of the whole thing, and warned them of the evils and when he stopped speaking Farmer Davis and Judge Flemming were shaking hands over the chasm.

A few hours later the farmer was saying to two very modest and retiring individuals:

"Miss Burton this is Mr. Carston, the other teacher. Mighty nice man! Mighty nice gal! Hope to see you skating together."

And they did skate together the rest of the winter, and if the reporter's information is reliable they are skating together yet and a very happy couple they are.

"It may be 'hoss' and it may be 'horse,'" says Farmer Davis when the question comes up, "but I'm getting around it by saying 'animal' in place of either!"

SORRY FOR THE PREACHER

Distinguishing Article of Apparel Evidently Was Unfamiliar to Faithful Servitor.

"If you have taken a degree in divinity at Oxford, you are entitled to wear a red hood."

The speaker was Rev. Ethelbert Reed, the Duluth psychologist. He continued:

"Wearing a red hood myself, I take a natural interest in hood stories. There is one about a man who complained to his bishop that So-and-So, though not of Oxford, was wearing a master's hood.

"'And I call it, bishop,' said the complainant, bitterly, 'wearing a lie on his back.'

"'Oh, don't use so strong a word as that,' said the bishop. 'Just call it a false hood.'

"Down south," continued Doctor Reed, "my own hood gave rise to an anecdote. I preached one Sunday in a Georgia church, and after the music a southern lady said to her old coachman:

"'Well, Jefferson, how did you like Doctor Reed's sermon?'

"'Oh, it wuz grand,' said the old fellow. 'All de same, I feels kinder sorry fo' de doc. I guess he hain't got no women folks to look after him.'

"'What makes you think that?' asked Jefferson's mistress.

"'I noticed, ma'am,' said Jefferson, 'whenever he turned round in de pulpit dat his coat was split up de back and de red undershirt wus a-showin' through.'"

A Prophecy.

"The bill met with an enormous reception," said Mayor Baehr of Cleveland, discussing a measure that had failed. "Its reception was, in fact, as ominous as that accorded to the Christmas melodrama in the two-night stand.

"A melodrama—'Murdered at Christmastide'—was to be given for two nights in a small town. The first night there was a fair audience; but when, in act three the senior villain said to the junior; 'Hist! are we alone?' a voice from the gallery growled:

"'No, Hamfat, not tonight; but you can bet you'll be tomorrow night.'"

Always Backward.

A couple of women, well seated on a crowded street car, were loudly engaged in a conversation regarding woman suffrage, to the delight of their fellow passengers. The two were somewhat startled when the car passed the corner at which they wished to alight. They bustled through the standing crowd, continuing their conversation meanwhile. "Well," remarked a man to the conductor, "there's nothing backward about women nowadays." "Watch 'em get off," said the official. They got off backward!

WORKING HOURS OF WOMEN

Several States Have Passed Laws Limiting Them to Sixty Hours or Less a Week.

During their last session the legislatures of several states passed new laws regulating the number of working hours for women. South Carolina passed a law limiting them to 60 per week in mercantile houses and the textile mills, of which there are so many in the state.

In Ohio and Massachusetts a 54-hour bill has been enacted. The Ohio bill applies to everything excepting hotels and mercantile establishments. Utah and Missouri have also passed nine-hour laws, says Health Culture. The ten-hour law which the legislature of Illinois enacted in 1909 is enlarged so as to include practically every kind of establishment where women are employed.

Wisconsin has established a 55-hour week, excepting night work, which is less. Minnesota has strengthened its ten-hour law by extending the penalty for violation so as to include manufacturing and mechanical establishments. The states of Washington and California have passed eight-hour day laws for women. The law of Washington applies to the usual mercantile and mechanical establishments, restaurants, hotels and laundries, but the California act applies also to telegraph, telephone, express and transportation offices.

Mr. Henry James' Style.

That a James sentence is as long as another man's paragraph rouses a chastened mirth in a receiver for the London Globe—and he proceeds to burlesque thus the style of the author of "The Outcry": "If we, greatly and indeed almost, as one might say, presumptuously daring, were, as we in this paragraph attempt, and with the full consciousness of ultimate and, in fact, inevitable, not to say disgraceful failure, looming ahead on our mental horison, to imitate the literary, perhaps the too literary, as one may describe it, without undue or, in a manner of speaking, journalistic extravagance, style of Mr. Henry James, we should indubitably come to grief. What author walks his pavement

Sold Wife to Friend.

At the village of Utznach, Switzerland, the other day, a curious sale took place. With her own consent a woman was sold by her husband to another man, an Italian, and a friend of the Swiss couple. The price asked by the affectionate husband was four dollars. To further "legalize" the bargain, the Italian procured two witnesses to the transaction and had a contract written on stamped government paper.

CLASS PHROPHECY IN FULL AND EXTRACTS FROM THE OTHER PAPERS

A crowded house greeted the Class of 1912 to listen to the program which follows and to see them receive their diplomas the culmination of their twelve years work. The stage was very pretty with its canopy of green, banked with ferns. The motto over the stage was brought out in blue and white lights which was very effective.

There were nineteen members in the Class presenting a bright and animated picture, After the invocation by the Rev. Dr. Hartzog, The following program was given.

PROPHECY

Ivan Spitler's prophecy for the Class 1912 was made possible by the alighting of an Areoplane, while he was rambling in the wood, which he entered on invitation of the occupant and took a trip to Mars there he found a little old man with a large machine of the telescope variety, a machine used for looking into the future,

He goes on to say:

As I stepped cautiously to the machine, the idea siezed me, of looking into the future of my classmates, I gazed eagerly into it and the future of our class president Ed. Sales, I discerned before me. Poor Ed! he left school with the hopes of being an Orator, but a certain lady, taking advantage of the fact that it was leap year, proposed and Ed, who couldn't refuse, had settled down to the duties of a henpecked husband. Except for the fact that the marriage was a happy one. I could see no more and my gaze next rested upon Flora Ketchum, She first attended the Normal after leaving T. H. S, and then went abroad, When she returned she became reporter and finally assistant editor of the Adrian Daily Telegram. Still farther my vision was carried and I saw distinctly my old classmate Hazelle Tyson. Of course her name had been changed to Schneider and Lewie and his happy bride had moved to Cincinnati, where they were promoting the interests of Schneider's Pork and Beans Mfg, Co,

What my eyes next rested upon, shocked me terribly. It was a poor maniac and upon closer observation I saw that it was no other than Wilfred Mills. He had always had a very warm spot in his heart for the fair-sex and it seemed as he grew older and his affections increased, his frail body could no longer bear the strain and he was carried to Kalamazoo, where he became a collector of bugs and insects I could bear to look no longer at my poor friends and my interest was attracted to the beautiful Senate Chamber of the U. S. Capital, At first I recognized no one in the crowd, but when I looked more closely, I saw my old friend Roy Cadmus. He was addressing the Senate and his opinion seemed to be approved, for as he sat down, he was greeted with applause. I was curious to know how he had come to this high honor but it seemed that my curiosity could not be entirely gratified, for of him I could see no more. Elsie Sanford now stood before me and as I beheld her she was dressed in the the beautiful attire of an actress She was dancing gaily to the swinging music of the orchestra, and as the music ceased and she bowed off the stage. the audience roared with applause. But before she could again appear the machine gave a sharp click, and the next that I saw was the dark chamber of a nun. In the dim light, I could at first distinguish only the frail form of a woman but as I gazed intently I recognized Lavera Shaw, I was much surprised and questioned the old man as to her fate, whereupon he explained that she had been disappointed in love and had chosen this life to drown her grief, Poor girl I could not control my emotion but when I could again see thru my tears, I was confronted by a newspaper, opened to the society column and dated June 23, 1935. The first thing that met my view was the head lines—"Quietly Married"—Mr. Don J. Hunt, aged forty-five and Miss Lora M, Robison, aged forty-three years united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. George M. McKendery. The ceremony took place at the country home of the bride, June 19. Only the immediate—"Curses" for the machine had again moved and Margaret Ayres was the next victim of my inquiry. After leaving T. H S. she attended business college for a few months and now was fullfilling her duties as stenographer at the law office of Fred B, Wood. At this moment the machine having become warm, it was necessary that it be oiled and when I again resumed my position, I beheld a large mass meeting and waving flags, In the midst of the crowd, on a little platform stood the speaker, who was a rather short stout woman and spoke in soft but distinct tones. She was delivering an address upon woman suffrage and as she finished, the crowd seemed to agree with her ideas, for they presented her with a large bouquet of lemon blossoms and a few nice samples of the fruit. Of course I wanted to know who the speaker was and upon investigation recognized Margaret Howe. Just as usual when I was most deeply interested the machine moved on and I found myself looking at a base ball game. It was the final game between Detroit and Philadelphia and all I could hear from the supporters of the Tigers were cheers for Croll Sure enough there was the manly form of my old acquantance Fray Croll in the pitcher's box,, twirling the ball with tremendous force I was blinded by a blurr of darkness and the next that I saw was the interior of Silver's 5c. Theater. Standing by the piano, with all the airs of a Prima Donna and sing with a clear melodious voice was Miss Clara Critchit. At this moment my gaze was cut short by a flash of lightning, and for the expanse of a few seconds all I could hear was the sharp exchange of blows and the count of the referee when my vision was again cleared, I beheld the muscular form of Ray Binns the pugilist in his triumph having just delivered the knockout blow to his powerful antagonist, Jack Johnson. Sickened by the sight of blood, I could look no longer at the poor victim and turned the machine to a different angle. where I saw Anna Carson, seated at her desk in T, H. S. executing her duties as Language teacher. My attention was now attracted to the magnificence of the building, for a new one had been erected but before I could return to the future of Anna, I found myself looking at an entirely different spectacle. The scene was in the jungles of Africa where two missionaries were toiling to influence a large crowd of curly headed negroes to accept the teachings of the Holy book. The one was a broad shouldred, full faced young man the other a tall, slender light haired young lady. I at once recognized Mr. Donald McClue and Mrs. Blanche Mc Clue (formerly Miss Snyder). I was just about to congratulate for having given up his position as superintendent of the Macon Sunday School for this most holy mission, and for his choice of such a congenial companion, when I caught a glimse of my own future, I was just about to conceive of mighty deeds and great honors, when the machine stopped with a clash and my future was still a blank.

SALUTATORY

Miss Flora B, Ketchum in a very pleasing and easy manner gave the Salutatory, bidding the friends welcome in the name of the class. The thought that she then brought out was, what had prepared them for their permanent work in life, what were they armed with that would make them a success.

Education, education not only from all influences that surround a student It is not the acquiring of education alone but it is instilling it in the mind until it becomes a part of ones self.

She drew a comparison with the indian, how he acquired his knowledge and what knowledge was of use to him in his life, as we study the history of the Greeks and Romans we find they ruled the world through their high educationl development. Then turning to our own country, she spoke of the United States as the highest type of progressive nations, the country owing this in a great part to our free educational advantages. The great men of a nation, with their abvanced education, are the controlling element of the world and the highest civilized nations are the rulers.

Bringing this question of education to ourselves to what use shall we put it. As yet we know not. but we can resolve this much, "to do our best,".

No matter what our lot may be, we must remember to grasp the opportunity when presented for we know there is a tide in the affairs of man, which taken at the flood leads on to fortune. But if neglected all the voyage of their lives is bound in shallows and in miseries.

"THE IMIGRATION PROBLEM" BY ED K, SALES

was dealt with in a masterful manner by one who seemed to understand his subject, pro and con. The oration showed deep thought and was given in an eloquent, and understanding manner.

In giving his oration he stated, before 1883, a desirable class of dutch, german, french, irish and english emigrants who became good citizens working for their own and the community's progress.

Since that time in addition to these and out numbering them we have had emigrants from northern and eastern Europe, Eastern or Asiatic emigrants or in the other words the undesirable. They arrive ignorant and remain ignorant of trade conditions, of political life and civic matters, they are content to live like animals, the simplest of sanitary measures are unknown to them, many families being housed in one room, for by this means they can live more cheaply, and more quickly save up money to return to their native land, and are spoken of as "birds of return passage."

The rest who remain, are at the bottom of most of the labor problems that we have to solve today.

Citing a visit to our coal regions, at first ones sympathies would be with the emigrant, but live there a year, and ones opinion changes.

While the American laborer supports his home schools and churches the emigrant lives in the midst of filth and disease.

Though we give assistance to educate an emigrants child, we know a child learns far more from his educated parents than he can ever learn at school, and it is not at all surprising that the children of the emigrant are the most criminal class in the community.

The conclusion drawn from this is, that we have taken in emigrants faster than we can take care of them A fire as you know can be put out by too much fuel as well as by fuel of a lower grade and when we have both features combined, the result is but smoke

Since the emigrant of today is lowering the stamp of citizenship, the means must be found to stop this incoming rush. We need two kinds of legislation providing for the fitness of the alien to become an American citizen. second, that kind of legislation that will provide for his environment after coming here, under the first might be suggested a certain degree of education and a good physical condition, under the second, they should be under the supervision for a certain period, until they learn to live in a healthful way, failing to do this, they should be deported. When we can arrange matters in some such satisfactory way the problem of emigration will be practically settled.

The Class Will by Blanche M. Snyder was of much interest and merriment to the pupils of the high school as well as to the class of 1912. It was written in the legal style, and declared they were of sound mind, and of legal aged, freed from the apron strings of Tecumseh High School. She touched upon the rivalry between Wilford Mills and Harold McClure; Fred Hendershott was bequeathed thirteen beautiful maidens hoping he could center all his affections upon one; Ivan Spitler gives up his position as chief bluffer of the High School to Holly Hand; To Wm. Comfort was left the high chair that Flora Ketchum had used so long; LaVera Shaw unselfishly left all the "cases" she has had during the past year to Geneva Satterthwaite; Their dignity they leave to the juniors, also to the juniors they leave nineteen vacant seats; to the Sophomores they leave all their surplus knowledge; To the freshmen they leave sound sense and judgement

The teachers were not forgotten in this will, and will no doubt appreciate the gifts bestowed upon them especially Prof. McAlpine, who is left an office girl to assist in keeping his desk in order. The school board were not forgotten leaving to them their votes for a new High School, with all the equipments needed; But the last of all bequests is the hardest to give up, our place in the high school that we have held so long and we leave with it our good will to those who follow and to the school our good wishes.

Wilford Mills illustrated the class history pictorially by an old volume known as the Cadmus set found in the attic of Dr. North's house where it had been lying for the last forty years. The collection was taken by Roy Cadmus the famous class photographer. It was a collection of pictures showing their many happy hours during their four years of the High School. The first pictures were a collection from their freshmen year the first picture discloses a trio of

The Whole World Is to Participate In the Great San Francisco Panama-Pacific Exposition In 1915

By HAMILTON M. WRIGHT.

THE whole world is interested in the opening of the Panama canal and in the great international fete at which the United States will celebrate the completion of the canal, the Panama-Pacific International exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915.

The proclamation of the president, issued by authority of congress, has been delivered through the instrumentality of the department of state to every quarter of the globe. Inquiries as to the exposition are pouring in upon the exposition management from all parts of the world. The nations of the world in recognition of America's great achievement at Panama are preparing for participation in the exposition upon a more comprehensive scale than at any of the greatest of former world's expositions.

The foreign nations will be represented by the finest assemblage of displays that the world has seen. The strange tribes and peoples of Pacific ocean countries will participate in a wonderful week's festival in which the nations of the orient will take part. The most marvelous parades ever witnessed will be seen on the streets of San Francisco.

The commonwealths of the United States, each of which as a member of the Union has taken its part in the building of the canal, will be represented by the most magnificent state displays ever assembled. California has dedicated more than $20,000,000 to the nation's fair, and the city of San Francisco, the west and the nation are cooperating to render the exposition one that will express in every way the pride and patriotism of the American people.

The Panama-Pacific International exposition will be the greatest exposition in the history of the world. A notable commission of architects of national reputation is engaged upon the plans, and within a few weeks first construction work will begin, when grading of the site and the building of a sea wall, which will serve in part as the basis of a magnificent esplanade along San Francisco harbor, commences.

Among the noted architects who are designing the wonder city which will rise from the shores of San Francisco bay are Messrs. McKim, Mead & White of New York, designers of Madison Square Garden, the Boston Public library, the Agricultural building at the World's Columbia exposition; Thomas Hastings, president of Carrere & Hastings, architects in chief for the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo; Henry Bacon, designer of the Lincoln memorial; Willis Polk, associated with D. H. Burnham of the World's Columbian exposition at Chicago. These architects and their associates pronounce the site of the exposition as unsurpassed for a great maritime celebration. The exposition structures will be the largest and costliest ever erected for a world's exposition and will be visible in detail to passengers on ships entering the Golden Gate.

The site of the exposition takes every advantage of the combination of harbor and hills that gives San Francisco its chief charm. The main features of the exposition will be located at Harbor View, on San Francisco bay midway between the ferry building and the Golden Gate, and the permanent buildings to remain after the exposition is over will be erected in the west end of Golden Gate park, which fronts on the Pacific ocean. These sites and intermediate locations will be connected by a marine boulevard that sweeps from Harbor View through the Presidio to the Golden Gate and then turns south to Golden Gate park. A trackless trolley will take visitors over this magnificent scenic boulevard from Harbor View through the military reservation at the Presidio, where the government is planning a wonderful military display, to Golden Gate park, and one admission will include entrance to both features. The site expresses the maritime character of the great celebration. In harmony with the exposition San Francisco itself will be an exposition city in 1915. The parks and water front of the city will be improved at an expenditure of millions of dollars, and the ferry building, the main entrance to San Francisco, will be adorned with a grand court of honor. Market street and Van Ness avenue, the two main thoroughfares of San Francisco, each running from the bay and meeting in a V in the heart of the city, will be decorated with huge Grecian columns adorned with the flags of all the nations of the world and surmounted at convenient intervals by classic arcades. At the junction of these two streets will be erected a civic center. The buildings in this architectural group will cost close to $9,000,000. The nucleus of the civic center will be a new city hall to take the place of the one destroyed in 1906. The exposition authorities have voted the sum of $1,000,000 for a great auditorium to accommodate visitors to conventions during the exposition. A great opera house will be erected by private capital at the civic center, and the famous singers of the world will be heard in San Francisco in exposition days. Great saengerfests in which the choral societies of foreign countries participate will be held upon the exposition grounds.

The Panama-Pacific International exposition will open with a pageant in San Francisco harbor of the battleships of the navies of the world. The foreign vessels will first assemble at Hampton Roads, where, joined by ships of the American navy, the entire fleet will be reviewed by the president of the United States and foreign dignitaries. This fleet, the largest ever assembled, will then proceed through the Panama canal to the harbor at San Francisco, where it will participate in the most spectacular naval demonstration ever witnessed. San Francisco in 1915 will see the flags of more nations than have ever been brought together in one place at any one time. From unofficial assurances now received it is anticipated that 100 foreign battleships in addition to those of the United States navy will be gathered in San Francisco harbor.

A huge commemorative edifice, in purport like Bartholdi's statue of Liberty, will welcome vessels from afar. The structure, to be known as the St. Francis Memorial tower, will be 850 feet in height, with a base 220 feet square. The shaft will be eighty-five feet square, with corners rounded, and of steel construction and terra cotta veneering. The approximate cost of the tower will be $1,000,000. From its summit the sightseer will look almost straight down upon the waters of the Golden Gate, 1,300 feet below.

The only picture to represent the second year was a hugh mouth with rubifoam teeth belonging to Miss Root the young lady who so effectually squelched all budding parties of the year.

The Junior reception at the Parish House was also portrayed; The senior reception of that year on the lawn at the home of Herbert Henderson was then presented, showing the great skill of the seniors: Another picture shows the class at the home of Glenn Kemp, where to amuse the guests Ivan Spitler is sitting on the table dreamily playing a sweet potato, thus on from picture to picture until the closing scene the last picture in the volume discloses the class of 1912 entertaining the class of 1913 on the lawn of the Rev. B. R. Weld. There was a slight blur over this picture and every face seems to wear a startled look, the cause, a few sophomores who were trying to live up to their reputation fired a cannon in the close proximity of the party. Such pictures are only possible during school life, and we leave Ivan Spitler to account for the future of the class.

"QUID NESCIMUS"
"WHAT WE DO NOT KNOW"

The valedictory by Miss LaVera Shaw, was given as though she thoroughly understood her subject, realizing however much school may have done for them, and that their friends might think they were satisfied in graduating from the High School, the class thoroughly realized the meaning of this subject, "What We Do Not Know', She then went on to say how much there was in plant life for them to learn, also in astronomy, in medicine and surgery and electricity, wonderful progress has been made in all these scientific subjects. She then goes on to speak of the influence for good or bad in ones life, how hard it was to understand, citing the influence of Helen of Troy, Marc Anthony and Cleopatra, how the whole Roman world bowed down to the beauty of Cleopatra, how hard it was to understand Shakespear's wonderful gift. No one understands these things and we cannot hope to prove them but we can use the knowledge we have acquired through our High School life, and hope these who will follow us in the class of 1913 may feel as courageous looking into the future as we the class of 1912.

Recovered Courting Expenses.

A man sued another in the Liverpool (Eng.) county court for the expense of a courtship. They formed the acquaintance of two young ladies, and when the two couples went out together the plaintiff in the case paid all the expenses for the time being. The defendant married his young lady, and the plaintiff sued him for $40, his share of the courting expenses, and recovered the same.

UNIVERSAL
Portland Cement

The contractors who are building the Mausoleum at Tecumseh use nothing but the UNIVERSAL brand of cement. They claim that this class of work is the highest grade of concrete work and only the most uniform cement can be used.

Upon test it has been found by the contractors that every sack of this brand is absolutely uniform and is always just exactly alike. Mausoleums over the whole country are built of this cement for the above reasons. The prices are no higher than the common kinds. We are the sole agents for this vicinity.

ADVANTAGES OF A CHECKING ACCOUNT.

Over ninety per cent of transfers of funds in business are made through the medium of bank checks, thus avoiding the dangers incident to carrying large sums about, and the risk of making wrong change.

This method enables the business man or individual to keep his money safely in the bank, instead of on the premises or about the person, where it would be subject to hazzard.

The children are very much interested, and would be very glad to see their friends Sunday morning. They cordially invite you to come at ten o'clock.

The music given at the Commencement exercises was unusually good. Miss Hazel Zimmerman sang in a very charming manner. The duet by Mesdames Hodges and Wood, two of Tecumseh's greatest favorites more than did themselves justice. Duaine Service's violin, displayed the usual temperment that he gives to all his music. The music added much to the evening's entertainment,

LINEN SHOWER

Miss Jennie Gillespie gave a most delightful evening Tuesday evening, in honor of Miss Mae Lowry, this took the form of a linen shower, and the gifts were most beautiful. The company numbered fourteen, Mesdames Weld, McCoy, Field, Temple, Lowry and Bredow and the Misses Cutting, Brown and Pratt with the guest of honor and the hostess making up the party.

A fine three course dinner was served, dainty baskets of flowers were at each place for souvenirs, the place card was a small slipper with the name on one side, and on the reverse a conundrum whose answer was a flower. In the center of the table was a large basket of flowers hiding the gifts, which were attached to ribbons leading to each guest. After the dinner a musical evening was much enjoyed by all.

BUSINESS MEETING, CIVIC AND TOWN IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

The Civic and Town Improvement Society held a special meeting Monday night at the home of Mrs. Geo. Tiffany, President, There was an unusualy large attendance, everyone being interested in the business to come before the Club.

The subject of fixing up one of our parks with lights, seats, swings and band stand was under discussion. Everyone was deeply interested and willing to do their share towards this end and a committee was appointed to see about it, and confer with the council and will report at the next meeting.

WHOLESALE MERCHANTS AND AND MANUFACTURERS' BOARD TRADE EXTENSION TRIP INTO SOUTHERN MICHIGAN.

Paul A. Leidy, Assistant Secretary of Toledo Commerce Club made the Tecumseh Herald Office a pleasant call Thursday. He was here in the interest of the "Commerce Club Special" consisting of two Pullman Sleepers and a Baggage Car which will make a three days trip through Southern Michigan. The train will arrive in Tecumseh Tuesday, June 11, at 8:45 a. m. and remain until 10:15.

The passengers will be the leading bankers of Toledo, and the wholesale merchants and manufactures who wish in this way to meet their many patrons in Southern Michigan and hope they may find a good crowd awaiting them.

"Everybody's Doing It,"
DOING WHAT?
Buying Goods that have Quality

We have just purchased the famous Hotchkiss Central California fruit for delivery in November. This fruit is selected from the very best cultivated orchards in California, being strictly hand-picked and choicest variety. The apricots and peaches are peeled before going into cans.

2½ lb. cans of apricots, lemon cling or free-stone peaches put up in 45 degree syrup, to retail at 25c.

These are put up in sanitary cans, covered with glass label, and we expect to have them in our store about Nov. 1st, with a can of each open, that you may examine their contents.

Compare these fruits with any other fruit packed in cans and the quality will speak for itself.

We do not ask you to book your order or pay for someone to come and make you a visit, but we do want you to come to our store when these goods arrive, compare the goods and consider the price.

We know that these goods are the finest that can be grown and if you can beat them, we will pay the bill.

PINEAPPLES ARE AT THEIR BEST
and the prices are right for canning. We offer 24's, the largest size, at $1,35 dozen; 30's, the medium size, at $1.15 dozen and 36's, the smaller size, at 90c dozen.

5 Bu. Home-grown Strawberries

They Put an End to it

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pill, to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become opertive:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and state of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the e premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D, 1912.

CLAIMS OLE BULL'S ISLAND

Estate Was Bequeathed to a Swiss Child by the Famous Violinist's Daughter.

Ralph S. Bartlett, who was counsel for Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan, only child of the late Ole Bull, the famous violinist, successfully contested the will of Mrs. Bull in the probate court of York county, Maine, last summer, recently left on board the steamship Franconia for Liverpool on his way to file Mrs. Vaughan's will at Bergen, Norway, the New York Herald's Boston correspondent says.

Mr. Bartlett is executor for the will of Mrs. Vaughan, and he and Miss Amelia Shapleigh of West Lebanon, Me., are co-trustees for Sylvia Vaughan, the adopted daughter of Mrs. Vaughan and the principal beneficiary under Mrs. Vaughan's will.

The reason that the will of Mrs. Vaughan is to be offered for record in Bergen is that the only foreign real estate which she possessed is the Island of Lysoen, near Bergen. Ole Bull owned this island, which is said to be one of the most beautiful in the world. It is in a fjord about twenty-two miles from Bergen, and consists of about seven hundred acres of land, largely forest. Ole Bull in his lifetime developed two fresh water lakes and a cave and laid out twenty miles of paths on the island.

Lysoen was left by Mrs. Vaughan to the little Swiss girl, Sylvia, whom she adopted a couple of years ago, but on Sylvia's death Lysoen is to be preserved by the Norwegian government as a memorial to Ole Bull.

The exact procedure which will be followed in Norway with respect to the case is a matter of uncertainty, because under the Norwegian law no foreigner can own real estate in that country without the written consent of the king.

Telegram That Saved India.

In connection with the Durbar, a museum of Mogul relics has been arranged, which contains, among other objects, the telegram which illustrates Montgomery's great saying, "The electric telegraph saved India." This is the famous telegram dispatched by Brendish on May 11th, 1857, which gave the news of the rebellion to the north of India, and enabled Lawrence and Edwardes and Nicholson to take steps for the disarmament of regiments on the verge of revolt, and to make those other arrangements for the relief of Delhi by which—and probably by which alone—the mutiny was crushed out, and Delhi once more returned to her British allegiance.

Disgusted Old Columbus.

Columbus deftly stood the egg on end, then waited for the applause.

"That's all right enough," said the audience, "but show us how to buy a really fresh egg."

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

WHEN LANDIS WAS NAMED

Brother of Judge Tells How He Came to Be Called Kenesaw Mountain.

"The most memorable Christmas I ever spent was during the war," said former Representative Landis of Indiana at the Willard. "My father had returned from the war on leave of absence to find another son. He had taken part in the fight at Kenesaw mountain, and when he found his heir awaiting him he suggested the name Kenesaw Mountain. That is how my brother, who has become more or less noted as a judge, came to be named.

"But it was not that incident that made my Christmas so memorable. Kenesaw was a baby. I had other brothers. We were living a few miles from a small town in Indiana, and my father had only a few days' leave. He was compelled to rejoin his regiment before Christmas, if I remember correctly.

"I shall never forget the day before that Christmas. My father and mother went to town, and the boys naturally were much excited. When mother came back with a bundle we were more excited. It turned out that father had purchased us some gifts. Mine was a candy camel. The other boys had similar gifts. I had great appreciation of that camel. I placed him affectionally on the 'what-not' of the best room, and took many pilgrimages to have a look at him. Of course, I caressed him, and now and then I would take a loving lick. For several days following Christmas my camel remained there, but one day I could not resist the temptation, and, turning carnivorous, I devoured my animal. I do not know what the other boys did with their animals, but I suppose they went the same way that mine did."—Washington Post.

Heine and London.

Heine did not like London, but the London county council likes Heine, for the passer-by is now reminded by the usual encaustic tile that the poet once lived in Craven street, Strand. As he looked out of his lodging Heine exclaimed, "Send a philosopher to London, but no poet. This downright earnestness, of all things; this colossal uniformity, this machine-like movement, this moroseness even in pleasure, this exaggerated London smothers the imagination and rends the heart." But if Heine did not love London he found something within easy reach to warm the imagination and fire the heart—the chalk cliffs of Ramsgate in mid-June, with a beautiful Irish girl to assist in the process.

Commits Suicide in Sanatorium.

Shelbyville, Ind., May 13.—Shannon Rector of Ellersville, committed suicide by asphyxiation. He came to a local sanatorium to take treatment for the liquor habit, told the manager he was tired and would talk to him about arrangements the next day. He closed his door and shut all the windows and filled the keyhole with paper and then turned on the gas. He was sixty years old. His failure to appear led to an investigation and the body was found on the bed.

Three Straight Games

By Michael J. Porter

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

If the man selling a patent churn or washing machine had appeared in the village of Hillsdale he might possibly have made a sale, but it would only have been after a week and after he had listened to the gossip of the village and taken a seeming interest.

The stranger would have learned that Nancy Friars, the old maid, had almost taken a dose of paris green because she had to go home alone from prayer meeting; that Mr. George Scott and wife were thinking of separating because she liked codfish and he didn't; that Tom Henderson, the carpenter, had been disappointed in love, and that it had made a wreck of him; that old Mrs. Travers was using a wrinkle remover and many, many other things. The biggest and best thing would have been saved till the last, and he would have been expected to exclaim that it was fierce.

Philetus Narmore was a feature in Hillsdale. He was forty-five years old and a widower; he owned the woodenware factory and sung bass in church on Sunday; he was in charge of the fireworks on the Fourth of July, and he had been known to give five dollars to the heathen of Africa all at once; he had brought about the arrest of a horse thief, and he had speculated in Wall street and made $28. The stranger would have been told this astounding news as an appetizer, and then the real corn beef and cabbage would have been set before him.

There were three widows in Hillsdale when Mr. Narmore became a widower. It was four weeks after the death of his wife before he smiled in public. Two hours later the gossips were betting two to one that he would marry one of the widows within six months. He didn't, however. He didn't within a year. He didn't at all.

It was said that any one of the three widows would give her old shoes to catch the widower. This was probably exaggerated. Had he proposed to Mrs. Dakin, Mrs. Stevens or Mrs. Everett the proposal would have been received with downcast eyes and taken under advisement. There would have been no rushing into his arms. In a month or so he would have got his answer. It would have been a timid yes or no. The chances were even that he would have been turned down.

Mr. Narmore called on each of the widows. Why not? The gossips said he was courting, but they were mistaken. He called to talk about the weather, potato bugs, church affairs, fly screens and things of that sort. He always sat with his hat in his hands, and he always rose up exactly with the clock striking nine.

Each of the three widows received private and confidential advice as to how to "catch" the widower Narmore. They should invite him to dinner; they should simper; they should look at him coyly and archly; they should sigh and talk of their loneliness; they should boast of their economy and how much work they could get through with in a day. Even old maids who had never had a beau and never would have one sat down and looked as wise as Solomon and said:

"Ah, if you only understood how to handle a man as well as I do you'd bring Mr. Narmore to his knees within a week."

Perhaps the three widows didn't want to marry again. Perhaps, but for the arrival of a fourth widow in the village they would not have resorted to rats and puffs and powder and told white lies about their ages. The fourth widow was a Mrs. Harper. She was no younger or more attractive than the other three. She was seemingly handicapped by trailing in at the end of the string.

Within a week Mrs. Harper had heard all the gossip. Within a fortnight she had been introduced to Mr. Narmore. Within a month she had sent for her father to pay her a visit. He was sixty-five years old and had to come all the way from Illinois, but he came.

The widower Narmore had a fad. It was known to every one in Hillsdale, and yet those three widows, each one of whom might possibly have answered yes to a proposal, hadn't the acumen to take advantage of it. Mr. Narmore was a checker fiend. He didn't care for horse races, dog fights, pugilism or baseball, but seat him in front of a checker board and he was there for all night if necessary to beat the other player. He was the champion of Hillsdale county. In fact, he claimed the championship of the state.

"Father," said the widow Harper, when her parent arrived, "aren't you accounted one of the best checker players in Pekin?"

"In Pekin? Why, Mary, I was champion of all Illinoy years ago; in Pekin! Lord love you, but I've beaten everything in Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin,—Kansas, Colorado and Texas! Five years ago I issued a defi to the whole United States and nobody dared play me. Why do you ask?"

"There's a man right in this village who thinks he's some pumpkins at the game!"

"I'll beat him with my eyes shut."

"He's won over everybody around here."

"I'll beat him in my sleep!"

"But I don't want you to."

"Why?"

"Because I want to beat him myself. I want to beat him at checkers and then marry him."

"Shoo! I never heard the like. I thought women married for love."

"It's sometimes just as well to love after marriage. When I was a girl at home I played a pretty good game of checkers, didn't I?"

"Um-m-m-m. Yes, I remember."

"But not good enough?"

"Not good enough to beat a county champion."

"Now listen. You are not to let on here in Hillsdale that you ever played a game. You are to devote six hours a day to instructing me. You have got to teach me all the tricks in the business."

"And then what?"

"I'll play against this man and beat him and marry him!"

"I don't see how beating a man at checkers is going—"

"You never mind that. Teach me to beat him and Ill take care of the rest."

Work was begun the next day, and it was thirty days and one more for good measure when the father said:

"That's enough, Mary. I can't teach you another darned trick. Say, you'll down him, but maybe he won't propose after all."

"Then mawbe you've got a mushroom for a daughter!"

The game of checkers that was brought about between the widow and widower will be remembered in Hillsdale until long after the children of that day are married off. It was brought about through badinage on the part of the widow—a little badinage and a little boasting. The novelty of playing checkers with a woman rather appealed to Mr. Narmore. The struggle came off in the town hall, where the hundreds of spectators could see. On that day, an hour before the game began, the widow Dakin, the widow Stevens and the widow Everett fainted away and had to have the doctor. They realized that they were out of the running.

There were predictions that the struggle, which was to be for the best three games out of five, would last a week. A whole day was the most conservative prediction, and many spectators brought noon luncheon. But things went like a cyclone after a rabbit. In two hours it was begun and ended. The widow Harper won three straight games, and the widower Narmore never had a chance. There were cheers and shouts and yells, and the victor was draped in Old Glory.

"Daughter, what was Narmore saying to you after the game?" asked the father after the two had reached home.

"Why, he was asking me to be his wife."

"By thunder!"

"But doesn't a man want a wife that he can brag of and that everybody else will brag of? Thanks, daddy. You can go back home now if you are lonesome for mother!"

GOOD ADVICE FOR THE YOUNG

Get Married and Be Happy, Says a Venerable Sage of the City of Chicago.

If marriage interferes with your business, give up marriage. He does not actually say so, but Mr. Oliver Franklin Fuller, a wealthy chemist of Chicago, who recently married, at the age of eighty, Miss Rebecca Secor, thirty years his junior, implies so much in his maxims on matrimony, which he recently expounded on the eve of his wedding.

"Marriage," he said, "is a great institution, but it should never be allowed to interfere with a man's business. It won't in my case. We'll go away for a secret honeymoon. I've already changed our destination, so that even my two sons and their families won't know where we are going. The morning after I return home you will find me in my office at 7:45 a. m., where I have always been found for the last 60 years, and where I will be until I die."

"Retire from business and from a state of being wed, and you begin to die. Marriage is the sorcery that rejuvenates a man. Choose your partner in life with the same care that you would choose a business partner.

"Ponce de Leon was foolish to set out on an endless search for the Fountain of Youth. He could have found it in the heart of some comely Spanish girl. Not to be happily married is to live without joy, blessing, kindness, religion, or peace."

Unromantic Courting.

Dr. Abernethy, the famous surgeon, wrote to the lady on whom he had a matrimonial eye: "Dear Madam: I am much too busy a man to have time for love-making; but I should like to marry you, and shall be glad to learn your decision before the end of the week." If Mary had been a sensible woman she would have answered something like this: "Dear Sir: I would not for worlds interfere with your business. Pray stick to it."

Preaching and Practice.

The college instructor should take pains to practice what he preaches.

One member of a class in English composition brought his theme to the professor, after recitation hour in order that the professor might read a marginal correction which he had written, and which the pupil had been entirely unable to make out.

"Why," explained the professor, "that says 'Write more plainly.'"—Youth's Companion.

Persian Weddings.

Tying the matrimonial knot is a very prolonged and serious affair in Persia. In fact, a wedding may extend for a week. On the last day of the wedding the bride, who has been treated as a sort of outcast, is conducted by a near relative to a room, where she undergoes further and more elaborate decoration.

She then returns to the guest-room, and her dowry is laid before her in trays. The dowry often comprises such queer things as cheap and highly-colored oleographs, gaudy vases, birdcages and many useful household articles. Having kissed the hearthstone of her home, she is then given bread, salt, and a piece of gold, and thus equipped and closely veiled she is hoisted on to a gaily-adorned donkey and, accompanied by a circus-like procession of friends, goes to her future home, where her husband awaits her.

Helping the "Lumberjacks."

Tuesday marked the beginning of a new order of things in the daily life of the Maine woodsman in the great northern lumber regions. At 2 o'clock on the afternoon of that day the new lumbermen's Christian association building at Greenville opened wide its doors to the 12,000 men annually entering and leaving the northern forests. On the third floor of this building is a hospital, with expert attendants in constant charge, and through their ministration many an injured lumberman will be saved from death through careless or inexperienced handling. That is the principal mission of the organization, and besides the hospital work in the building itself men will be sent out among the lumber camps to teach the great advantages of skilful first aid.—Lewiston Journal.

The Call of Duty.

"I try to do my duty," said the exceedingly sincere person, "and I do not hesitate to remind others of their duty."

"Go ahead," replied the easy-going citizen. "You may prove to be a very useful member of society. But when you get through you'll have about as many sincere friends as an alarm clock."

Sold Wife to Friend.

At the village of Utznach, Switzerland, the other day, a curious sale took place. With her own consent a woman was sold by her husband to another man, an Italian, and a friend of the Swiss couple. The price asked by the affectionate husband was four dollars. To further "legalize" the bargain, the Italian procured two witnesses to the transaction and had a contract written on stamped government paper.

RANGERS ARREST MEXICAN AGENT

Gonzale C. Enrile Taken Into Custody in El Paso.

FINANCIAL HEAD OF REBELLION

Mexican Consul Seeking Method by Which He May Be Kept from Extradition—Apprehension May End Present War.

El Paso, Tex., June 10.—Gonzale C. Enrile, until recently financial agent of the Mexican revolution, is under arrest in El Paso. Wounded by stabs and bullets from would-be assassins, Enrile reached Juarez on his way to Los Angeles, Cal., for treatment.

Then he came to El Paso and was arrested by Texas rangers.

No charge has been made against Enrile, but Mexican Consul Llorente had been busy wiring to Mexico City in an endeavor to establish a case that will warrant the United States holding the wounded man for extradition proceedings. Irregularities in his accounts while he was consul for the Mexican government at Clifton, Ariz., is the charge by the consul. Inasmuch as Enrile issued a violent anti-American proclamation addressed to President Taft early in February, while in El Paso, the rangers say they can hold him for trial in the United States for that offense.

Enrile attempted to escape from Chihuahua unknown, but his presence on the train when it reached Juarez was tipped off by Captain Gonzales of the rebel army, who had recognized Enrile on the train. As a result Enrile was detained a part of the night by Juarez officials, until a wire from General Orozco at Chihuahua gave orders to release him.

In the morning Captain Gonzales was killed in Juarez. The authorities gave it out that he accidentally shot himself while cleaning his revolver. Strangely, however, the bullet wound is in the back of the head. There are many violent Enrile partisans in the rebel army who believe that he should have the real credit for whatever success has been attained by the revolutionists rather than to Orozco. Enrile had raised all the funds for the rebels, but was recently ousted by Orozco for accepting money from Cientifico agents.

According to the Mexican federals the downfall of Enrile means the near end of the war. He is the only man who can secure funds to continue the revolution, they say.

NIXON'S BODY ON WAY HOME

Remains of Late Senator Accompanied by Party of Legislators.

Chicago, June 10.—The body of Senator George S. Nixon of Nevada, accompanied by a joint committee from the house and senate, passed through Chicago on its way to Reno.

The committee was composed of Senators Newlands of Nevada and C. D. Clark of Wyoming, and Representatives Roberts of Nevada, Langham of Pnnsylvania, Dyer of Missouri, Gould of Maine, Hamilton of West Virginia, Bowman of Pennsylvania Green of Massachusetts, Murray of Massachusetts, Baker of California and Rubey of Missouri. The party traveled in two private cars.

Crowds Watch Johnson Train.

East Las Vegas, N. M., June 10.—Jack Johnson boxed eleven fast rounds, used the medicine ball fifteen minutes, and went four rounds with the bag. Fifteen hundred spectators were present.

SPECIAL TRAIN WAITS

It May Bring Colonel Roosveelt Flying to Chicago.

As Matters Warm Up Previous to Convention "Teddy" May Feel "Call" to Be Present.

New York, June 10.—According to rumor that sifted in from Oyster Bay, there is a special train waiting in the yards of the Grand Central station ready to rush Colonel Roosevelt to Chicago, starting any time of the day or night, if he gives the word. The same rumor had it that the colonel is so sure that the "call" will come for his presence at the convention that he fully expects to use the train, that it will shoot from New York to Chicago without stop at better than Twentieth Century speed, and that even the berths have been made up in preparation for departure at a moment's notice.

Nobody at the Grand Central professed to know anything about such a train, and the colonel said at Sagamore Hill that ihs intentions regarding a Chicago convention visit were unchanged. There was a man at the Waldorf, however, was said he "had it straight" that the train had been commissioned by the Roosevelt managers and was ready to pull out at any time as soon as the candidate could bolt to the city from Oyster Bay.

GUNBOATS FOR HAVANA

United States Battleships to Avert Race War in Cuban Capital.

Washington, June 10.—The Cuban situation took a decided turn for the worse when two United States battleships were ordered from Key West to Havana upon receipt of information here that the Cuban capital is on the verge of race war.

Minister Beaupre cabled the state department that since Friday evening race riots have occurred in every quarter of Havana and the vicinity. The negroes are being goaded into violence by irresponsible elements among the white population.

He also extends the greetings of the emperor and of Prince Henry of Prussia to President Taft and other American friends.

Defeats Insanity Proceeding.

Portland, Ind., June 10.—Found not insane, Mrs. Rebecca Hoppes of near Redkey was discharged by Judge Moran following the conclusion of a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus after an acceptance had been received for her commitment to East Haven hospital at Richmond. She charged that her commitment had been procured by her husband, Peter C. Hoppes, to defeat a pending divorce suit.

MAYFLOWER JUST ESCAPES DAMAGE

Near Collision with Northland in Chesapeake Bay.

PRESIDENT AND WIFE IN DANGER

Old Point Comfort, Va., June 10.—President and Mrs. Taft and their party of guests on board the naval yacht Mayflower narrowly escaped a collision with the steamer Northland of the Norfolk and Washington line in the lower part of Chesapeake Bay, off Smith's Point light, while enroute to Hampton Roads.

As the Northland was attempting to pass on the port side of the Mayflower the naval vessel crossed over the Northland's bow. If Captain Posey of the Northland had not stopped his engines and turned the bow of his vessel away from the Mayflower's stern the two vessels would have collided. President and Mrs. Taft and their guests were asleep at the time and were not aware of their narow escape from accident until morning.

The members of the party, in addition to the president and Mrs. Taft, were Brigadier General William Crozier, U. S. A., chief of ordnance; Representative F. H. Gillette, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Kelsey of New York, Mrs. F. G. Newlands, Major Thomas L. Rhoades, military aide, and Lieutenant J. W. Timmons, naval aide.

The Mayflower arrived in Hampton Roads about 8 a. m. and anchored off the Old Point wharf. The president and Mrs. Taft and their guests entered a launch to go to Normal and Agricultural Institute, but the engines refused to work and the launch was towed by another launch sent by the yacht Sylph. The members of the president's party were entertained at breakfast by Dr. H. B. Frissell, superintendent of the school.

The president attended divine services in the chapel and made a short address to the students. After the services Mr. Taft shook hands with several hundred students of the school. In the afternoon the persident and his guests cruised the James river on the Sylph, as far as Brandon. He returned to Hampton Roads about 8 p. m. and boarded the Mayflower, which left immediately for Washington, where she arrived at noon today.

KNOX 75 YEARS OLD

Galesburg, Ill., June 10.—The celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Knox college is under way. The first feature was the annual contest in declamation, the prizes going to Elwood Lewis and Miss Edith Hardy. In the evening the $12,000 pipe organ was dedicated in Central Congregation church, designed to commemorate the late Albert Hurd, Milton L. Comstock and George Churchill, three teachers, known as the triumvirate, who occupied chairs in the college for half a century.

Representatives of sixty colleges and universities will witness the pageant next Thursday. Students of forty and fifty years ago will attend the class reunions.

REPUBLICANS IN HOSTILE CAMPS

Taft and Roosevelt Leaders Busy with Conferences.

CRANE AND FLINN ARE LEADERS

Indiana Contests Up Today and Roosevelt-Beveridge Coalition Is Out to Beat Taft-New Alliance, if Possible.

Chicago, June 10.—The opposing Republican forces and their leaders have been in conferences, working like dray horses. In the conferences it was clearly [illegible] that Senator W. Murray Crane is the chief captain in charge here of the Taft forces and Ex-State Senator William Flinn is the master spirit of the Roosevelt forces.

Senator Crane has been in conference with most of the Republican national committeemen. At today's session of the committee the contests in Indiana are to be heard. They are supposed to furnish the real test of the contests in the northern states. The seats of the four delegates-at-large and those of the delegates in the First, Second, Fourth and Thirteenth congressional districts were up for consideration.

Charles Dick, in charge of the Taft contests, was at the conferences. A terrific fight was expected over the Indiana contests. The Beveridge organization in the state has been overthrown. The Roosevelt-Beveridge combination proposes now, if possible, to overthrow the Taft-New organization.

Mr. Dick and the conferees went overthe briefs submitted by the Taft-New people and the evidence to sustain these briefs. The Roosevelt-Beveridge adherents were intending to make the fight of their lives on these contests in Indiana.

The Roosevelt captains have heard of the possibility that the California contests may be taken before the national committee, and they telegraphed to Governor Johnson to come immediately to this city. Should these California seats be contested by the Taft people in the national committee the Roosevelt delegates may be unseated. The argument against the Californians is that the first primary law as passed by the California legislature over the protests of the Democrats and the Republican minority in December, 1911, and signed by Governor Johnson on Dec. 24, did not follow the provisions affecting direct primaries laid down in the provisions of the call for the Republican national convention adopted Dec. 12.

In an attempt to justify his primary law Johnson issued a lengthy statement attacking the national committee.

ALTON LIMITED IN DITCH

Twenty Persons Injured—Bloomington Banker May Not Survive.

Bloomington, Ill., June 10.—The Chicago and Alton Limited, which left Chicago for St. Louis at 11 a. m., was wrecked eight miles south of this city.

Twenty persons were injured, four of them badly. It is feared that M. H. Hamilton, banker of Bloomington, may die. He and J. E. Zieverly, a traveling man from Davenport, Ia., were crushed and it is believed were hurt internally. Two postal clerks from Chicago are the other persons seriously injured.

Conductor Carey and Will Dean are two Chicagoans who were slightly injured.

A broken rail caused the accident. The mail and baggage cars and the smoker and one coach were derailed and two of them turned over. The train was going forty miles an hour when the accident happened, and the absence of fatalities is considered remarkable.

Word was sent to Bloomington and in a short time arrangements were made for bringing the victims here. They were given medical care, and those who were able to do so resumed their journey.

Traffic was delayed eight hours.

LORIMER VOTE JULY 6

Friends and Opponents of Accused Illinois Senator Agree on Date.

Washington, June 10.—The senate will vote on the question of unseating Senator Lorimer of Illinois on "the legislative day" July 6. This date was agreed upon at a conference, at which the views of both the pro-Lorimer and anti-Lorimer senators were voiced.

The agreement, however, was with the understanding that in the event of the adjournment of congress earlier than July 6, the voting time would be advanced so that the case would be finally disposed of at this session.

RITES FOR LOST BOAT

Cruiser Visits Spot Where French Submarine Sank.

Salvo of Shots Fired Over Watery Grave of Two Officers and Twenty-Two Brave Sailors.

Cherbourg, France, June 10. — M. Delcasse, the minister of marine, boarded the cruiser Gloire and invited the newspaper men to accompany him on a sad pilgrimage to the scene of Saturday's catastrophe, where the submarine Vendemaire was sunk by the battleship St. Louis.

A little less than an hour took the ship within sight of the buoy marking the spot where the submarine went down, with her two officers and twenty-two men. Minister Delcasse, Admiral Marolles and Rear Admiral Favoreau and other officers took their places on the bridge and the chart room deck. The crew was mustered on the fore deck. The Gloire steamed in a circle around the vicinity of the tragedy with her flag at halfmast and fired a salvo of three guns while the guard presented arms, the bugle sounded arms and the band played the Marseillaise.

STATE TO BEGIN SUITS

Accounts Board's Reports Involve Former Officials of Many Counties.

Indianapolis, June 10. — Governor Marshall has certified to Attorney General Honan a series of reports sent him by the state board of accounts, in which are set out alleged discrepancies in the accounts of almost a score of former public officials. The attorney general will forward the individual reports to the prosecutors interested in each of the cases, with instructions to bring suit to settle the accounts.

The total amount of direct charges lodged against the officials is $9,084.30, and the total of the constructive charges is $4,428.79.

BABIES ALWAYS IN STYLE

Each One Is Perfect to Its Parents and Perfect Nuisance to Other Persons.

A baby is a small person about which there is great diversity of opinion. This is because every baby is considered perfect by the parents and a perfect nuisance by everybody else.

There is really nothing new about the baby. Its institution dates back to the beginning of the world, and at that time it was a garden production. The garden idea, however, is now obsolete, and for many years the baby has been grown in the house, with early transplantings to the sunlight.

Every baby has a good voice, a distinct resemblance to some rich relative, and an afternoon nap. The voice is heard by everyone, but the resemblance is heard chiefly by the rich relative. The afternoon nap is heard of everywhere as being necessary to the baby, but sometimes the nap is more honored in the breach than in the observance. After the nap the baby is unable to understand why it should be expected to sleep again at night, and everyone else is unable to understand why it should want to stay awake. The baby's decision, however, always carries the day—or, rather, the night.

There are millions of babies, but only two kinds—boys and girls. The boy baby is always the maternal and paternal selection for the presidential chair, and the girl baby is expected to some day become the wife of a gentle and loving millionaire who will do his best to appreciate her.

Later on the presidential nominee develops a strong desire to become a motorman, and the future millionaire's wife is seen to blush at the mentioning of the plumber's son. The fond parents sigh gently. In point of looks, likewise, babies generally bear strong resemblance to the well-financed and unencumbered relatives.

Fashions may come and fashions may go—but babies will always be in style.—William Sanford, in Puck.

Lenawee Baptist Association

Wednesday morning the Lenawee County Baptist Association convened at the call of the retiring Moderator, Rev. Edwin Simpson of Adrian, who conducted the devotional exercises. Committees were appointed on enrollment and nomination, Rev. H. Churchill, Clinton and Rev. R. W, McLain, Hudson.

The morning committee reported for Moderator, Rev. W. B. Hartzog, of Tecumseh, for trustees, F. B. Bradley and John E. Carr.

The Tecumseh church letter was read, Welcoming the Association, and describing the year's work.

The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. H. Z. Davis, of Morenci on "Life's Possibilities."

The afternoon session was called to order by Dr. Hartzog, the new Moderator. Rev. Edwin Simpson conducted the Devotional exercises.

Numerous committees were appointed. Dr. J. Y. Atchison of Chicago delivered an address in the interest of the Missionary of the denomination.

Letters were read from 14 churches, Quite a number of Free Baptist churches sent communications.

A committee was appointed to confer with the Association, John E Carr of Adrian and Rev. W P. Curtis were named on that committee,

The evening session was devoted to the B. Y. P. U. work. F. B. Fenn rendered a solo the Philomel Quartette gave a number. Rev. W. R, Curtis the B. Y. P. U. president presided. The nominating committee reported Rev. R. W. McLain of Hudson Associatio a 1 president.

Rev. F. B. Batchelor, pastor of the First Baptist church of Ann Arbor delivered the address of the evening on "A Divine Call for Busy People."

The committee reported regarding the Free Baptists, recommending the admitance of Onsted, First Rome and Dover Center churches.

Thursday morning the meeting was called to order by Rev, Simpson of Adrian. Following a short song service and a season of prayer, he conducted the devotional service

The next order of business the Moderator appointed the standing committees for the ensuing year. after which several items of business were disposed of, among them being the appointment of a committee for the revision of the constitution of this association.

The committee on place and preacher reported as follows: place, Adrian, preacher, Rev. McLain of Hudson.

Dr. Wood of Marine City, presented the work of the Anti Saloon League, after which Dr. Reed of Hillsdale college gave an address upon the subject "Faith in the unseen and its relation to the development of man." The session adjourned immediately, when the delegates were served with dinner.

In the afternoon following the devotional service, which was led by Rev. Simpson, the men adjourned to another room while the ladies held their meeting in the regular session room.

Mrs. Geo. L. Bennett called the Women's meeting to order, after which Mrs. Carrie Bryan Tecumseh led the devotional service also welcoming the ladies to Tecumseh.

The minutes of the last meeting were then read, after which the officers for the next year were elected. Following this came the roll call of societies, then the collection was taken. Mrs. Chas. Ruthruff of Tecumseh sang a solo, after which the committees were appointed,

Mrs. John McQuire of Burma, gave a very helpful talk on "Our work in foreign lands."

Miss Lenhaven of Detroit gave an inspiring address on "In the haven or on the high place."

At the same hour, the Men's meeting was called to order by Geo. L Bennett of Adrian. Following a discussion concerning Kalamazoo and Hillsdale colleges, a short business session was held.

The Thursday evening session was in charge of the Sunday Schools, with Chas. Carr of Adrian, presiding. After a song service, Mr. Carr spoke in behalf of Kalamazoo College, after which the Philomel Quartet gave a selection.

Prof. Gwiney of Hillsdale gave the evening address on the subject "The why, what and how of teacher training."

The association then adjourned to meet in Adrian next year.

LOVE STORY OF ARCHDUKE

Ferdinand Charles Louis of Bavaria, Wedded to Rosa Czuber, Enjoying Peaceful Exile.

The Archduke Ferdinand Charles Louis of Austria, scratched from the Almanach Gotha, scratched from the army, deprived of all his titles, ranks and orders, is peacefully enjoying perfect love as an exile. He is now known M. Ferdinand Berg, and is painting on the borders of Lake Lugano.

His fault was a gracious one, for to marry morganatically has become almost a habit in the Hapsbourg family. But this fault was aggravated by the fact that the marriage was celebrated without imperial authorization. His elder broth, the heir to the throne, and the ducheresse of Hohenberg, who were likewise separated by a great difference in station, were more adroit, and had taken into their play Madame Schrab, the mistress of Francis Joseph.

Madame Ferdinand Berg, nee Rosa Czuber, has nothing with which to reproach herself for having made conquest of the archduke in an official reception at Prague. The archduke had immediately demanded her hand, but the severe Dr. Czuber made him wait five years.

It is only a question now of obtaining the pardon of the emperor Francis Joseph. The archduchesse Annonciade is employed to do this, but it is feared all her efforts will remain unfruitful if she can not first move the excellent Madame Schrab.—Le Cri de Paris.

ROUND ABOUT US

We see by a late paper that Brooklyn is adding to their lighting services of late, three cluster lamps which were contracted for last January by the village here have been added to the lighting of the public square These lamps are hung high above the street and are composed of five 100 power incandescents.

One of our exchanges, has this pertinent article, which is good for any town to adopt.

This is a good town. Let us get all the good out of it we can. The way to get good out of land is to improve it. The way to get the good out of a town is to develop it, It is a poor farmer who is content to take merely what nature sends. He is a poor citizen who is willing to let the town shift for itself, taking only such benefits as come without labor, The man who is satisfied to harvest merely what comes up will have to live on a diet of weeds.

An unique feature of the Kalamazoo Semi-Weekly Telegraph is its editorial column which comes to us headed either with a prayer or a scripture lesson. A new departure in newspaperdom.

The Milan Leader cites the novel way in which the Judd & Oak Grove schools closed their school work.

The teachers C. E. Hoffmann and Lillian Hertler chartered an electric car from Saline to Ann Arbor and took their pupils to the Museum, Art Galleries, Medical building, and other places of interest. About sixty enjoyed a picnic dinner on the Campus.

We notice by the Hastings Journal-Herald that Hastings is looking forward to a public library. The Council has voted a fund, a generous offer of $3,000 for a site, a gift of $1,000 by the Womans' Club and $800 appropriated by the Council seems to place them in a fair way towards its accomplishment. They have the best wishes of the Tecumseh Herald for their ultimate success.

TECUMSEH HERALD

July 5, 1888

We have before us a Tecumseh Herald of July 5, 1888. Among the items of interest is the Alumni meeting of that year held June 22nd in the Opera House. The program was given as follows,

Prayer—Rev. W. H. Babbitt
Solo—Miss Lizzie Gregg
Oration of Lyster Dewey read by Bert McNair
Poem—Lucy J. Train
Class History—Mabel Hayden
Select reading—Mrs. John Bailey

Banquet was served by B C. Van Antwerp with toasts, "Ideals"—Prof. Hammond

Non Sina Pulvere—Mabel Hayden
Reflections—S. C. Stacy.

The address of Welcome was given by A. W. Mills which was responded to by J. Eugene Tremaine.

P. S. McKimnon acted as toastmaster.

In reading this article one is led to wonder if the old spirit has died out and if a dance is the only thing left to the Alumnus,

In another place we find an account of a Bike trip by Levi C. Hayden. All the way from Bunker Hill, Mass. to Tecumseh. He gives a very fine account of his trip from start to finish In Buffalo he met one of his brothers who had ridden through Canada, and together they made the trip to Cleveland but owing to bad roads from a late rain they took the "City of Cleveland" and went to Detroit by water. The run from Detroit to Ypsilanti was made in three and a half hours, a distance of 30 miles,

They were met in Ypsilanti by Fred Tiffany, Al Heesen and Gus Cummins and all started for Tecumseh. At Saline they were met by Marvin Hayden mounted on Fan, later the wheel of Gus Cummin's came to grief and he was elected to walk 14 miles but they finally found a carriage and harness and hitching Fan they reached home in safety.

They were joined all along the way by wheelmen who came out to meet them and their entry into town was quite fine.

Levi would think that a tame way of travelling in this day of automobiles, but it was quite an event in 1888.

The Slayer of Miaco.

One of the most peculiar cases ever brought to the attention of the court of first instance recently came to light in Pangasinan Province.

Pedro Pabaira, with two others, was accused of the murder of Barnabe Laco, and on being brought to trial the first pleaded guilty, there being an aggravating circumstance of treachery, and was sentenced to 20 years in Bilibid.

Now it comes to light that the deceased was Miaco, an outlaw, who deserted from the constabulary some time ago, taking with him various arms and accoutrements and who had engaged in outlawry since that time. There was a reward of 500 pesos out for his capture, dead or alive.

The question now is, Should the prisoner serve his term for killing a fellow-citizen, or should he be liberated and given a reward for killing an enemy to society?—Manila Weekly Times.

Captain Cook Statue.

None too soon, that renowned English navigator, Captain Cook, is to have a memorial in London. It will take the form of a statue of the explorer of the Northwest Passage, and is being executed by Sir Thomas Brock, R. A., the commissioners being the British Empire league. The statue is expected to be finished in November next, when it will be set up, appropriately enough, near the new Admiralty Arch, close to Trafalgar square. Many distinguished folk are expected to be present at the unveiling, which probably will be performed by the king, who, as a keen sailor, has taken a lot of interest in the memorial project.

PARISH SPLIT OVER LATIN

French and Germans of Metz at War Over the Proper Sound of "U."

The proper method of pronouncing Latin has long been a matter of controversy among the learned, but it is startling to find an entire parish disorganized by the question. This is the case in the parish of St. Maximin's, in Metz.

The older clergy of Alsace-Lorraine were brought up under French influence, and are accustomed to pronounce the church Latin with the soft French "u." The younger generation has been taught in the schools to pronounce the "u" full, according to the German and Italian manner.

Yesterday the choir of St. Maximin's pronounced the Latin of the pieces sung at mass in the German way. The parish priest, an old man, solemnly rebuked them, and they shut up their music books and left the church.

Probably the clergyman found the new pronunciation grated on his ears, and his outburst was due to the sensitiveness of a scholar.

The parishioners, however, are not scholars, and are now divided into two camps—those who maintain that, as Metz is now a German city, the church Latin should be sung in the German way, and those who hold that the choir is doing the work of German officials and attempting to destroy French influence.—New York Tribune.

K. OF P. MEMORIAL DAY

The memorial services of the K. of P. lodge were held at their Castle Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, there was a fine attendance. The regular memorial services were given by the officers of the lodge, and were followed by a beautiful duet by Mesdames Ruthruff and Moore, Rev. Blake of Tipton, then gave the address, which was pronounced one of the very best ever given in Tecumseh, and was listened to with close attention. Mrs. Moore then gave a solo, which was followed by the closing exercises

Plymouth Hard Coal.

We are taking orders for June and July delivery, after the first of August the price will be higher and without a doubt will be more hard to get.

We have signed a statment that every ton of Plymouth coal we buy costs us 25c premium over other hard coals.

You wonder why we do not sell circular coals or charge more. The reason is simple. Circular coals do not run uniform, some mines are good, others are not, the customer gets his coal in his bin and has to suffer, there is no redress from the mines just grin and bear it. With the PLYMOUTH it is different, it all is uniform, nice clean coal free from slate and dirt; lasts longer, gives out more heat with less ash.

The result we have satisfied customers, and a satisfied customer makes more customers so you see it all is more profitable for us to supply good coal all the time.

If you want to be sure of your coal get your order in right away as the mines take care of orders "First come, first served" and we are taking care of our orders in the same manner. Don't delay but come in and talk it over.

LIVELY RUNAWAY

What might have been a very serious accident occurred last evening on Union street, when Dr. Hendershott's horse entered the race for the home run. Mr. John Blesing had been doing some papering out in the country and had stopped at his home to leave his tools. As he was about to get in the buggy, the horse gave a sudden turn upsetting it, Mr. Blesing could not get hold of the reins but was thrown to the ground, receiving several bruises and a cut on his hand, but nothing serious, he may be unable to work for a few days.

LOWRY—WEISER

A very pretty home affair was the wedding of Miss Mae Lowry to Mr. David Weiser of Chatanooga, Tenn. which took place at 6 o'clock Monday evening June 10, 1912

As the guests assembled they were met by the bride and groom, her father and mother. At promptly 6 o'clock Mrs. Weld and Mrs. Herbert Temple took their places at the piano, Mrs. Weld very sweetly and impressively singing "O Promise Me." Mr. Weld took his place in front of a beautiful bower of syringas with the bride and groom in front of him where the impressive ring service was pronounced that made them man and wife. After congratulations a very delicious three course supper was served by the Misses Geraldine Orr, Gertrude and Francis Peters and Lillian Kennedy. All the guests were seated at once, little tables being used through the rooms. The brides table in the dining room was decorated in pink and white and the other rooms were in green and white. A little before nine o'clock the bride and groom appeared and were taken by Mr. Bredow to the depot amid a shower of rice. The whole company followed and a merry time was spent waiting for the train The happy pair showered by more rice departed for parts unknown.

The bride is one of the most honored and loved young ladies and the groom known to many as a most honorable and upright young man.

The future home will be in Chatanooga, Tenn., for which part they will depart the last of the week,

PRE-NUPTIAL LUNCHEONS

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bredow entertained in honor of Miss Mae Lowry and Mr. David Weiser of Chatanooga, Tenn., Friday evening. The dining room was decorated in pink and green, the refreshments carrying out the idea very prettily. Those enjoying the hospitality were besides the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Weld, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Temple and the Misses Anna and Alice Cutting, Jennie Gillespie, Helen and Vesta Wilson and Mr. Sant Cutting.

Miss Edith Gray gave a very pretty luncheon Sunday evening, at her home. The guests of honor were Miss Mae Lowry and Mr. David Weiser of Chatanooga, Tenn. The decorations were red and green, and a very delicious luncheon carrying out these colors were served to Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Bredow, Mrs. Abner Wilson, Misses Anna and Alice Cutting and Jennie Gillespie.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Saturday, June 8, being the birth day of Mrs. Lavern Austin, her many relatives in Macon and Tecumseh made her a surprise visit, bringing with them a bountiful supply of good things for a picnic dinner. They were a jolly crowd, and the time passed pleasantly, until twilight reminded them that they must return to their homes. They left a beautiful hand painted chocolate set, as a token of their loving good will.

A POOR BEWILDERED EDITOR

We had always been under the impression that The Tecumseh Herald was neuter gender. We find out how ever from the Adrian Times when the word "dam" appears that the gender is feminine, Now if this is a fact, most of the papers published in the United States must be feminine or am I mistaken in this impression, is it only when a man uses it in regard to a woman?

Again the gender of the Tecumseh Herald is made masculine. As the Herald representitive was at a business mens meeting lately and the Herald was called a "good fellow."

We had supposed the Herald was neuter and neutral, but possibly Mr. Baum of the Adrian Times who dammed us will enlighten a Country Editor.

IMPORTANT LETTER TO ALL WHO SUFFER

"I suffered from indigestion for a long time. Last May I almost died. The doctor told me it was acute indigestion and I could not be cured, Since that time I have suffered very much, as some days everything I ate, even light food, as soft boiled eggs, would distress me. I lost fifteen pounds. Sometimes I felt that I could not live another day. A month ago I got a box of MI-O-NA tablets. Before I had used them a week I was better. I have used two boxes and I feel as well as I ever did, Eunice A. Peters, Jackson, Ga.

Use MI-O-NA stomach tablets for quick relief from sour stomach, heaviness, heartburn, belching of gas and distress after eating. They are guaranteed. Large box 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son and druggists everywhere.

DOING WHAT?

Buying Goods that have Quality

We have just purchased the famous Hotchkiss Central California fruit for delivery in November. This fruit is selected from the very best cultivated orchards in California, being strictly hand-picked and choicest variety. The apricots and peaches are peeled before going into cans.

2½ lb. cans of apricots, lemon cling or free-stone peaches put up in 45 degree syrup, to retail at 25c.

These are put up in sanitary cans, covered with glass label, and we expect to have them in our store about Nov. 1st, with a can of each open, that you may examine their contents.

Compare these fruits with any other fruit packed in cans and the quality will speak for itself.

We do not ask you to book your order or pay for someone to come and make you a visit, but we do want you to come to our store when these goods arrive, compare the goods and consider the price.

We know that these goods are the finest that can be grown and if you can beat them, we will pay the bill.

PINEAPPLES ARE AT THEIR BEST

and the prices are right for canning. We offer 24's, the largest size, at $1.35 dozen; 30's, the medium size, at $1.15 dozen and 36's, the smaller size, at 90c dozen.

They Put an End to it

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pill to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the am claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit;—All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the e pr ises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Business address; Court House, Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Art is the great and universal refreshment. For art is never dogmatic; holds no brief for itself; you may take it, or you may leave it. It does not force itself rudely where it is not wanted. It is reverent to all tempers, to all points of view. But it is wilful—the very wind in the comings and goings of its influence, an uncapturable fugitive, visiting our hearts at vagrant, sweet moments; since even before the greatest works of art we often stand without being able quite to lose ourselves! That restful oblivion comes, we never quite know when—and it is gone! But when it comes, it is a spirit hovering with cool wings, blessing us, from least to greatest, according to our powers; a spirit deathless and varied as human life itself.—John Galsworthy in the Atlantic.

A Card to the Club.

Old Colonel Dick Bright of Washington was shaved for many years by a negro barber, who, not being blessed with the splendid longevity of the colonel, finally died. Bright went to the funeral, and at the dinner table that evening said he had put his visiting card in the old barber's coffin.

"That's the craziest thing I ever heard of," remarked a friend. "What on earth did you do it for?"

"Well," explained the colonel, "if he goes to heaven, he won't need it. But, if he goes to the other place, it will introduce him to a lot of good fellows.—Popular Mechanics.

DOWNWARD COURSE

Fast Being Realized by Tecumseh People

A little backache at first.
Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak.
Urinary disorder quickly follows;
Dropsy and finally Bright's disease
This is the downward course of kidney ills.

Don't take this course. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

Mrs. Geo. Burroughs, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me had been permanent. Since I publicly endorsed this remedy in December 1905, I have had no further need of a kidney medicine. My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began there use. In a few weeks my condition had improved in every way and my pains and aches were a thing of the past."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sol agents for the United Sates.

BOSTON CAR STRIKE

Estimates of the Number of Men Who Quit Vary Widely.

Boston, June 10.—After a night of complete suspension of street railway traffic as the result of the strike of several thousand employes, the Boston Elevated Railway company resumed operations on all surface, elevated and tunnel lines, but the number of cars in operation was noticeably much less than usual.

Estimates of the number of men on strike vary widely. Union leaders assert 3,500 members were out, with additional members joining the strike hourly. Elevated company officials set the number of strikers at "about one thousand."

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY

Miss Mildred Exelby was a charming hostess to about twenty of her girl friends Wednesday evening. The first part of the evening was spent with several fine musical selections given by Misses Mildred and Donna Exelby, and Miss Lydia Price. Next came a guessing contest, Miss Caroline Hall winning first prize. Then the guests were ushered into the dining room, which was prettily decorated with bunting and boquets of carnations, where an excellent luncheon was served. On one side of the cards were conudrums, which each one read in turn, Miss Margaret Hindes being the last one and instead of a conundrum she read the announcement of the marriage of Miss Mildred Exelby to Fay A. Wigginss June 26, 1912. At a late hour the guests left for their homes after enjoying an evening long to be remembered by all.

Mrs Grace Holden of Osseo, Mich. is here for a few weeks visiting her sister Mrs. Susan Linn and other relatives.

WOULD HAVE MISSED FIRE

Julius Kahn's Story of Hoosier Who Locked Himself Into His Hotel Room.

Julius Kahn had just been re-elected to congress by a very small margin, and one of his political supporters was reminding him of the service he had rendered in the campaign.

"What would you have done if it hadn't been for me?" he asked.

"Why, I would have been in the position of the Hoosier in the hotel," replied Kahn. "He and two companions occupied one large room together. After a day in the metropolis devoted principally to following fire engines in the hope of seeing a conflagration, the cement sidewalks proved too much for feet that were accustomed to plowed ground, and he retired. When his companions returned a few hours later they found the door locked. They kicked on the door until they awakened him and asked for the key.

"'I threw it over the transom,' he replied.

"When they had found it and unlocked the door one of them asked:

"'What would you have done if there had been a fire?'

"'Why, I wouldn't have went.'"—Saturday Evening Post.

Plants That Go to Sleep.

Plants have a mind of their own on the subject of winter sleep, and gardeners have tried various methods of waking them up prematurely, to furnish blossoms at a time when they are scarce and costly. Mere greenhouse heat and moisture failing to yield the desired results, they have successfully tried warm baths and ether vapors to shorten the hibernating period of bulbs. From Germany comes a description of the latest plan devised by a man named Weber. By sticking a needle into the base of the bud he has caused it to unfold two or three weeks ahead of its fellows. Still more time was gained by injecting water into the buds. Not content with water, a physician has tried injections of water with ten per cent. of alcohol. By this means he succeeded in gaining ten days in the budding of oak twigs.

The Assistant Postmaster

By Cora A. Thompson

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

The Misses Chilton's School for Girls was situated half a mile outside the village of Rockwell, and the number of pupils averaged forty. It was in part what is called a school of honor; the young ladies were permitted to take walks in the country, and visit the postoffice and candy stores in the village without being accompanied by a guard. It was understood that each pupil was on her honor not to flirt or elope.

The eldest Miss Chilton was forty-four years old, and her sister four years younger, and neither of them had ever been in love or expected to be. They were cut out for old maids and were very well satisfied.

For eight long years not a single one of the many good-looking girls of the Chilton School had flirted or eloped. It had given the Chilton sisters a sense of security such as a police force could not have established. It is only fair to explain that the farmers' sons within two miles of the school were always too busy chopping wood or hoeing potatoes to flirt, and that the village was a staid old place never visited by drummers.

Before putting the girls on their honor the Misses Chilton had carefully looked the field over. There were half a dozen young men, but they were lame and halt and homely. There was Deacon Bradshaw, a widower who dyed his hair and acted colty now and then, but the sisters figured that he would not dare go beyond certain bounds. No; the place was safe, and that was why the shock came with such force when it did come. There was a shock one summer morning. One of Mr. Dupont's powder magazines didn't blow up and level the cornstalks for ten miles around, but the shock shook Chilton School from cellar to garret.

Fanny, the elder sister, returned from the village one forenoon and fell in other sister's arms in hysterical mood. When she had been soothed and petted for five minutes she controlled her emotions sufficiently to exclaim:

Their Day Had Come at Last.

"Flora, it is our ruin!"

"What!"

"There's—there's a young man in the village!"

"N-o-o-o!"

"I have seen him with my own eyes!"

"Impossible, sister!"

"And have found out all about him!"

"And he is an escaped convict?"

"Not exactly that, but almost as bad. Oh, sister, we shall have to close our school within a month!"

"But tell me."

The postmastership at the village of Rockwell had been held by an old war veteran for many years. He was failing all the time, and had finally sent out west and brought on a nephew of his and made him assistant postmaster. This nephew was a young man named Clarence Sprague, and for smartness and good looks his like had never been seen in the village. He arrived one evening and took up his duties next morning. When half a dozen girls from the Chilton school rushed in at 11 o'clock, giggling, laughing and cutting up, there was a new face at the general delivery window—a new face and a good-looking one. The owner of that face smiled at them and flirted with them, and the bevy ran out with a great clatter and slapped each other on the back. Their day had come at last.

It is not to be imagined that those girls returned to the school to give the news to the old maid sisters and plead for protection. They returned to tell other girls, but to swear them to secrecy. The "discovery" was to be kept inviolate as long as possible. It was two weeks before the blow fell. During that fortnight there was more flirting in Rockwell than since the first log house was built by the first pioneer. Then the elder Miss Chilton dropped into the postoffice and saw with her own eyes and almost fell over in a faint. There were those who told her about the flirting, and when she reached home she was in a hysterical condition.

The first thing was an edict to prevent the pupils from visiting the village without permission, and there was dissatisfaction at once. There were even threats to leave the school. After three or four days of troubled minds the old maids solved the problem. They called on the postmaster and informed him that he must at once remove his nephew."

"But why?" asked the old vet, who had heard nothing of the gossip.

"Because he—he flirts with our pupils!"

"Don't blame him a darned bit! If I was a young feller I'd do the same."

"But he mustn't! You hear—he mustn't! It will break up our school."

"Nonsense! If you'd done a little flirting yourselves in days gone by you'd have been all the better for it. I want Clarence here, and here he will stay."

"Sir, we shall appeal to the postmaster-general!" was the awful threat, as the old maids retired.

And appeal they did, and right on the ground, too, that the assistant postmaster at Rockwell was a flirt and bringing discredit on the department. It isn't likely that the official read the letter or reply, but some clerk who sympathized with the assistant answered:

"Flirtations are not forbidden by the rules of this department unless they seriously interfere with the work of the official, and we do not think that is the case in this instance."

The Misses Chilton had been sure they could oust the young man and drive him back toward sunset, and the failure was a great disappointment.

"I'll tell you what we must do," said the elder sister, as the case was talked over. "We must not forbid the young ladies going into town, but we must select the most steady and demure among them and have her act as chaperon for the rest. She can take up so much of that young man's time that he will have none left for flirtations."

These two old maids, brought up on oatmeal and the New Testament, and neither having ever been escorted home from prayer meeting by a man, thought they knew all about girl-nature! The "demure" girl they made chaperon was the biggest flirt in the school. She was a model chaperon while within sight of the school buildings, but once the village was reached it was:

"Now, girls, scatter and have a good time, but don't too many of you jam into the postoffice at once."

And as the days went past the Misses Chilton grew secure and complacent, and now and then the elder said:

"Sister Flora, you must give me credit for perspicacity in this case."

"I do, sister Fanny," was the reply. "But for you our school would have been broken up by this time. Have there been any further reports of flirtations?"

"Not a one, sister."

"How grand to be able to understand human character!"

Two weeks later and then the whole world seemed to be spinning around like a top. One afternoon the "demure" chaperon was missed. Search was made, even under the beds and in the bureau drawers. It was extended into the country, but in vain. No one had seen a demure young lady of steady appearance paddling along through the dust. There were two persons in the school that got no sleep that night. When morning came they went to the postoffice in the hope of striking a clew. They were not disappointed. The old veteran was on duty, and at sight of them he rubbed his hands together and said:

"Come right in, ladies; I have solved the problem!"

"We are looking for Miss Blank," was the reply.

"And you've come to the right place. I lent Clarence my horse and buggy yesterday to drive off and marry her, and now all your troubles are o'er. He can't flirt with any of the rest of the school!"

Secret of the Sea.

A secret of the sea was partially revealed when the schooner Lily put in for water to a small island a hundred miles south of the Hawaiian islands. A small cabin was found sheltered in a grove of palms, and, on crossing the threshold, the sailors were horrified to find the dead body of a man, sitting in a chair, his hand resting on a table, and firmly clasping a small book. Upon searching, there was found a compass, watch and chain and some cooking utensils. The book was a diary in which the man had set down the day's happenings, but not a word as to his name or how he came there. From the entries it was determined that he had been on the little island three years. The body was buried, and so ended the life of this unknown Crusoe.

DEADBEATS OF ONE PATTERN

Veteran Credit Man Says They All Talk Alike and Try Same Tricks.

"Deadbeats," remarked an old credit man, "all talk alike. They are plausible to start with," he went on, "and are so free and easy they deceive every one but the most astute credit man. When they are dunned the first time they make a frank and positive promise to pay on a certain date. They do this so unreservedly that suspicion is disarmed. Of course they don't pay—but they have some of the best excuses in the world. They have had a run of hard luck, for instance. If the merchant takes this well, they will ask for more credit. If the merchant is obdurate they will come back with the statement that the merchant is making it unnecessarily hard for them to get along by crowding them; they will hint, also, that others have been soliciting their trade.

"Right there is the time to come down on them hard. Shut off their credit. Usually it is useless to sue, for such persons are judgment proof. The next move is to let them think you have forgotten them. They always are on the watch for the man who keeps nagging them all the time, but they grow careless of the man who leaves them alone. Some day they will leave an opening so that something can be attached or levied on, and then is the time to jump in and get your money.

"A favorite trick of the deadbeat is to offer his note for the account. These fellows think nothing of giving their notes. They would buy the continent of Asia if they could give their notes for it, and would clean up a fortune and get out of paying the note. Just listen to one of these deadbeats talk. Remember what he says, and when the next one strikes you his language will be identical. It is almost as if it were the fixed ritual of their order."

HUNGARIAN SHOOTS WIFE AND HIMSELF

Man Is Dead but Life of Woman May Be Saved.

Jealousy Is Said To Be the Cause of the Tragedy, the Couple Having Been Married Only Three Months.

Saginaw, Mich., June 10. — Casper Markus, twenty-eight years old, is dead and his wife, sixteen years old, is in St. Mary's hospital in a critical condition as a result of a murderous attack made by Markus, which occurred on the Washington road in Buena Vista. There is hope that the woman's life will be saved. Markus was a Hungarian and his wife is a Russian. The former has been in this country for eghteen months and Mrs. Markus since November of last eyar. Jealousy is said to have been the cause of the attempted murder and suicide.

Marqus and his wife were engaged with a party of foreigners to work in the sugar beet fields. March 9 of this year they were married and took up their home in the colony of workers on the Miller farm. The attentions to Markus' wife, according to what was told in a vague manner by the members of the colony, by other men, prompted the two, after three months of unhappy wedded life, to seek freedom from their marriage bond in the circuit court.

ALBION STUDENT DROWNS

Seized with Cramps While Swimming in Hammond Lake.

Pontiac, Mich., June 11. — Ellis P. Adams, aged twenty, employed on the farm of Mrs. H. C. Ward, lost his life while swimming in Hammond lake, three miles southeast of here. He was with two other young men, Clyde Everts and Charles Little, also employes on the Ward farm. Adams was a good swimmer and it is believed he was seized with cramps. His companions were unable to assist him. The body was recovered in twelve feet of water and Coroner Farmer took charge of it.

Young Adams' home was in Beech Creek, Pa., and he had been attending Albion college, working summers on the farm. A sister, Mrs. A. W. Vandersall, lives on Route 4, Ypsilanti, and a brother resides in Detroit.

ISMAY TELLS OF THE SPEED OF THE TITANIC

Considers Captain Smith Justified in Rushing Ship.

Captain and Ismay Both Knew the Titanic Would Reach the Ice Fields Some Time During Sunday Night.

At London, England, J. Bruce Ismay told the British court of inquiry that it had been planned to drive the Titanic at full speed during a few favorable hours of its maiden trip and that he considered Captain Smith fully justified in going at full speed through the ice region so long as weather conditions made it possible to see ice ahead.

Lord Mersey, the head of the court, repeated the question whether the witness thought the captain justified in his action adding "at either day or night?" Ismay replied in the affirmative.

When the investigation was resumed Ismay told the court that the chief engineer had arranged before the steamer left Queenstown for New York that, the weather being favorable on either Monday or Tuesday, the vessel would be driven at full speed for a few hours. He also said a wireless dispatch which Captain Smith had handed him on Sunday had indicated to him that the Titanic would reach the ice region on Sunday evening. The collision occurred shortly before midnight Sunday night.

Ismay insisted he had nothing to do with the navigation of the ship, but Sir Rufus continued to press him regarding the speed of the Titanic and the warnings of ice in its path which were received. The attorney general also complained that the witness was not frank.

Ismay said that he had not attached importance to the captain's action in handing him the message from the steamer Baltic regarding the ice and that he had not had any conversation with any officer with respect to the message.

"Why did the captain hand it to you?" asked the attorney general.

"For my information," was the reply.

Sir Rufus asked: "What was the use of going at full speed through the ice at night?"

"I suppose they wanted to get out of the ice," Ismay replied. "They would not want to wait and take a chance of fog coming down. They were justified on a clear night in going through as quickly as possible, and even might have increased the speed to get out of the ice field."

MARTIAL LAW IN SANTIAGO

Cuban Senate Authorizes President to Suspend Constitutional Guarantees.

The campaign against revolutionists in Santiago province seems to have been stopped. The federal troops are active, but it seems impossible for them to force a fight.

The senate passed a resolution and drew a bill authorizing the president to ssupend constitutional guarantees only in Santiago province instead of giving him discretion to declare martial law over the whole island.

Rebels have burned the town of Jarabacca Songo in Guantanamo. The negroes entered the place and sacked it without resistance.

It is now known positively, although the government declined to give out any news, that the rurales have been killing scores of negroes in the country, at the same time encouraging them to leave the towns because in the latter case they could not be killed without creating scandal.

PRESIDENT TAFT IS WINNING DELEGATES

Unanimous Vote Gives Executive Indiana Representation.

Roosevelt Men Banked on Result in First of Northern States—Fairbanks and Others Win Places.

CONVENTION NEWS.

Taft wins twelve delegates from Indiana.

Taft steam roller ready to seat Taft delegates from Arizona, Indiana, California and Kentucky.

Francis J. Heney, famous "boss buster," comes to fight for California Roosevelt delegates.

Vigilance committees of Taft and Roosevelt camps prepare campaigns to keep respective delegations intact and also to disrupt opposing forces.

Roosevelt forces send out call for seven governors and other chiefs who will canvass situation and advise Colonel Roosevelt about time for his dramatic entrance to Chicago.

Taft delegates from southern states, seated by the committee without opposition from the Roosevelt members, plan to issue statement to the public denouncing the worthless contests filed by the colonel's followers.

The Taft steam roller worked in the Republican national committee. The president won all the Alabama contests and the contest for the four delegates-at-large from Arkansas.

The six Taft delegates-at-large and the First, Second and Fifth districts, two delegates each, from Alabama, were seated by unanimous vote. The Sixth district contest was withdrawn by the Roosevelt forces, while the contest in the Ninth district was decided by the first test vote—thirty-eight for Taft and fifteen for Roosevelt.

Twelve delegates from Florida, 28 from Georgia, 16 from Alabama, and eight from Arkansas were also given to Taft. Roosevelt, so far, had not secured a single contested delegate.

At another meeting Taft generals added Indiana's "big four" delegates-at-large and eight other contested delegates from the same state to the administration column, making the total Taft count 84, Roosevelt's "band of hope" has not one "O. K." so far in the struggle involving control of the convention.

The decision of the national committee on Indiana followed one of the most turbulent scenes of the hearing, in which charges of bad faith were exchanged and much "steam roller" talk was heard. The vote was unanimous, Colonel Harry S. New not voting.

The Taft "big four" consists of Colonel New, who is directing the anti-Roosevelt movements here; Charles W. Fairbanks, former vice president; James E. Watson, former congressman, and Joseph D. Oliver. They displace the Roosevelt "big four" headed by Albert J. Beveridge, former United States senator. James A. Hemenway, a former senator from Indiana, was heard in the arguments for the Taft side.

Roosevelt men were banking much on Indiana, because it was the first of the northern states to be reached on the contest checker board. They made allegations of wholesale fraud and contended they controlled the state convention legally.

The Taft men ridiculed their contentions. Colonel New insisted from the start there was no more basis for contest than was developed in the southern states. The argument was allowed to run freely over the allotted time of half an hour for each side.

District contests in which eight additional seats from Indiana are in question went the Taft way.

Just before the Indiana cases came up the committee had engaged in a wrangle over the California contest which, for a moment, appeared as though some of the members would come to blows.

The row over the California cases started when Francis J. Heney impugned the motives of the Taft members of the committee. Senator Borah was accused of insulting the committeemen when he said all the honesty was not on the Taft side. Thomas J. Devine of Colorado shook his fist at Senator Borah and declared all the honesty was not on the Roosevelt side.

When the tumult partly subsided the question of postponing the California cases was put to a vote, the Taft forces winning by a vote of 38 to 13. The cases then went over until Wednesday.

The engineers of the steam roller that is running over the hopes of Theodore Roosevelt have figured out that when they finish the roll call of the temporary organization of the Republican national convention it will disclose 560 votes for William H. Taft. This is a margin of exactly twenty above a majority.

On the other hand, friends of Roosevelt are claiming that in spite of the domination of the national committee by the Taft forces with its corrollary of a Taft majority in the temporary roll call that Theodore Roosevelt will control the committee on credentials.

C. W. FAIRBANKS

Ex-Vice President Is Indiana Delegate at Large to Chicago.

"That committee," said Ormsby McHarg, "is made up of representatives of the forty-eight states and five territories and possessions. The members are appointed by their respective delegations. Roosevelt will control a majority of these delegations."

"Have you any figures to show that Roosevelt will control a majority of the committee on credentials?" Mr. McHarg was asked.

"None that I care to make public at this time," he replied tersely.

If McHarg is right, the inevitable conclusion must be that the decisive fight for control of the convention will be made in the commitete on credentials, and that Theodore Roosevelt will win in spite of the steam roller.

President Taft's friends, however, were not inclined to take McHarg's statement seriously.

SENATOR NIXON DEAD

Nevada Solon Passes Away in Washington.

Senator Nixon of Nevada is dead at Washington, after a long illness.

Senator Nixon was born on a fruit ranch in California in 1860. His people were not wealthy. His father had traveled from Arkansas to California in a covered wagon.

At eighteen he learned telegraphy. A year later he got a station at Brown, Nevada. Finally he made the acquaintance of a man named Bender, who offered him a position in a bank at Reno. While serving in the bank he turned a neat profit in California land and presently opened a bank on his own account at Winnemucca, Nevada. This bank prospered from the first.

Nevertheless, his great wealth did not come to him all at once. One evening he was sitting in the lobby of a hotel in San Francisco when a friend induced him to invest $5,000 in a Goldfield claim. Later he bought further claims for $15,000. One of the mines in the group he had thus acquired yielded $500,000 a month in gold.

Mr. Nixon served in the Nevada legislature, and when William M. Steward was retired from the United States senate in 1905 Mr. Nixon was elected in his place.

His vast holdings were valued at $20,000,000. In 1909 he caused to be built what was said to be the handsomest home in Nevada. It cost him half a million dollars.

DETROIT — Over 2,000 Detroit iron molders went out on a sympathetic strike as a protest against the attitude of the police and the court toward the aluminum and brass foundry strikers, who have been out since March.

GRAND RAPIDS—Morris A. Cook, who was former high school foot ball star and who featured in games against Detroit Central high several years ago, is dead here of tuberculosis, aged twenty-nine.

LARGER FACTORY FORCE

More Men Employed In State than a Year Ago.

Commissioner Powers Also Shows Fewer Women and Boys at Work During 1911.

Lansing, Mich., June 8.—Labor Commissioner Perry F. Powers has compiled statistics showing that there has been an increase of 8,355 in the number of men employed in the factories in the state, as compared with one year ago. However, the number of women employed in factories has decreased 613.

There are 269,492 men employed at general factory work as compared with 261,137 in 1910. At present there are 44,328 women employed in shops and factories as compared with 44,941 two years ago. The wages of the men increased 13 cents a day from $2.19 to $2.32 in 1911, while the wages of women were increased six cents a day, from $1.18 to $1.24.

The report shows that the number of boys employed in factories decreased from 2,382 to 1,995 and their wages decreased two cents a day from 93 cents, their stipend in 1910.

There were 366 more factories in the state at the time statistics in this report was gathered than there were a year ago the number in 1911 being 3,456.

The average daily wage paid in 1910 was $2.13 as compared with $2,23 in 1911. The total amount of wages paid daily in 1910 was $723,021 and in 1911 $784,108.

NECK IS BROKEN BY LOG

Farmer Near Petoskey Dies Soon After Reaching Hospital.

Petoskey, Mich., June 10.—Five minutes after entering Petoskey hospital Lindel M. Hill, aged fifty, died as the result of injuries sustained in the morning while logging near Levering, his home.

A log had become embedded in the ground and Mr. Hill attempted to pull it out by hitching a team to the raised end. When the horses moved the log swung and hit Mr. Hill in the head, breaking his neck and fracturing his skull. The widow and several children survive.

EIGHT PERSONS SLAIN

Prominent Iowa Business Man and Family Killed.

At Villisca, Iowa, Joseph Moore, a prominent Villisca business man, his wife and four children, and two women, supposed to be Mrs. Gilder and her daughter, relatives of the Moores, were found murdered in the Moore home.

Their heads had been mashed, and an ax covered with blood and human hair, found in the house, is supposed to have been the instrument with which the crime was committed.

All were murdered in their beds. There is no definite clew to the murderer, although search is being made it is said, for a suspect.

No robbery was committed and it seems clear that only a desire for revenge could have prompted the murder, unless it was the work of a madman

UNIT RULE IN OHIO

It Is Put Through Democratic Convention After Fierce Fight.

At Toledo, Ohio, Governor Judson Harmon's organization, after a fierce fight on the floor of the convention, forced the unit rule through the Democratic state convention here by a vote of 597 to 355.

ALPENA—A most liberal proposition from the Boyne City, Gaylord and Alpena railroad to extend that railroad from Gaylord, its present terminus, to Alpena, if this city will furnish right of way through this county and city and terminal facilities has been accepted by the chamber of commerce. If the road is completed to Alpena, the White Brothers, of Boyne City, chief owners of the road, agree to haul 15,000 acres of hardwood to Alpena and build a mill in Alpena and employ 150 men to cut the timber. This will give Alpena a cross-state railroad and more direct connection with Chicago and the northwest.

JACKSON — By means of the assistance of an improvised ladder and a piece of old lawn hose, Chester Tibbetts, a convict at Jackson prison scaled the north wall of the yard and made his escape. He has not yet been recaptured. The escape of Tibbetts is the fourth getaway to be registered at Jackson prison within twenty-four hours. Three other convicts spread the bars in a west wing window and made their escape, two of the men being captured about two hours later. William Miley, the Hillsdale postoffice robber, is still at large.

IONIA—John A. Taber, who was postmaster for many years and an old resident of Hubbardston, committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid. The suicide followed a complaint made by W. H. Langdon, a Hubbardston merchant, to the sheriff to the effect that Taber, who was sixty years old, had been unduly friendly with little girls of the village. Langdon's young daughter being one of them. The sheriff had planned to arrest Taber but before starting for Hubbardston he was informed that Taber had taken his own life.

MARSHALL—Louis E. Setwart, who is the county manager for the "dry" forces, has announced that the campaign to turn Calhoun county back to the "dry" column will open next month. He claims that he will have the best organization that the "drys" have had in previous campaigns. A canvass for funds will start as soon as the organization is perfected.

MASON — A fierce fire, which is supposed to have been started by lightning during an electrical storm damaged the Ingham county poorhouse in Meridian township, about $1,200. Assistance was rushed from here and the Lansing fire department was called but the fire was controlled before it arrived. The roof of the main building was practically wrecked.

OLD GLORY.

The Star Spangled Banner Celebrates it's 135th Birthday Today June 14, 1912

"'Tis the Star Spangled banner
Oh long may it wave,
O'er the land of the free,
And the home of the brave."

Today June 14, is the 135th anniversary of the American Flag.

June 14, 1777, Congress then ensembled in Independence Hall, and passed the following resolution, "Resolved that the flag of the 13 United States be thirteen alternate stripes of red and white, that the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation"

In 1794 when Vermont and Kentucky were added, two stripes and two stars were added to the field, but at the end of some 23 years it was decided to return to the 13 stripes,

At first our flag floated over a population of 3,000,000 and today Old Glory waves over one hundred million

South Dakota was the first state to pass a flag day law in 1897, and today most of the states observe the day, by a display of flags and appointed exercises in the schools.

Our Flag is an emblem of equality to all. It is claimed that more have fought under its stars and stripes than under any other flag, and a million have died for it, that our nation might be free. As we display our banner today, we proclaim to all, our love and reverence for our country, our homes and the dear old flag. adding a new star for each new State,

Salute the Colors"-at the word each heart is thrilling
We doff our hats, our eyes grow dim with tears drops filling,
Our fathers loved the dear old flag,
and told its story
Our brave ones died the flag to save-
'Salute Old Glory."

Kept its Ministers Long.

"The town of Lancaster, Mass., in which I live," said Mr. Harold Parker, "is a place of little size—not over 2,000 population—and yet it has enough of individuality and quality, not to speak of history, behind it to make its inhabitants very proud of living there. In the first place it is ancient, a charter having been granted it in 1653, and the same year witnessed the establishment of the first parish church, which I can assure you is no commonplace house of worship.

"The present structure isn't so very old and yet it dates from 1810 and looks good to last another century. The remarkable feature, however, is that in its history of over 250 years this church has had but eight ministers, including the incumbent. Several of them were pastors for fifty years or more and the average is over thirty years, which I imagine is a record no other religious congregation can duplicate."—Baltimore American.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Press dispatches from Columbus say: "Delight is not a strong enough word to express the feelings of the women of Ohio, who have fought for suffrage, at the action of the Constitutional Convention in adopting a woman suffrage clause by a vote of 74 to 37 and deciding that this measure be presented on the same basis as all the other constitutional amendments at the coming election." Mrs Harriet Taylor Upton, President of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association, declares that this final vote assures complete victory for woman suffrage at the State election, September 3.

Suffrage for New Hampshire women is one of the most important matters to be acted on at the Constitutional Convention which begins its session June 5. The State Woman Suffrage Association, with the co-operation of the Men's Leagues for Equal Suffrage, has succeeded in organizing every town and county, and an active campaign is being waged to bring the question before the voters in November.

Plans for the Michigan Equal Suffrage campaign are rapidly maturing, says the Grand Rapids Herald, and everything will be in readiness immediately after the Fourth of July. The work so far has been organizing and will continue along this line until all details are completed and the time ripe for more aggressive methods

Wisconsin campaign managers are fortunate in securing the services of Miss Inez Milholland, the brilliant young suffragist who has just received her L. L. B. degree, having passed the difficult examinations of the New York Law University with honor, Miss Milholland sailed for Europe June 3 but will cut her vacation short in order to work for suffrage in Wisconsin during the months of August and September.

DEEP MYSTERIES OF LIFE

If We Could Fathom Them Little Would Be Left for Us to Do Here.

If we could fathom life's mysteries there would be little left for us to do on earth. If we could understand why the sun shines for some and the shadows deepen for others there would be no use to try to work out the problem of existence. It would be solved for us beforehand and the great questions which now quicken our souls into being would never rise to the surface. It is the mystery of it all, the uncertainty of everything save the existence of God, which makes life such a wonder puzzle, a puzzle to be picked out piece by piece and fitted together in his own good time. It is true that sometimes we grow weary of our work. We find the processes too slow to suit our impatient desires and the results not altogether equal to our expectations, but for all that we never lose our ambition to correctly solve the problem as it is presented to us for solution. We are in this world to work out our destiny and the means to this end are placed within our reach from the very outset, but it so happens that our very humanity binds us at times to our best interests, and we carelessly and even wilfully pass by the very things which would prove of most service to us. Because our inclinations lie in other directions than those for which by nature we seem best fitted we often make the mistake of beginning wrong, a condition which naturally forestalls any hope of success.—Charleston News and Courier.

Value of a Man.

The value of a man to the world is not measured by the wealth he possesses, or the business interests he directs. The world is poorer for the loss of the men who went down with the Titanic, not because a few of them were millionaires, or captains of industry, but because all of them were men, men with the heroism, the self-devotion, to help others—not their loved ones alone, but strangers—to safety, and then step calmly back to wait for death.

Poorer! Yes, but richer, too! It is not grief alone that brings tears to our eyes and lumps to our throats as we read the story, but pride and thankfulness, as well. There come times to most of us when, discouraged by someone's folly or weakness—perhaps our own—the world seems to us a sordid place, hardly worth saving. But we take heart again at every fresh revelation, such as this, of the divine in man.—Zion's Herald.

RESOLVED:—That the assessment roll for the year 1912 be certified to the Village Assessor requiring him to levy upon the real and personal property appearing therein the following amounts, viz.

For General Fund...........................$10,528
For General Highway Fund...................2,807
For Interest and Sinking Fund, ...3,600

Moved and supported that the resolution of the Finance Committee be adopted.

Ayes:-Service, Elliott, Look, Fisher, Gillespie, Daisher.

Nayes.-None. Motion Carried.

The petition of several residents requesting that certain trees, brush, vines, etc. situate on East line of the Corporation on North Brownville Road be cut by order of Village Council was read.

The President referred said petition to the Street Committee.

Moved and supported that C. M. Gilbert be granted privilege of emptying the roof water from off his brick store building, situate on North side of Chicago Street, between Evans and Ottawa Streets, into the sewer.

Motion Carried.

Moved and supported that the Corporation expend not to exceed $50.00 as its share of the expense of oiling Chicago Street, West, said appropriation to be used in oiling street crossings. Motion Carried,

The following resolution was offered.

Resolved, That the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the east line of Democratic street in this village which lies along and adjoining the west line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County and State of Michigan, and described as follows.

South ½ Lot 5, Block 12, Hoag addition to Village of Tecumseh.

Said walk to be 4 feet in width, on the established grade, of Portland cement, sand and gravel,

The trench shall be excavated to a depth of 10 inches at least below the established grade except for driveways and street crossings when the depth shall be at least 12 inches below the established grade.

The foundation shall consist of clean cinders or gravel entirely free from clay, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of at least 6 inches, except for driveways and street crossings which shall be at least 8 inches.

On the foundation shall be laid a concrete filling, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of 3 inches.

The concrete shall consist of not less than one part cement to six parts of clean, sharp sand or gravel.

On the concrete filling shall be laid a finishing layer one inch thick, consisting of one part cement and two parts of very clean sharp sand, The said finishing layer shall in all cases be finished with a granular surface with a wooden float.

To secure a true line for the edges of the walk 2x4 strips shall be solidly staked down parallel to grade and on the true line of the walk, these strips to be removed when the walk is finished for use.

The concrete filling shall be tamped thoroughly till the water comes to the surface, then the finishing layer shall be immediately spread on in thin coats thoroughly rammed into the concrete, each coat being trowled until the water appears on the surface, the top surface being only trowled sufficiently to leave it smooth. The foundation shall be thoroughly wet while being rammed.

The joints for the blocks shall be made in the concrete and then in the finishing layer directly above those in the concrete.

Only Portland cement shall be used in the construction of walks and shall be in every respect the equal of the best grades of German Portland cement. The concrete filling shall be made from the same cement as the finishing layer.

And the owners and occupants of said lots and premises are hereby required to do the necessary grading therefor and to construct said sidewalk according to the provisions of this resolution, under the supervision the street commissioner, said walk to completed within 30 days from personal service, upon the owner or occupant of said described land, of a copy of this resolution, and in case of any default in the construction and completion of said walk, as herein directed, the street commissioner is hereby ordered to have said walk constructed, and payment therefor shall be required of the owner of said above described land, and the expense thereof assessed and levied upon said land in the same manner as other taxes.

Moved and supported that resolution be accepted and adopted.

Ayes: Service, Elliott, Look, Fisher, Gillespie, Daisher.

Nayes: None.

Moved and supported that request of Civic Improvement Federation Club to make improvements in Park commonly known as Standpipe Park be granted, subject to the supervision of the Committee on Public Grounds and Buildings; and that they be authorized to have not to exceed four incondescent lights installed, which lights shall be maintained by the Corporation during the months of June, July, August and September of each year. Motion Carried.

Moved and supported that we do now adjourn. Motion Carried.

Plymouth Hard Coal.

We are taking orders for June and July delivery, after the first of August the price will be higher and without a doubt will be more hard to get.

We have signed a statment that every ton of Plymouth coal we buy costs us 25c premium over other hard coals.

You wonder why we do not sell circular coals or charge more. The reason is simple. Circular coals do not run uniform, some cars are good, others are not, the customer gets his coal in his bin and has to suffer, there is no redress from the mines just grin and bear it. With the PLYMOUTH it is different, it all is uniform, nice clean coal free from slate and dirt, lasts longer, gives out more heat with less ash.

The result we have satisfied customers, and a satisfied customer makes more customers so you see it all is more profitable for us to supply good coal all the time,

If you want to be sure of your coal get your order in right away as the mines take care of orders "First come, first served" and we are taking care of our orders in the same manner. Don't delay but come in and talk it over.

IMPORTANT LETTER TO ALL WHO SUFFER

"I suffered from indigestion for a long time. Last May I almost died. The doctor told me it was acute indigestion and I could not be cured, Since that time I have suffered very much, as some days everything I ate, even light food, as soft boiled eggs, would distress me. I lost fifteen pounds. Sometimes I felt that I could not live another day. A month ago I got a box of MI-O-NA tablets. Before I had used them a week I was better. I have used two boxes and I feel as well as I ever did. Ennice A. Peters, Jackson, Ga.

"Everybody's Doing It,"

DOING WHAT?

Buying Goods that have Quality

We have just purchased the famous Hotchkiss Central California fruit for delivery in November. This fruit is selected from the very best cultivated orchards in California, being strictly hand-picked and choicest variety. The apricots and peaches are peeled before going into cans.

2½ lb. cans of apricots, lemon cling or free-stone peaches put up in 45 degree syrup, to retail at 25c.

These are put up in sanitary cans, covered with glass label, and we expect to have them in our store about Nov. 1st, with a can of each open, that you may examine their contents.

Compare these fruits with any other fruit packed in cans and the quality will speak for itself.

We do not ask you to book your order or pay for someone to come and make you a visit, but we do want you to come to our store when these goods arrive, compare the goods and consider the price.

We know that these goods are the finest that can be grown and if you can beat them, we will pay the bill.

PINEAPPLES ARE AT THEIR BEST

They Put an End to It

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the sum claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be fore closed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and state of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adria Michigan, and being the e p r i ises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

PRESIDENT IN PERIL

Yacht Mayflower Narrowly Escapes Collision with Steamer.

President and Mrs. Taft and a party of guests on board the naval yacht Mayflower narrowly escaped a collision with the steamer Northland of the Norfolk and Washington line in the lower part of Chesapeake Bay, off Smith's Point light, while enroute to Hampton Roads.

As the Northland was attempting to pass on the port side of the Mayflower the naval vessel crossed over the Northland's bow. If Captain Posey of the Northland had not stopped his engines and turned the bow of his vessel away from the Mayflower's stern the two vessels would have collided. President and Mrs. Taft and their guests were asleep at the time and were not aware of their narow escape from accident until morning.

Defeats Insanity Proceeding.

Found not insane at Portland, Ind., Mrs. Rebecca Hoppes of near Redkey was discharged by Judge Moran following the conclusion of a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus after an acceptance had been received for her commitment to East Haven hospital at Richmond. She charged that her commitment had been procured by her husband, Peter C. Hoppes, to defeat a pending divorce suit.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

PORT HURON—It is said unless the officials of the Pere Marquette railroad possess an inclination to appear before Judge Tappan of this city for contempt of court, that company will be unable to do any more work on the farm of Charles Lewis, situated several miles north of Port Huron. The judge, at the instance of Mr. Lewis, has issued a temporary injunction, restraining the Pere Marquette and its employes from building any additional fence, another switch or doing any other kind of damage on Lewis' farm. The action, which has been instituted in the circuit court in which the injunction was asked for, comes as a result of a fight which took place between Pere Marquette employes and about a dozen farmers less than two weeks ago, when the railroad men attempted to lay a new switch and erect a fence. In the bill of complaint Mr. Lewis avers that when the comapny attempted to erect the fence, considerable of his property was tramped upon and damaged.

ANN ARBOR—A group of university men, shrouded in long white robes, came upon the campus, and returned to the clan's headquarters half an hour later with eleven men captives. These men were the wise men of the senior literary class, the men of the order of Druids, and those who were gathered into the mysterious of the order were: Harold Abbott, Ann Arbor; Carter Adams, Ann Arbor; Heyward Irving, Malone, N. Y.; Emerson Smith, Detroit; Max Staley, Traverse City; Joseph Bell, Birth Run; Carl Schoeffle, Freeport, Ill.; Trucy Bogart, Gloverville, N. Y.; Kingley Gould, Battle Creek; Henry Spring, Ann Arbor and Max Kuhr, Chinook, Mont.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

It was during the war of 1812, the centenary of whose beginning is celebrated on June 18, that "The Star Spangled Banner" was written. The British had already sacked and burned the government buildings in Washington and on their return had attempted to take Baltimore, in which they were defeated. Francis Scott Key was aboard a ship in the Chesapeake during the bombardment. On seeing the American flag still afloat in the morning he wrote the song. Several claims have been made as to the origin of the flag. The matter is not settled. The symbolism is better known. The stripes stand for the thirteen original colonies, the stars for the states. As to the color scheme, the generally accepted version is that the blue stands for the heavens, to which the colonists made their appeal; the white represents purity, and the red is emblematic of liberty.

BINDER TWINE IN DEMAND.

Prison Out put Exceeds Last Year Despite Short Wheat Crop.

Jackson, Mich., June 10. — Despite the fact that the season's wheat crop will be below the average throughout the state, the output of binder twine at Jackson prison up to the present time is more than the output of last year. About 2,375,000 pounds of twine have thus far been sold, while the total sales for last year amounted to about 2,250,000 pounds. It is believed that the sales of twine this year will be at least 500,000 pounds more than that of last year.

The selling territory has been expanded at least 50 per cent during the last year, according to Warden Simpson. The plant is closed for a month at present for a clean-up and for the making of repairs on the machinery. The daily out put of the plant, which employs from 95 to 100 convicts, is 15,000 pounds of binder twine per day

Car Ahead

By Harmony Weller

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

George Verner entered a crowded surface car and found the last unoccupied seat. It chanced to be directly behind a very young woman and an infant.

Verner attempted to become interested in his paper, but the profile of the girl ahead of him stole his glances with every turn of her head. She was very young, very new to motherhood apparently; the man behind knew this because of the frantic, strained effort she made to keep the child in one position that it might not awake. A more experienced mother would have known that the baby would rest more comfortably in the easy relaxation of her arms. Verner remembered the fearful, breathless clutch with which he had first held his sister's baby, but gradually that feeling of holding a breakable toy had left him.

There was that same fear in the eyes of the young girl ahead of him, and Verner knew that she was living in momentary dread of the child falling to pieces in her arms.

He was beginning to sense the strain of her tense attitude when the car came to a stop.

"Car ahead!" yelled the conductor.

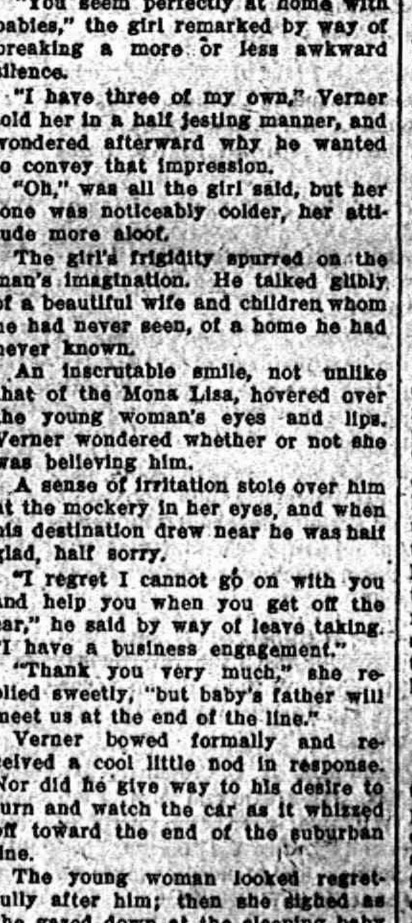
The passengers, in various stages of peevishness, gathered themselves and their belongings and prepared to follow the conductor's bidding.

Not so with the woman and the baby. She cast one startled glance at the outgoing passengers, and then her eyes met Verner's. There was positive tragedy in their depths. Then it was that Verner saw the big suit case on the floor beside her.

"How did she manage to get on the car if she couldn't get off with a suit case and a baby?" Verner asked himself while he raised his cap and addressed her.

"If you will permit me—I will carry—"

"Oh—if you would be so kind," she gasped in a frightened little voice, and before Verner realized it she had put the baby in his arms and was about to pick up the suit case. "I am more used to this," she said with a half blush.



If You Will Permit Me, I Will Carry—

"I can easily take both," Verner told her as he swung the tiny infant against one big shoulder and took the suit case from her.

"Her eyes are decidedly coquettish for a young mother," was his inward comment as he helped her into the car ahead. He found it within his consciousness to condemn married flirts, even though they had shaded gray eyes and one elusive dimple.

When he had put her comfortably into another seat in the car ahead she made room for him beside her and sent up a smile into Verner's eyes.

Although he felt himself to be treading on dangerous ground, he accepted the offered seat. His destination was a few blocks beyond and he felt that his heart could not be hopelessly damaged in so short a time. He sighed as he wondered who the man might be who called this little beauty his own.

"You seem perfectly at home with babies," the girl remarked by way of breaking a more or less awkward silence.

"I have three of my own," Verner told her in a half jesting manner, and wondered afterward why he wanted to convey that impression.

"Oh," was all the girl said, but her tone was noticeably colder, her attitude more aloof.

The girl's frigidity spurred on the man's imagination. He talked glibly of a beautiful wife and children whom he had never seen, of a home he had never known.

An inscrutable smile, not unlike that of the Mona Lisa, hovered over the young woman's eyes and lips. Verner wondered whether or not she was believing him.

A sense of irritation stole over him at the mockery in her eyes, and when his destination drew near he was half glad, half sorry.

"I regret I cannot go on with you and help you when you get off the car," he said by way of leave taking. "I have a business engagement."

"Thank you very much," she replied sweetly, "but baby's father will meet us at the end of the line."

Verner bowed formally and received a cool little nod in response. Nor did he give way to his desire to turn and watch the car as it whizzed off toward the end of the suburban line.

The young woman looked regretfully after him; then she sighed as she gazed down at the sleeping baby and drew him with greater tenderness into her arms.

"He is too good looking even for dreams," she murmured, and whether she referred to the small man in her arms or the big man on the street no one, perhaps not even the girl herself, knew.

Another meeting did not occur until some three months later. It was at a dance given by the suburban yacht club.

Verner entered the ball room with a stately beauty on his arm. Before they had made one turn of the room he knew that the little mother was among the guests and that she was popular with a number of cavaliers. The stately beauty felt Verner's arms stiffen around her waist and wondered at his sudden lack of interest in her breezy conversation.

She might be a widow, was the thought uppermost in Verner's mind, but the brilliance of her costume and the existence of the tiny infant practically denied this.

Together with his condemnation of married flirts Verner felt irritated and jealous because of the men who dangled over the girl's dance order.

He avoided catching her eye as long as he could, but when she danced so close to him that he saw the mockery in her expression and her nod to him he could only return her greeting. After that Verner found that he was being introduced to her.

"The ninth and seventeenth dances are leap year waltzes, Mr. Verner," she said, looking laughingly into his eyes. "May I please have both of them?"

"You may if I may have two others," he put in quickly.

She blushed swiftly and handed Verner her card.

"Have you a dance left, Miss Gregory?" another moth about the candle questioned the girl.

Verner's startled, interrogative eyes searched the girl's face, and she laughed.

"You are not married—then?" he questioned without regard for the amused listeners.

"Not any more than you are, Mr. Verner." She glanced at him from beneath her lashes. "You know—I didn't believe, even for a moment, that you had three kiddies."

Verner had the grace to [illegible]lush. "Just the same," he told her [illegible]ingly, "you deliberately tried to [illegible]aim that baby off as yours."

"I did not," she retorted quickly. "You took it entirely for granted. I was merely carrying my brother's baby over to my home and somebody helped me both on and off the car. Of course—" she paused and glanced shyly at Verner—"none of us even dreamed of my having to change cars."

"And yet," he looked deep into her eyes, "it was fortunate—in this case, wasn't it?" He waited with laughter in his eyes but a compelling note in his voice.

Alice Gregory looked up and the dimple came into play.

"Perhaps it was," she said.

Fools and Their Bets.

The story recently printed that a fool, to win a bet, put a billiard ball in his mouth, and it took a surgical operation and the removal of five teeth to get it out, reminds Father Beck of a simpleton he once knew whose first name was John. One day John was with some girls who were having fun putting hen's eggs in their mouths, and John declared that he could put a goose egg in his mouth, and the girls dared him to. John was brave, and wouldn't take a dare, and by dint of perseverance he got the goose egg in, but when he tried to take it out it wouldn't come, and when he was threatened with lockjaw, the girls got scared and hustled John off to a doctor. The doctor, after diagnosing the case, doubled up his fist and with an under cut belted John one on the chin. John was relieved, but the egg never amounted to much as a goose afterward. We are sorry to relate, says Father Beck, that the experience did not do much good in curing John of the silly habit. He kept on biting off more than he could chew for the remainder of his life.—Kansas City Journal.

Oppose Eccentric Dances.

London hostesses, following the tradition of the land which found its way into the saying "Write a letter to the Times," are letting newspapers know that they will resist to the utmost any effort to introduce the grizzly bear hug and other American dances into English ballrooms. The newspapers themselves do not share the fear that these freaks of the waxed floor will gain a foothold there, but one of them says that "though the craze for freak dancing prevalent in America has not yet invaded England, the American influence is plainly visible in many English ballrooms, and eccentricities in dancing seem to be gaining favor with a section of the dancing public."

New Idea in Teapots.

The tipsy teapot is popular nowadays at afternoon teas. It may be found in Fifth avenue homes and in the rooms of the Barnard college girls. The pots are handy for brewing tea daintily and quickly. The tipsy teapot has six legs instead of feet. In the teapot is a special receptacle for the tea, with holes for the water to percolate from the main part of the pot. The tea is placed in the little compartment and then the pot is tipped on its side, permitting the steaming water to absorb the strength of the tea leaves.—New York Press.

School Children Handicapped.

"Fully one-third of all children in the primary and grammar grades are physically or mentally incapacitated, or both," says Rheta Childe Dorr, in an article on "The Child That is Different," in the Century. "These children, approximately one-third of all children under fourteen years of age, cannot keep up with the ordinary school curriculum, which is devised to meet the needs of perfectly healthy, normal, average, well fed, well cared for youngsters."

Sold Wife to Friend.

At the village of Utznach, Switzerland, the other day, a curious sale took place. With her own consent a woman was sold by her husband to another man, an Italian, and a friend of the Swiss couple. The price asked by the affectionate husband was four dollars. To further "legalize" the bargain, the Italian procured two witnesses to the transaction and had a contract written on stamped government paper.

Poet Can Live on Atmosphere.

Some of the dull, utilitarian minds of the world are sometimes at loss to know how the seemingly improvident poet can dive on what appears to be a very meager income. Stupid things! They have not the comprehension and delicious imagination to perceive that the true bard can warm himself by his own poetic fire and secure his food and drink from his mince-Pierian spring.

CLOSE OF STRIKE AT PERTH AMBOY

Backbone of Labor Trouble Seems to Be Broken.

MEN GAIN DEMANDS MADE

No Official Statements Are Yet Issued, However—Strikers Return to Work for Barber Asphalt Company Today.

Perth Amboy, N. J., June 17.—There is every indication that the strike that for a week has been marked with riot and bloodshed is at an end.

Adjutant General W. F. Sadler, after a long conference between the officials of the American Smelting and Refining company and a committee of the strikers, telephoned Governor Wilson that the backbone of the strike had been broken. General Sadler has left Perth Amboy and so have about 100 of the special deputies who have been held in reserve for strike duty.

For the first time since the opening of the strike there has been no violence. The funerals of Stephen Budock and Tony Terhundy, shot in Friday's riot, were held at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The "dead line" about the smelting company's works was abolished and visitors were allowed to go about as they pleased, but were kept moving.

A settlement has already been reached between the Barber Asphalt company and their 800 or so striking employes by which all the men have gone to work. The 1,500 out at the American Smelting and Refining company's plant, it is believed, will soon go back. The committee from the men who conferred with their employers is to report the result of the conference. Although no official statements have been given out, it is understood that they have secured pretty much everything they asked for.

BECOMES ILL AT WEDDING

Mother Falls Unconscious, but Minister Completes Ceremony.

Madison, Ind., June 17.—The final words of the ceremony that wedded Alma Murphy to Chester Weatherford were spoken while Mrs. Solomon Weatherford, the groom's mother, lay unconscious on the floor, within a few feet of the bridal couple.

Mrs. Weatherford had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. The minister retained his presence of mind and completed the ceremony before the bride and groom had become aware of the woman's illness.

Held for Stoning Detective.

Shelbyville, Ind., June 17. — Leroy Joyce, nineteen years old, and Paul Colvin, seventeen, were arrested here by Chief of Police Manlove and Patrolman Fagel on complaint of Detective Penny of the New York Central lines, whom the boys are said to have stoned as a train passed through here. Penny leaped from the train and shot twice at the boys, but they escaped. They admitted they had a grudge against the detective.

OHIO'S FATAL TORNADO

Two Persons Killed and Much Damage Done in Zanesville.

Zanesville, O., June 17.—As the result of a tornado that struck this place two persons were killed, two others injured fatally, a dozen more received hurt of such a character that the outcome is doubtful, while scores of others were less seriously injured, and property valued at $500,000 was destroyed.

BLUEJACKETS READY

United States Marines Are Entrenched Near Santiago.

Report of a Fight in Which General Estenoz's Forces Are Said To Have Been Defeated.

Havana, June 17. — The United States marines, stationed at El Cobre, ten miles to the west of Santiago, have thrown up entrenchments and are well prepared to resist any attack.

The United States transport Ceasar arrived off Santiago with supplies.

News received from the scene of operations in Oriente Province states Colonel Valiente's column, after an engagement at Jarahueca about twenty-five miles north of Santiago, on June 12 in which the forces of General Estenoz are reported to have been defeated, had another brush with a small party of rebels. Several insurgents were killed and the band was dispersed.

The mayor of Palma Sorriano, to the northeast of Santiago, reports that the conditions there are most serious. Over 4,000 persons have taken refuge in the town where they are sleeping in the streets and are absolutely desstitude.

VACCINATION IS DENOUNCED

Osteopaths Also Adopt Resolutions Condemning Owen Bill.

Peoria, Ill., June 17.—The thirteenth annual convention of the Illinois Osteopathic Association, in resolutions adopted, savagely attacks the Owen bill now before congress and the practice of vaccination.

The Owens bill is advocated by the American Medical society and provides for the creation of a national health bureau. Joining with the osteopaths in denouncing it are the homeopaths, the eclectics and Christian Scientists.

Vaccination is characterized as a relic of barbarism. How to secure legislation was discussed at length, as was the proposed endowment of an osteopathic institute in Chicago.

Boy Killed in Runaway.

Peru, Ind., June 17.—In a runaway accident near Swayzee John Baldwin, aged five years, a son of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Baldwin of this city, was killed and Mrs. Baldwin received injuries which probably will cripple her for life.

Tornado Kills Four Persons.

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 17.—Four persons were killed and several injured in a tornado which virtually wiped away the village of Nelagony. The storm came suddenly and the wind was so powerful that a freight train was blown off the track.

Fifteen Years for Assault.

Grant, Mich., June 17.—Dennis Hawley, of Ensley township, was convicted of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder and sentenced to fifteen years.

ROOSEVELT AND BACKERS CONFER

Colonel Says that Talk of a Bolt Is Nonsense.

MARCHING CLUB BANDS BLARE

Candidate's Suite in Congress Hotel Is Center of Attraction for Notables—He Attends Fourth Presbyterian Church.

Chicago, June 17.—The conferences between Colonel Roosevelt and his principal backers, which began when he arrived here, have lasted much of the time since.

The Roosevelt governors and big and little members of the camp edged their way through the guarded door of the "presidential suite" on the second floor of the Congress hotel, and the bolt rumor persisted. Finally it was reported that word had gone out to the Roosevelt men that they were to carry the fight for the unseated Roosevelt delegates to the committee on credentials, then into the convention and that if "justice" was denied they could withdraw and hold a saparate convention.

When Colonel Roosevelt was asked if such instructions had been given, he declared: "That's nonsense."

The colonel seemed pleased over the letter from Clark Grier of Georgia and the four other Georgia delegates pledging their support.

Among those who participated in the conferences were Governor Johnson of California, Governor Glasscock of West Virginia, Governor Hadley of Missouri, Governor Stubbs of Kansas, Governor Osborn of Michigan, Governor Oddie of Nevada, Governor Vessey of South Dakota and Governor Deneen of Illinois, Senator Dixon, Ex-Governor Fort of New Jersey and George L. Record, the Hudson county leader, State Senator Flinn of Pennsylvania, Judge Ben Lindsey, George W. Perkins, Frank A. Munsey, Alexander P. Moore, James R. Garfield and the Pinchot brothers.

Every little while the marching club of some Roosevelt delegation would roar into the Roosevelt headquarters, which opens into the corridor near the door of Mr. Roosevelt's council chamber. Brass bands, playing the inevitable "Hot Time in the Old Town," made it hard for the Roosevelt conference to go on conferring and were "shooed" away, only to give place to others just as noisy.

M'GOVERN WANTS TO STICK

Wisconsin Governor Refuses to Withdraw His Chairmanship Candidacy.

Chicago, June 17.—The recalcitrancy of Governor McGovern of Wisconsin was emphasized as the disturbing factor in the LaFollette camp. The LaFollette managers are plainly upset over his attitude in refusing to pull off his candidacy for the temporary chairmanship in response to their wishes.

The hopes of the LaFollete managers of adding the ten South Dakota delegates to their strength seemed to be dashed when these delegates arrived at the Palmer House and declared that they were all for Roosevelt.

At the Cummins headquarters Senator Kenyon and his friends are confining their efforts to getting promises of support for Cummins as second choice, and say they are making some headway. They admit that only a prolonged deadlock can clear the skies for the Iowa statesman.

MIXED SITUATION SEEN IN CHICAGO

Preferences of Republican Delegates Are Changing.

Chicago, June 17.—When the work of the Republican national committee ended with all the contests decided the actual strength of the respective candidates for the presidential nomination in the convention, the first session of which is to be held on Tuesday at noon, was as follows:

Taft, 568; Roosevelt, 464; LaFollette, 36; Cummins, 10; total, 1,078.

After authorized changes the best poll of the strength of the respective candidates, irrespective of enthusiastic and unsupported claims, is as follows:

Necessary to choice, 540.

President Taft, it will be noted, has lost 17 votes. Timothy L. Woodruff of Brooklyn, authorized an official statement that he had changed from Taft to Roosevelt. Five delegates from Mississippi announced that they had changed from Taft to Roosevelt and five delegates from Georgia announced that they changed from Taft to Roosevelt.

The two votes in the Illinois delegation which were for President Taft changed to Lincoln, four delegates from New York, hitherto credited to President Taft, announced they would vote for Associate Justice Hughes. They are Frank M. Hugo of Watertown, of the Thirty-Second district of New York; Frederick C. Stevens of Attica, Thirty-Ninth district; William H. Daniels of Buffalo, Fourth district, and Frank C. Anderson of Jamestown, in the Forty-Third congressional district.

President Taft has, therefore, nine votes more than necessary to nominate him, while Ex-President Roosevelt is sixty-three votes short of nomination.

Director William B. McKinley of the Taft bureau declared that President Taft will have 590 votes in the convention and will be nominated on the first ballot.

"President Taft," continued Mr. McKinley, "will have a plurality of 148 votes over Mr. Roosevelt and a clear majority over all candidates. Mr. Taft cannot now be defeated for the nomination."

The old national committee's job is ended. It turns over a "temporary roll" of delegates to the Republican national convention after a hard week of battling, charges of foul play and recrimination.

In figures, the committee has delivered to President Taft 233 of the contested delegates. The claims of thirteen Roosevelt delegates have been allowed, where there were actual contests between sets of Roosevelt and Taft men. Of those thirteen one was a compromise in Kentucky, Governor Hadley forced eight in Missouri and the machine slipped on four in Texas.

The finish came Saturday night. The closing feature to a spectacular day was the seating of two Roosevelt men in North Carolina whose credentials were questioned by two other Roosevelt men.

Posse Lynches a Farm Hand.

Cordele, Ga., June 17.—A negro farm hand who shot and seriously wounded E. C. Ritchie, a farmer, was captured by a posse of Ritchie's neighbors, hung to a tree and shot to death.

Grist for Stone Crusher.

CONTEST FROM ILLINOIS

Secretary of Democratic National Committee Informed of One.

Baltimore, June 17. — Secretary Urey Woodson of the Democratic national committee, has received notice from Representative H. T. Rainey of Illinois that the seating of two delegates and alternates from the twentieth congressional district of Illinois would be contested. Mr. Rainey did not give the reasons for the proposed contest.

The names of the contestants are M. F. Dunlap and W. H. Crow, delegates; T. W. McNeeley and H. T. Rainey, alternates.

URGE PLANKS FOR PLATFORM

Special Party Policy Advocates Are Active.

FEDERAL WORKERS HAVE PLANK

Seek Comprehensive and Adequate Legislation for the Service—Allen Ripley Foote Would Aid the Farmers.

Chicago, June 17. — Advocates of special planks which they hope to have incorporated in the Republican national platform are beginning to assemble in Chicago.

Among the arrivals were Allen Ripley Foote of Columbus, O., president of the national tax commission and the Ohio state board of commerce, and Richard C. Adams, grand sachem of the Brotherhood of American Indians.

Mr. Foote has opened headquarters at Hotel LaSalle, from where he will conduct a systematic campaign to create favor for his plan to promote agriculture and commerce by providing for the organization and regulation of co-operative associations and the creation of a bureau of commerce.

The plank to be submitted by the Ohioan has the indorsement, he says, of Myron T. Herrick of Ohio and Senator Clapp, chairman of the senate committee on interstate commerce.

A bill drafted by Mr. Foote at Senator Clapp's request will be distributed as an argument among the delegates.

Mr. Adams, who boasts Indian blood and who is a resident of Washington, D. C., comes to advocate a plank for fair play in dealings with the Indian tribes. He seeks particularly more lenient reservation regulations and additional land allotments for the redmen.

A civil service plank calling for comprehensive and adequate legislation for federal service, up to date efficiency records, hearing for employes under charges, and honorable retirement for old age and long service was put up to many leaders in all the Republican factions by the Illinois and Chicago Civil Service Reform association.

Llewellyn Jordan, representing 300,000 federal workers, is here from Washington and has opened headquarters.

A special committee consisting of William G. Hale, chairman; Merrit Starr, and Fletcher Dobyns is helping the campaign. Another committee composed of Sigmund Zeisler, John P. McGoorty and Russell Whitman will urge the planks in Baltimore.

OLD TAVERN SITE MARKED

D. A. R. Tablet Unveiled by Descendants of Mansion Houes Builder.

Freeport, Ill., June 17.—Under the auspices of the local chapter, D. A. R., a bronze tablet marking the site of the Mansion House, the first hotel erected in Stephenson county, was unveiled by John Goddard and Alpheus Goddard Smith, great grandsons of the tavern's founder, Benjamin Goddard.

The Mansion House was built in 1837 and was a stopping place for people traveling by stage between Galena and Chicago. It had nine rooms, was built of walnut lumber and remained standing till a few years ago. General Smith D. Atkins made the address. It is the intention of the D. A. R. similarly to mark all old tavern sites along the highway between Chicago and Galena known as the state road.

SHE MAY NOT WEAR JEWELRY

Princess Mary Is Fond of It but Must Eschew It Until She Is Seventeen.

Though Princess Mary is very fond of jewelry she is not allowed to wear any ornament except a string of perfectly matched pearls on state occasions and a little gold chain and locket which contains a piece of white heather in the home circle. The pearls were her mother's gift to her at the time of the coronation, and the locket was presented to her by the Prince of Wales, who bought it when he was at Cowes for the regatta.

Queen Mary has let it be understood that no one is to give Princess Mary jewelry of any sort till she is 17, and before the royal party left for the Durbar the queen repeated her wishes on the score.

The princess has confessed to some of the ladies of the court that she does not mind not having rings and pins and chains, but that she yearns for long gold earrings set with rubies and diamonds and that when she is 17 she hopes a set will be given her and if not she will buy them herself.

KEEPS OUT OF WATER NOW

Gander With Fishing Line Tied to His Leg Has Lively Time With Pickerel.

A Wisconsin gander was so upset by experiments made upon and through him by a mischievous boy that for a long time he would not go into the water.

The gander's determination to abstain from water as a means of bathing grew out of the following circumstances:

The boy thought he would tie a fishing-line to the gander's leg and with a hook properly baited turn the bird out into the water. The bait was a frog

The gander went into the mill pond, where he swam around for half an hour, turning "flip-flaps" and diving for food. Suddenly he felt a pull at his leg and looked as surprised as the "lone fisherman" when he caught a whale.

The gander concluded that there was something the matter, and he looked to ascertain the cause. The pickerel on the hook gave several jerks, whereupon the gander decided that he wanted to go home.

He at once started for the shore, but the pickerel on the hook wanted to go the other way. The gander seemed frightened at first. Then he evinced signs of anger and tried to fly to shore, but the pickerel pulled him back.

After half an hour of the hardest work he had ever done, the gander came ashore dragging a six-pound pickerel up the bank.

The boy took off the pickerel and baited the hook with another frog. He tried to induce the gander to go in for another swim, but no amount of persuasion could get the bird to do so. He simply could not be driven in. For many weeks the gander would not go into the water. He would proceed with the rest of his flock to the water's edge, but there he would stop. He would seem to be arguing with them with reference to the danger they were courting.

BIG RUBY UNDER HIS SKIN

Burmese-Eurasian Was Used as Hiding Place for Jewel by His Father.

Surgeon Watson tells Tip about some strange smuggling, a story of Burmah rubies and diamonds that passed through this port undetected, if not unsuspected. The surgeon was called to a big hotel to see a gentleman with a painful arm. The patient was a yellow, slender, tawny blond, the left arm a little swollen and very painful. A hard lump was found under the skin just above the elbow, and this was pressed on the "funny" nerve that runs behind the elbow. The lump felt so queer and unusual that the surgeon took an X-ray shot at it and found it to be a big ruby, about five carats.

This is the novel story of a man with the ruby in his arm: He was a Burmese-Eurasian (his father half white). In his childhood his father had been the chief of a band of dacoits, cut-throat highwaymen, and had skillfully and painlessly inserted a number of stones into the layer of fat under the skin of his fat boy, to make him a walking cache of secret treasure. As a youth he went to a mission school, later was graduated from a "tech" school, and was now a highly successful business man. The man with the arm set with rubies would allow no more examinations or X-ray pictures. There was not a trace of scar near the ruby, so skillfully had the insert settling been made. When asked what he intended to do about his hidden treasures, he said that was for his father to say—if alive.—New York Press.

Man and His Ways.

One day a well-known politician was enjoying a chat with a friend at a hotel, when a strange young man came up and said:

"Can I see you for a moment, Mr. Dash?"

"Certainly," said Mr. Dash, rising.

The young man led him across the room and seemed to have something important to say to him. Arrived in a corner, the stranger whispered in the politician's ear:

"I am of the staff of an evening paper, and I should like you to tell me what you think of the situation in the east."

Mr. Dash looked a little puzzled at first, then he said:

"Follow me."

Leading the way, he walked through the reading-room, through a passage into the dining-room, and drawing his visitor into the corner behind the hat rack, he whispered:

"I really don't know anything about it."

Massachusetts Game Farm.

A game farm of between 5,000 and 6,000 acres in Carver and Plymouth has been acquired by the American Game Protective and Propagation association on a ten years lease, with option or purchase, and elaborate experiments are proposed for conserving the wild life of the New England forests and waters.

It is stipulated that after the expiration of the lease the farm shall continue for twenty years to be a sanctuary for game, whether or not the tract is bought. They do these things rather better in the old country, and it is proposed to import a Scotch gamekeeper to start a line of expert natives in the calling.—Springfield Republican.

Personal Affront.

"Where is that tall, thin girl who joined the union last week?" inquired the walking delegates.

The secretary arose to reply:

"She handed in her resignation this morning."

"What was her reason?"

"She took offense when she was called on to act as a picket."—Judge.

Lincoln's Superb Oratory.

In an address by Joseph H. Choate on the occasion of his eightieth birthday, Mr. Choate spoke thus of Mr. Lincoln's celebrated speech in Cooper Union, in 1860: "With an awkward form and most ungainly address, he stood there with a little trepidation, not very prepossessing; but when he came to speak it was as a flashlight. Not only his whole personality and his face lighted up, but he seemed to lighten up the audience, and for one hour or an hour and a quarter he discussed the great questions of the day and held the audience in the hollow of his hand."

Obituary

MRS. PAUL MULL

Margaret Sharp was born in Fattensburg, Franklin County, Pa., May 4, 1834, and at an early age joined the Reform church at that place. Mr. Mull resided in the same place, they being schoolmates. They were married Dec. 28, 1852.

They came to Michigan Aug. 2 1869, where they have resided until the present time.

Mr. and Mrs. Mull united with the Methodist church under the ministration of the Rev. Varner.

Mrs. Mull was of German descent, her parents coming from Wittemburg She was the mother of eight children all surving her but one Mrs. Joseph Rockwood who passed away four years ago.

All of the children were present at the funeral which was held at the home Wednesday June 12, Rev. G. N. Kennedy officiating Mesdames Hodges and Meade gave two selections "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Shall We Meet Beyond the River."

The burial was at Brookside cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to most heartily thank our friends who so kindly assisted us during the illness and at the death of our loved one, to the L. O. T. M. M. and all who sent the beautiful flowers to the ladies for the sweet music and to the Rev. Kenndy for his comforting words.

Paul Mull
and family.

NOTED POET WELL GUARDED

Paludan-Muller Was Kept From All Social Intercourse by His Eccentric Wife.

The famous poet of Denmark, Paludan-Muller, was closely guarded in his later years by an eccentric wife, greatly his senior. Of her preposterous oddity, writes Mr. Edmund Gosse in "Two Visits to Denmark," stories were everywhere current in Copenhagen. She kept him as much as she possibly could from all intercourse with the outer world. During a visit to Copenhagen the host of Mr. Gosse decided to invite the poet to dine, and his daughter and guest were sent on a mission to invite him.

If we could secure him for a night convenient to him, writes Mr. Gosse, all that was brightest and best in Copenhagen was to be constrained to come, too. But fortune was against us; if we had found him alone it is possible that success might have crowned our efforts. When we arrived, with our dinner invitation on our lips, we were damped by being told that the poet had gone out for a walk, but that Mrs. Paludan-Muller would receive us. The fierce little lady, in fact, closed our retreat by peeping round the edge of the door and commanding us to enter. Miss Aline Fog, overwhelmed by the event, lost her presence of mind, and blurted out the invitation, which it would have been wiser to suppress.

The answer came at once: "Impossible, my dear lady, impossible! I could not sanction it! Mr. Paludan-Muller is weak; he is good-natured; he is only too ready to go into society. It is my privilege to prevent it. I say to him, 'You are too delicate, my dear, to mix with others. You must positively consider your health.'"

Miss Fog feebly asked whether the poet might not himself be appealed to, "Such old friends! so small a party! so early an hour!" The lady was quite obdurate, however. "I could not trust him with your message. He is so weak, so good-natured. His place is at home with me. I do not wish to dine abroad, why should he?"

PUTS OUT PETROLEUM FIRES

Caustic Soda Solution Mixed With Alum Is Found to Be Most Efficacious.

There are no fires more disastrous than those in which petroleum mineral essences, benzoin, etc., play a part, on account of the difficulty of getting them under control. No really efficacious method has ever been put into use to extinguish fires of hydro-carbonic origin. Water is utterly useless. Danger may be at times reduced to a minimum by preventing contact of air with the flame, choking it between blankets, mats, damp cloth, earth, or sand, but this is by no means always sufficient. For this reason scientists are interested in some experiments made recently in German laboratories bearing on the possibility of controlling fires of varying chemical origin. It is said that if a stated quantity of caustic soda solution be mixed with an equal quantity of alum it forms a dough—or mortar—fifteen times as great as the original single quantities. This dough is very light and foamy. If this substance be flung over the petroleum, etc., and the entrance of air impeded, the fire will at once be put out.

An experiment was lately tried in Germany to establish these facts beyond question. An improvised fire extending over four cubic millimeters was extinguished in less than two minutes by an eighty-per cent. solution of the above mentioned substance.

Footpaths on Road to Peace.

To be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions, but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends and every day of Christ; and to spend as much time as you can with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors—these are little guideposts on the footpath of peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

A late Morenci paper announces a Home Comers Day for August 23 and already the citizens are busy with their plans to make this day a great success. Invitations are being sent out to all former residents and such days are bright spots in the lives of the people who meet together and talk over the good old days when they were young and lived together in the old home town.

Adrian also is improving their alleys in the rear of their stores on North Main Street. B. F. Graves has individually put in a cement pavement in the rear of his block of stores this is done as an experiment of the cement paving used so extensively in other cities and towns Tecumseh has been agitating the movement for some time and hopes soon to have the alleys in the rear of the stores in shape.

The village of Deerfield by a special election held last Tuesday granted to C. P. Schreder & Co. A franchise and contract for supplying Street lights to the village for fifteen years. Everyone in the village has been anxiously looking forward to this event and the vote stood 48 for to 2 against. The ladies also helped by a vote of 12.

The M. E. ladies of Petersburg having an eye to beauty especially for their village, have been doing some landscape gardening on the lawn adjoining the Methodist Church. This seems a very commendable move, as nothing appeals to the eyes of most people more quickly than a garden of flowers.

The Petersburg Sun, however suggests, that the commandment "Thou shalt not steal" be remembered by the ungodly ones who have been appropriating some of the plants and carrying them away. Not a pleasing reflections on Petersburg "Ne'er do wells."

Anent the question of Woman's Suffrage that is new agitating the country An exchange has the following. "Don't you want to vote?" asked a woman suffragist of a farmer's wife who cooked, cleaned, washed, ironed and sewed for her husband and a family of children; who raised turkeys, chickens and calves. As the farmer's wife stopped to shove her hair back from her perspiring forehead, and push her sleeves a little higher before plunging her arms into the washtub, she replied to the suffragette, saying, "Good Lord, NO: if there is one thing the men can do alone let them do it."

PERFUMER'S DAY WILL COME

Then He Will Have Odors That Will Move Mankind Most Profoundly.

A perfumer was talking shop.

"When will my trade," he said, "develop as it should? When will perfume sway men's minds as drink and fame do now?

"I have a dog. Often in the country my dog will spy a dead, rotting, sun-dried bird or fish. The odor of that carcass fills my dog with ecstasy. He rolls upon it in a delirium. It is difficult, even with a club, to make him stop. Well, there, just there, is the perfume that sways dogs, and a dog perfumer, patenting it, would become a billionaire.

"The serpent arum is a plant of strong odor. The arum has, indeed, a stench. Well, this stench attracts to it from miles around all those insects that fed on carrion. If you look into the cup of the serpent arum you are sure to see a very inferno of insect drunkards—hundreds of them, intoxicated by the arum's odor, whirling and leaping and spinning in a mad dance. For the serpent arum's odor is the odor par excellence of insects, as the rotten, sun-baked fish odor is the odor par excellence of dogs.

"Have I any perfume that sways mankind like that? No, none. Imagine my new-mown hay drawing a lady from her milliner's or her pet pianist's! Imagine my girofle drawing a man from his beer or his jackpot!

"Yet the day will come, I am convinced, when we shall have perfumes that will move mankind as profoundly as the spoiled fish perfume moves a dog and as the serpent arum perfume moves the Dermestes and Saprinidae. In that day my address will be Riverside drive, Newport, Jekyl Island, Monte Carlo and Los Angeles."

Some men think that money can do anything. A certain rich man sent for the doctor, who looked him over and then pronounced judgment.

"You have been living too high."

"Maybe so."

"You have violated nature's laws."

"I guess I have."

"You must pay the penalty."

"Pay the penalty? Oh, come now, Doc. Can't you get me off on a technicality or something?"

Next came Charles Abbott, drunk or intoxicated on the public street, he plead guilty and was fined $10 and costs $4.80, and was committed to jail for 20 days, unless the fine was paid. Fred Paul was next to appear upon the scene, he was charged with larency of household goods from May Bayles, and was placed under bonds of $309, to appear for examination Wednesday, June 19.

GASES IN STOMACH POISON THE BLOOD

Gas forms in your stomach because the food you eat ferments and turns sour.

Allow this fermentation to go on and these gases become poisonous and the poison gets into the blood.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets stop the fermentation almost instantly, turn the poisonous gases into liquid, and eliminnates the poison mostly through the kidneys.

If you have any stomach trouble such as gas, sourness, heaviness, flatulency or shortness of breath, MI-O-NA will give gratifying relief in five minutes.

They are sold on money back plan for acute or chronic indigestion, nervousness, dizziness, headaches, sleeplessness, ect. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son and daugists everywhere for 50 cents a box.

DOING WHAT?
Buying Goods that have Quality

We have just purchased the famous Hotchkiss Central California fruit for delivery in November. This fruit is selected from the very best cultivated orchards in California, being strictly hand-picked and choicest variety. The apricots and peaches are peeled before going into cans.

2½ lb. cans of apricots, lemon cling or free-stone peaches put up in 45 degree syrup, to retail at 25c.

These are put up in sanitary cans, covered with glass label, and we expect to have them in our store about Nov. 1st, with a can of each open, that you may examine their contents.

Compare these fruits with any other fruit packed in cans and the quality will speak for itself.

We do not ask you to book your order or pay for someone to come and make you a visit, but we do want you to come to our store when these goods arrive, compare the goods and consider the price.

We know that these goods are the finest that can be grown and if you can beat them, we will pay the bill.

They Put an End to it

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

TAFT LOSES 15 VOTES

Some New Yorkers Go to Roosevelt, Others to Hughes.

Former Governor Timothy L. Woodruff Alienated by "Injustice" of National Committee.

Chicago, June 17.—The details of a meeting of the New York state delegation which was held behind closed doors have become known. The meeting of the delegation not only developed the names of thirteen New York state delegates who have come out openly for a candidate for president other than President Taft, but it was responsible for Timothy L. Woodruff delivering himself over to Colonel Roosevelt.

This became known when E. A. Van Valkenburg, editor of the Philadelphia North American, issued the following statement from the Roosevelt headquarters:

"Colonel Roosevelt has authorized me to state to the newspapers that Governor Timothy L. Woodruff, head of the Kings county delegation of New York, has just assured the colonel that he will vote for Roosevelt. Mr. Woodruff states that the gross and indefensible injustice shown in the unseating of the legally elected delegates from Texas and Washington has forced him to adopt this measure."

The situation in the New York delegation has created much interest in the Roosevelt camp and some anxiety on the part of the Taft managers.

Nine of the New York state delegates are expected to vote for Colonel Roosevelt, four for Charles E. Hughes, and two others, counted for Hughes, and thought to favor Roosevelt.

THAW HEARING BEGINS

White Plains, N. Y., June 17.—Before Justice Keogh in the supreme court at White Plains, Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, is making his third attempt to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus

HARRY K. THAW AS HE LOOKED SIX YEARS AGO AND AS HE LOOKS TODAY.

HARRY K. THAW.

The sole question to be tried out before Justice Keogh without a jury, will be whether he is now sane. Thaw contends that he is perfectly rational and that he is being kept in the asylum through a conspiracy of his enemies.

Although considerable testimony will be read it is believed that the hearings will occupy at least two weeks. Then Justice Keogh will start on his vacation, and it is thought he will not render a decision until his return from a trip to Europe.

"DOLLAR OR TAKE 'ER OUT"

Patrons of Village Phone Company Resist 25-Cent Increase.

Shelbyville, Ind., June 17.—Patrons of the Central Union Telephone company in Boggstown and vicinity, in resistance to an order of the company raising the toll rate to $1.25 a month, have adopted the slogan "Dollar a month, or take 'er out," and sixty subscribers have signed an agreement to that effect.

They also have named a committee to confer with the one planning for the organization of an independent company in this city.

Chicago, June 17.—Mrs. "Charles Duchesne" Blaney of Saratoga, Santa Clara county, Cal., is one of the four woman delegates elected to the Republican national convention. Mrs. Blaney, whose legal name is Mrs. Isabella W. Blaney, was elected on the Roosevelt ticket.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

HOUSE PARTY

Miss Floy Underwood entertained a few of her girl friends Saturday afternoon, at a house party in honor of Miss Mildred Exelby. The first part of the afternoon was spent socially and with sewing, each guest furnishing her own needle work. And a little later Miss Exelby was handed a small ball of cord and asked to wind it. The latter requiring some time as it led her a merry chase in different nooks and corners in nearly every room in the house furnishing plenty of fun for those who were following close on the trail. But at last it ended in one of the rooms up stairs in a clothes basket which contained many useful gifts from her friends. At six o'clock an elaborate three course luncheon was served in the dining room after which the guests returned to their homes. Those present were Misses Winnifred Morrell, Margaret Hindes, Sylvia Pilbeam and Mildred Exelby,

Felicia's Furs

By Virginia Blair

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

Sinclair loved her. He knew it, and he knew, too, that he wanted her for his wife.

She was so different from the women of his own family. His mother was a gracious, gentlewoman, dispensing her bounty, her time, unselfishly to others. From her he had drawn his ideal of the perfect woman.

He was sure that Felicia's soul was beautiful, yet she hid her depths beneath a light manner, and sometimes he wondered if there were depths. Did Felicia ever think about anything but her own good time, her own interests, her own desires?

But he put all doubts from him when he met her at the station. She had been away for a week-end at her uncle's—a rich old bachelor, who contributed to her love of ease.

"Uncle Bob is a dear," Felicia told her lover as they walked toward the house. "What do you think he gave me this time, Sinclair?"

Sinclair smiled down at her. "More than I can ever give you, I'm afraid. If you hadn't really said 'yes,' Felicia, I should expect you to trim your sails and fly straight for some other port. You ought to have anchored to a millionaire."

"Some of the brightness went out of her face. "What makes you say that?" she asked quickly.

"Oh—your love of pretty things—of good times."

She flashed a glance into his face. Then she said, lightly, "Poor Sinclair. Is he afraid he's going to have a butterfly wife?"

He smiled back. "I'm afraid you will spread your wings and fly away."

She shook her head. "You know I won't," she said, confidently. Then she opened the silver bag which hung on her wrist. "Look at this," she said. "Isn't Uncle Bob generous? I shall buy furs! Sinclair, there are the loveliest ones—with long tails and a big muff—and with my new blue suit—and my hat with the plume—you'll be proud of me."

"You Look Lovely in Your Red Fox Furs, Felicia."

"I'm proud of you now. It doesn't take fine feathers to make you a beautiful bird, Felicia."

But in his heart he was saying, "Why should she spend all that for furs?" He really thought she looked well enough in the old set of mink. And he wondered again what she would do, as his wife. But he forgot his forebodings for a time as she chatted of her trip.

A week later, as they walked home from church together, he said, "You look lovely in your red fox furs, Felicia."

"Aren't they dandy?" she demanded.

As she walked by his side in all her beauty, there were glances cast at her of which she was perfectly conscious. "Isn't it nice," she said, gleefully, "to have people think I look well in my red fox?"

"Yes, it's nice," said Sinclair absent-mindedly. He was thinking of the future. Would she be happy when there were no lovely things for others to admire?

He spoke to his mother about it that night. "I'm afraid I can't give her the things she will want, mumsie."

"Don't worry," said that wise lady, "Felicia will be glad to be shabby for your sake."

"Do you think so?" he asked.

"I know it," was her decided answer. "She has a side you haven't discovered yet, Sinclair. She won't show it to you, but now and then she lets me get a peep at it."

The next Sunday, when Felicia walked home from church with her lover, she wore her old furs.

"Where are the new ones?" Sinclair demanded.

"Oh," Felicia said, carelessly, "I didn't think you'd notice. Don't you think I look nice in my mink?"

"Lovely," he hastened to say. "But why not the red foxes?"

"I—" she began, then hesitated, and stammered, "I'm—I'm tired of them."

He gazed at her in amazement. "Tired?"

"Yes. Don't let's talk about it any more."

After that she wore her old mink, cheerfully.

Sinclair pondered over the mystery of the red fox furs. Was Felicia than such a spendthrift that she could afford to buy furs and not wear them?

He made himself unnecessarily miserable over them. It seemed to him that Felicia was more frivolous than ever. He couldn't get in touch with her.

He came home depressed and tired after a five o'clock call on her. His mother was out, and he sat down in front of the fire.

When his mother came she found him in the darkness.

"Dear boy," she said, "why so ——"

"I went to call on Felicia—and—"

"Oh, Felicia!" she broke in. "I have something so lovely to tell you about her. I heard the story this afternoon. Such a lovely story. Wait till I turn up the lights and I'll tell you."

"Sit here in the dark," he begged.

He drew a low chair up for her and threw himself on the rug with his head in her lap. "Now tell me all the lovely things you can about Felicia."

"Well, you know the dear child's uncle gave her a check and she bought some red fox furs."

Sinclair sat up. "Yes," he said quickly, "go on."

"They were very expensive, and she felt a bit extravagant over them, she told me. Well, suddenly she stopped wearing them—"

"I know."

"And we all wondered what had become of Felicia's furs. But she wouldn't tell us."

"Yes."

"The lady who told me bound me to secrecy. She said she wanted me to know because my son was to marry Felicia, and she thought he ought to hear."

In the darkness Sinclair was tense. "Well?" he demanded.

"This woman knows a young girl who used to go to school with Felicia. Her name is Mary. She is very poor, and this winter she has had the shabbiest clothes. And one day she met Felicia in a downtown shop and Felicia insisted that they should have hot chocolate together and over the cups they talked. The girl had such an awful cold, and now and then she shivered. Felicia spoke of it several times, and when at last they came out of the store, she said, "Oh, you're not warm enough, take my muff—please,' and she thrust it into her hands. She insisted on putting little Mary on the car, and just as she was bidding her goodby, Felicia slipped off her beautiful fur collar and laid it around Mary's neck. Then she ran away laughing, and little Mary had a note from her the next morning, saying that she was to keep the furs."

"But why," Sinclair was on his feet, "why shouldn't she tell me?"

"Ask her," said his mother promptly, "just as soon as dinner is over you must go to her."

"The dear," said Sinclair.

He said to his sweetheart that night, "Could anyone but you have done such a lovely thing, Felicia?"

"Oh," she hid her face in her hands, "I was afraid to tell you."

"Afraid?"

"I thought you'd think me—silly."

He looked down at her gravely. "Why should you think that?"

"Because I know you don't like to have me extravagant—but—I—I couldn't let little Mary go cold, Sinclair."

The tears were streaming down her cheeks, and suddenly she was sobbing in his arms.

"Why, Felicia, darling," he said, "it was a beautiful thing to do—and I love you for it."

Nervy Miss Blank.

The two girls just in front were discussing, quite audibly, Miss Blank. Miss Blank, they said, found a valuable diamond ring at a reception last winter, and never so much as put an advertisement in the papers about it.

"She wears it all the time," said one girl. "I shouldn't think she'd have the nerve, would you?"

"Mercy no!" answered the other. "But, then, she'd do anything. I found a pearl ring once, but, of course, I never wore it."

"Oh, did you really find one?" exclaimed the first. "What was it like? What did you do with it?"

The other girl merely put her hand to her throat, where a pearl set as a pin held her dainty collar. "That's it," she said.

And then they went on talking of how shockingly nervy Miss Blank is.

Supreme Court Continues See Case.

Springfield, Ill., June 17.—The Illinois supreme court continued until November the case against Evelyn Arthur See, leader of the "sun" cult of Chicago, convicted in the criminal court of Cook county on a charge of abduction. The motion filed by the attorney for the defendant was allowed and arguments will be heard in November.

Alleged to Have Taken Corn Too.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 17.—Elmer J. Warren of this city and E. D. Depew of Emmett township have become involved in a civil suit over corn fodder. At an auction last fall Depew bought 750 corn shocks and Warren claims he did not stop at the shocks, but took the corn too. He is now suing for $37 damages.

Wonderful Sarah Bernhardt.

Sarah Bernhardt often has said it is her enthusiasm and continued interest in life and work to which she ascribes her youthful appearance. Now she has a new enthusiasm—the moving pictures. For years she refused to pose before the moving picture camera. Then she gave her consent and acted "Camille" before a long string of film recently in Paris. She could hardly restrain her eagerness to see the finished pictures, and when they were shown to her she insisted the whole play be repeated several times. Edmond Rostand accompanied her to the exhibition, and when she had delightedly watched the films run off several times she turned to him with all the enthusiasm of a chorus girl, saying, "Now, what next is there for me

Morgan Received It and Turned It Over to Bank.

At New York, Friday, testifying before the Pujo congressional committee investigating the money trust, George B. Cortelyou who was secretary of the treasury at the time of the 1907 panic, told how the government loaned J. Pierpont Morgan the $25,000,000 which Morgan in turn loaned to the banks, and thus broke the backbone of the panic on October 24 1907, sending call money down from 125 to 6 per cent.

It was the first time that the details of the government coming to the aid of the stock exchange was ever told by an authority as high as the ex-treasurer, and the brokers and spectators who packed the room listened with breathless interest at the real inside story of those days of panic, almost as sinister as black Friday, was unfolded.

TORNADO KILLS 26 PEOPLE IN MISSOURI

Bates, Johnson and Henry Counties Are Swept.

Its Force Is Not Expended Until It Reaches Five Miles Northwest of Drexel, Mo.—Property Destruction Great.

At least twenty six persons were killed and fifty injured by a tornado which tore its way through Bates, Johnson and Henry counties, Missouri, mowing down trees and demolishing houses in its trail.

The storm hit the earth near La Cygne, Kan., and increased in fury as it swept northeast into Bates county, Missouri, killing whole families, until its force was expended five miles northeast of Drexel, Mo. Women and children for the most part were its victims.

At Merwin the tornado blew from the track a Kansas City Southern work train with fifty Greek workmen aboard, half of whom were so badly injured that they were brought to a hospital here in a special train.

Some of the known dead are: Mrs. Alexander, and three children near Merwin; Mrs. Bryce, near Merwin; Henry Cameron and three children, near Merwin; Dan Carlos and wife, Leeton; Mrs. Ellsworth Clark, Montgomery; Mrs. Albert Corey of Kansas City; Mrs. Frank Corey, Drexel; Gibson Groves, near Merwin; Fred Groves, near Merwin; Hern Gray, Kansas City; Mrs. Howell, near Merwin; Johnson, near Merwin; Mrs. Lee Parker, Creighton, Mo.; Mrs. George Reed; Max Spitskofsky.

West of Merwin the brick house of Marion Stitt was destroyed. At the Corey home the storm was merciless. The legs of the two women killed there were broken.

Albert Corey, head bookeeper for the Fidelity Trust company in Kansas City, was in Drexel and escaped death. His three children also escaped. He had started to go to the Corey farm in the afternoon to visit his father, but remained in Drexel awhile. His wife and children went ahead of him to the farm. They had just reached the house when the storm broke. Corey's wife and mother were killed. Mrs. Albert Corey was Miss Stoner of Perry, Ill., where all formerly lived.

A big brick residence near Drexel, in which lived two families of seven persons, was scattered over two acres, but no one was injured.

Twelve houses were destroyed at Prairie View church, east of Drexel. The prongs of a pitchfork, stuck in an oak tree were twisted by the storm.

The path of the storm when it hit within a half mile of Merwin was half a mile wide and five miles long. The Alexander home was swept away. The Cameron baby's body was blown three miles. The bodies of Gibson and Fred Groves were found half a mile from their home.

The home of Charles Garnes, James Tine, John Bennett, Silas Buth, Mrs. Dede, Lester Gode and John Weir were swept away.

This city is terrorized by the action of the rioters. Residents fear for the safety of their homes.

FAMILIES PURSUED BY UNUSUAL BAD LUCK

Death of Bryan Women Latest of Accidents

Long List of Fatalities Which Have Occurred of Late Years in the McLaughlin and Cantrell Families.

Owosso, Mich., June 17.—The death of Mrs. Margaret McLaughlin of Byron, a widow, eighty-eight years old, resulting from a fall she had recently, when her hip was broken and she lay for hours on the floor of her home before being found by neighbors, emphasizes the ill luck that has pursued the McLaughlin and Cantrell families for years.

Mrs. McLaughlin's brother, Thomas Cantrill, died of injuries received when he was run over by a locomotive in Durand. His daughter, Mrs. Abner Sears, died of blood poisoning. His wife died of creeping paralysis. William Cantrell was shot and killed in Chicago when he assayed the role of peacemaker between two quarreling friends. Thomas Cantrell was fatally injured by a fall from a straw stack. Mrs. McLaughlin's grandson, son of Thomas McLaughlin, was fatally shot by accident by a young woman. Mrs. Cantrell Dodge and her sister, Mrs. Joseph Shaffer, are both cripples.

Indiana Youth Discovered at Battle Creek with Diphtheria.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 14.—Lying under a tree moaning piteously, Leo Meade, about twenty years old was found by the police and taken to Emergency hospital where an examination showed that he was suffering from a severe case of diphtheria. Meade was questioned by officers and it was learned that he was the son of wealthy parents who live in Kendallville, Ind.

Meade had run away from home and beat his way to this city. Where he contracted the disease is not known but he stated that he had slept in a car with several tramps two nights ago.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 17.—Suit for $10,000 damages was begun against the Detroit, Jackson and Chicago railway by Miss Julia Clark of Sylvan township, for injuries sustained in the wreck at Lima Center, April 15 last, when two trolley cars collided head-on. This is the first suit begun as a result of that accident, in which two were killed and many injured.

The Republican national convention to nominate a candidate for president and vice president of the United States met in Chicago Tuesday after one of the bitterest preliminary fights on record.

Colonel Roosevelt himself arrived to take personal lead in his fight for the presidential nomination.

When the long and trying work of the Republican national committee ended with all the contests decided the actual strength of the respective candidates for the presidential nomination in the convention, the first session of which is to be held on Tuesday at noon, was as follows:

After authorized changes the best poll of the strength of the respective candidates, irrespective of enthusiastic and unsupported claims, is as follows:

Necessary to choice, 540.

President Taft, it will be noted, has lost 19 votes. Timothy L. Woodruff of Brooklyn, authorized an official statement that he had changed from Taft to Roosevelt. Five delegates from Mississippi announced that they had changed from Taft to Roosevelt and seven delegates from Georgia announced that they changed from Taft to Roosevelt.

The two votes in the Illinois delegation which were for President Taft changed to Lincoln, four delegates from New York, hitherto credited to President Taft, announced they would vote for Associate Justice Hughes. They are Frank M. Hugo of Watertown, of the Thirty-Second district of New York; Frederick C. Stevens of Attica, Thrty-Ninth district; William H. Daniels of Buffalo, Fourth district and Frank C. Anderson of Jamestown, in the Forty-Third congressional district.

President Taft has, therefore, seven votes more than necessary to nominate him, while Ex-President Roosevelt is sixty-one votes short of nomination.

Director William B. McKinley of the Taft bureau declared that President Taft will have 590 votes in the convention and will be nominated on the first ballot.

"President Taft," continued Mr. McKinley, "will have a plurality of 148 votes over Mr. Roosevelt and a clear majority over all candidates. Mr. Taft cannot now be defeated for the nomination."

The old national committee's job is ended. It turns over a "temporary roll" of delegates to the Republican national convention after a hard week of battling, charges of foul play and recrimination.

In figures, the committee has delivered to President Taft 233 of the contested delegates. The claims of thirteen Roosevelt delegates have been allowed, where there were actual contests between sets of Roosevelt and Taft men. Of those thirteen one was a compromise in Kentucky, Governor Hadley forced eight in Missouri and the machine slipped on four in Texas.

The finish came Saturday night. The closing feature to a spectacular day was the seating of two Roosevelt men in North Carolina whose credentials were questioned by two other Roosevelt men.

In a public statement Colonel Roosevelt analyzed the delegates to the Republican national convention by pointing out that a large proportion of President Taft's admitted strength lies in territory which casts no Republican electoral vote. Roosevelt asserted that he had carried twenty-one of the thirty-three states casting electoral votes for him in 1904. He charged that the Taft forces had used federal patronage to defeat him in the present contest and that the Republican national committee had committed "theft" in unseating Roosevelt delegates from Texas, Washington and elsewhere.

Mr. Roosevelt attacked individual members of the committe for this action, particularly those from states he carried in recent primaries.

TANSLEY—HOPPER

A very pretty wedding was that of Chas. Tansley of Tecumseh and Miss Hazel Hopper of Adrian at the home of the brides parents, 15 North St. on Tuesday June 18.

Promptly at 2:30 the couple, attended by Miss Grace Riley and Glenn Tansley, took their places and Rev. Edward Simpson of the First Baptist church pronounced the words that made them man and wife.

The bride was lovely in a dress of white silk messaline with satin trimings and her bridesmaid was dainty in a dress of green messaline trimed in white.

After congratulations a two course luncheon was served.

The wedding was very informal the bride and groom receiving the guests of whom there were about fifty, all of whom with the exception of Donald Blesing and Fred Bailey of Tecumseh were relatives of the two families.

The rooms were prettily decorated with ferns, smilax and peonies.

The host of cut glass, silver and linen gave proof of the esteem in which the bride and groom were held.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Tansley and children Elva and Leon of Battle Creek and Walter L. Kinney of Cincinnati,

FOSTER—STAHLER.

A very pretty home wedding took place Wednesday, June 19th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stahler, the contracting parties being Miss Bessie Stahler and Albert Foster. The rooms were tastily decorated in green and white, the bay window being a bower of beauty, where to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Edyth Daisher, the couple were met by the Rev. B. R. Weld, who in a most impressive manner pronounced the words that made them man and wife, the ring service being used

The bride was lovely in a gown of embroidered net over white satin and carried a boquet of bride's roses.

After congratulations, a dainty wedding supper was served. Only the immediate relatives of the family were present, with the exception of the Misses Edyth and Anna Daisher, of Ridgeway. Those from out of town were Frank Stahler, wife and Geraldine, of Palmyra; Harry Stahler and wife, of Adrian, and Andrew Keck, of Clinton.

The bridal party left for parts unknown on the late train, but will make their home in Jackson where they have purchased a home. The presents of cut glass, silver and china were very fine, and a few checks added to their value.

No Chance for Him.

A Kansas City man has obtained a divorce because his wife insisted on keeping 25 cats in the house. It was a physical impossibility for him to kick them all around at once.

RECEPTION AT THE PARISH HOUSE TUESDAY EVENING

The reception given Tuesday evening at the Parish House to meet the new Rector, Rev. Hewitt, was a very pleasant function. Rev. and Mrs. Weld, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hayden and Mrs. J. F. Hicks were in the receiving line with Rev. and Mrs. Hewitt, and greeted the guests as they arrived. There was a fine attendance both from the church and the general public, who were pleased to make the acquaintance of the new comers and make them welcome to our pleasant town The young ladies of the church served light refreshments during the evening.

A pleasant social hour was spent after which the company dispersed to their homes well pleased.

ENTERTAINED AT TEA

Mr. and Mrs Joe Hanna entertained at tea Wednesday night, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ripley, who leave the first of the week for Toledo The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ripley, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lawrence and Mr. and Mrs. Robert McClelland and children. A very pleasant evening was spent by all present.

HISTORIC TALBOT HOME OF TALBOT CO. MD. SOLD TO JAY W. BIGELOW

The Peninsula Farm Agency (Col. Oswald Tilghman and Dr. George F. Nickerson) have sold for William P. Hall to Jay W. Bigelow, a large coal operator, of McDowell County, West Virginia, his Marengo farm of 300 acres, in Miles River Neck, as told in The Star-Democrat last week.

This farm has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most productive landed estates in Talbot County. It has an extensive water front of nearly two miles on the Miles River and Hunt Creek. The mansion commands a fine view of the town of St. Michaels, two miles distant, across the water.

Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow, with their family, two daughters and a son purpose making Talbot County their permanent home, and will doubtless prove an acceptable addition to the already large circle of refined society for which Miles River is noted.

Mr Jay. W. Bigelow is a son of the late A. J. Bigelow, a former pastor in the M. E church here, and a brother of Mrs. George N. Stacy. He has a host of friends in Tecumseh who will be interested in his late purchase, which with the name of Talbot figures in so many stories of the South.

FIRES

An incipient fire broke out on one of the sheds in the rear of the Witherell block Thursday noon, and brought out the fire department in a hurry. A bonfire in the yard of Brown & Co. was responsible for the blaze which was extinguished.

Another fire brought out the fire department Thursday afternoon, when it was discovered that the barn on what is known as the Fred Holmes place, was burning. This is supposed to have caught from a passing train. The barn full of alfalfa hay, the chicken house and wood shed with their contents were all burned, but the house was saved.

ECHOES FROM THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

WOMAN.

The Turmoil at the Convention is Now Laid at Her Door!

The old saying repeated, which is amusing, laying all blame on the woman, for the wild bedlam which prevails at the Chicago convention. The Chicago papers and the leading papers of the country Thursday morning came out in bold head-lines on the front page,

"WOMAN UPSETS CONVENTION."

Do you suppose that one small woman dressed in white with a blue hat, could make a ripple on that howling, seething, swaying mass of hu-MAN-ity? Oh no! Woman is willing to take the blame for her share, but this is asking a little too much.

Brisbon says much to the surprise of the male element, "No woman as yet has swung her pocket-book in the air or stood on her head to demonstrate her newness in her role of a delegate.

It seems so appropriate to have such a convention opened with prayer. The first day a Catholic was called upon, the second day a Rabbi, the third a Protestant. If anything can save this convention from destruction, the leaders will leave nothing untried, and all varieties of prayers will ascend for it.

The Editor of the Chicago American, in saying "We are trying to get some one to fill Lincoln's place" remarked there was no comparison between Teddy and Lincoln. In fact there is nothing in the heavens above or the earth beneath that can compare with Teddy. He could be compared to nothing but the Rocky Mountains placed on top of the Himalayas with the Pacific Ocean trickling down the side." Oh no! Of course there is no comparison of this man of strength, with our sad-eyed, earnest Lincoln.

Tickets at the convention were quoted at $100 each with a demand greater than the supply.

And now a woman has stolen Wm. Jennings Bryan's reporter's ticket to the Republican convention, snatched from his hand, at the door of the Coliseum.

The only thing that all factions were willing to do together was to be led in prayer.

A familiar figure is Bryan in his farmer's alpaca coat, perhaps not the one of 1896. The placidity of his countenance is the same as of old. And he apparently is enjoying his old job as reporter.

George Fitch remarks, "Gray haired connoisseurs in staple and fancy trouble united in declaring that the re-union of fellow workers in the grand but slightly ripened old party exceeded in loudness, violence and extreme candor anything that has yet been pulled off.

In a cart on Roosevelt is depicted as swatting the fly that had alighted on the window, otherwise the Republican party, which reminds one of the boy who said, "Quick, mother, hand me the hammer. There's a fly on the baby's nose." What will happen to the window, the fly or the swatter remains to be told.

Edna Ferber states that no one sent regrets, and dainty refreshments were served for the first time in the history of the country. The thermos bottle was passed around filled with hot coffee in Paradise Aigrette row, the section back of the speakers' platform where sat the wives of the delegates, plummed, aigretted and white gloved, cheering in the wrong place.

Mr. Dooley says: "I've wan iv the best seats in the convintion, I cuddent hear a wurrud. They were foine speeches. Where I set with me head agin the gurder in a ceiling, at the corner in 14th street, I cud see that they were magnificent. Th' aujience was injyin thim, walking around th' hall, talkin and chattin, an th' orators were havin the toime iv their loives. Ivery orator was given 30 minutes to state his case. Afther th'd been talkin 55 mingites, another orator sint a feller to top him on the arum.

Can Women lead men?
Here is the answer.

SHE did not know what it was all about Those that yelled and screamed as she took possession did not know what it was about. But without any trouble this one good looking young woman in a blue hat made all the thousands in the crowd follow her, think of HER, and forget their real business. It was Circe again, with yelling monkeys instead of swine to prove her power.

ACCIDENTS

As the 9:09 train was coming from the junction to the crossing on Chicago street Thursday morning, Mr. Robert Owens met with a very serious accident He was about to cross the track but hesitated a moment, and then went on, doubtless thinking he had plenty of time as the train was moving slowly, but he was not quick enough, and was struck by the train and thrown to the side of the track Drs. Conklin and Briegel were soon in attendance, when it was found that he was badly bruised, with a cut over his left eye, and his left shoulder blade broken, there may be internal injuries.

Att. Mangus met with a painfu accident Thursday morning, he had driven into the barn with a load of hay, and when the men who were helping went into the barn, they found him lying in a heap on the floor. He was badly stunned and was bleeding from his nose and month, Dr. Hendershott was called and made him as comfortable as possible, and thought aside from the bruises there was nothing serious. It is thought that he pulled up on the hay fork and the rope gave way as it was found loosened from the fork.

GASES IN STOMACH POISON THE BLOOD

Gas forms in your stomach because the food you eat ferments and turns sour.

Allow this fermentation to go on and these gases become poisonous and the poison gets into the blood.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets stop the fermentation almost instantly, turn the poisonous gases into liquid, and elliminnates the poison mostly through the kidneys.

If you have any stomach trouble such as gas, sourness, heaviness, flatulency or shortness of breath, MI-O-NA will give gratifying relief in five minutes.

They are sold on money back plan for acute or chronic indigestion, nervousness, dizziness, headaches, sleeplessness, ect. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son and daugglsts everywhere for 50 cents a box.

"Everybody's Doing It,"
DOING WHAT?
Buying Goods that have Quality

We have just purchased the famous Hotchkiss Central California fruit for delivery in November. This fruit is selected from the very best cultivated orchards in California, being strictly hand-picked and choicest variety. The apricots and peaches are peeled before going into cans.

2½ lb. cans of apricots, lemon cling or free-stone peaches put up in 45 degree syrup, to retail at 25c.

These are put up in sanitary cans, covered with glass label, and we expect to have them in our store about Nov. 1st, with a can of each open, that you may examine their contents.

Compare these fruits with any other fruit packed in cans and the quality will speak for itself.

We do not ask you to book your order or pay for someone to come and make you a visit, but we do want you to come to our store when these goods arrive, compare the goods and consider the price.

We know that these goods are the finest that can be grown and if you can beat them, we will pay the bill.

They Put an End to it

Chas; Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pill to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

TRAVERSE CITY—Shortly after the evening session of the circuit court here, Attorney Underwood, defending William and Laura Witte who are charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of their six-year-old daughter Marie early in April, moved for a change of venue He declared that the case had been so extensively handled by the newspapers and public sentiment wrought up to such an extent that it would be impossible to receive a fair trial for his clients. Judge F. W. Mayne denied the motion providing that a jury could be secured here. A special panel of twenty-four jurors was drawn after which the court proceeded with the drawing from the regular panel. The death of the child was caused, it is alleged, by criminal neglect and abuse on the part of the parents. The Wittes have been in jail for two months in default of bonds of $10,000 each.

BESSEMER—All of the resident taxpayers of Gogebic county and of the township of Wakefield in particular, were dumfounded when informed that at an impromptu meeting of two members of the state tax commission at Houghton, the mining assessments of this county were reviewed and among others, the Brotherton mine at Wakefield reduced from its present valuation, as established last year by the state's expert, of $900,000 to only $400,000. How many other mines of this county were reduced is not yet known. Sentiment here is particularly aroused because no notice whatever of the contemplated action of the tax commission had been published in any of the local county papers. Hence, local tax payers had no opportunity to be heard in the matter.

GRANT—Milton Robinson, who was arrested some time ago charged with committing perjury at White Cloud while attempting to shield a relative who had been convicted of robbery, was found guilty in the Newaygo circuit court and sentenced to one year's imprisonment at Ionia. Robinson was implicated in the same case with Sherman Wall of Ensley township, who was sent up for one year and six months for a like offense.

LANSING — Michigan Dairy and Food Commissioner Dame has started his annual crusade against the fly peril. "If there is no filth and dirt there will be no flies," he says. "If after cleaning up your own premises flies still exist it is because your neighbor is careless. This being the case report him to your local health officer and see that that officer performs his duty."

ESCANABA — A distressing epidemic of acute gastritis at Gladstone and a number of cases in this city, it is declared, have been caused by preserved milk supplied by local dairymen. City Milk Inspector Firkus has found traces of formaldehyde, freezine and preservane in one dealer's milk and has ordered that the practice of preserving lacteal fluid be stopped.

JACKSON — After forcibly driving his wife and family from their home and threatening to kill them Frank Allen, a well-known farmer of Blackman township, stood guard over his home with a shotgun. He was taken in charge by the sheriff's officers and is now held at the county jail pending an inquiry into his sanity.

SUFFRAGETTS IN RIOT

Irish Women in Dublin Emulate English Sister.

At Dublin Thursday a campaign of window smashing was opened by the Irish suffragettes, who tried to emulate the deeds of their English sisters, but came into vigorous conflict with the authorities.

After the women had made an energetic attack on most of the public buildings many of them, who were armed with bags of stones, were arrested.

The women, before the police came on the scene, and set siege to and succeeded in shattering forty-two windows of the custom house, the postoffice, the land commissioners' office and the police and military barracks.

PRESIDENT IN PERIL

Yacht Mayflower Narrowly Escapes Collision with Steamer.

President and Mrs. Taft and a party of guests on board the naval yacht Mayflower narrowly escaped a collision with the steamer Northland of the Norfolk and Washington line in the lower part of Chesapeake Bay, off Smith's Point light, while enroute to Hampton Roads.

As the Northland was attempting to pass on the port side of the Mayflower the naval vessel crossed over the Northland's bow. If Captain Posey of the Northland had not stopped his engines and turned the bow of his vessel away from the Mayflower's stern the two vessels would have collided. President and Mrs. Taft and their guests were asleep at the time and were not aware of their narow escape from accident until morning.

Mrs. Geo Burroughs, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh Mich., says: "I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me had been permanent. Since I publicly endorsed this remedy in December 1905, I have had no further need of a kidney medicine. My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began there use. In a few weeks my condition had improved in every way and my pains and aches were a thing of the past."

SEEKS DEATH IN RIVER

Woman Despondent Over Husband's Dissipation, Jumps Off Bridge.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 18.—Despondent because, as she alleges, her husband took all her money and squandered it on whisky, Mrs. Oscar Hyde, wife of a former patrolman, attempted suicide by jumping into the Kalamazoo river. She planned the deed shortly after arising and, after writing a note to a near relative and dispatching it by her ten-year-old daughter, went to the river bridge and jumped off.

William Buckner, who resides near the bridge, witnessed the act and managed to pull her from the stream after she had sunk twice, and with the assistance of a physician, succeeded in resuscitating her.

MATTHEWS BLAMES JOHNSON

Pleads Not Guilty to Attempted Robbery of Auto Party.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 15.—Floyd Matthews, charged with the sensational hold-up of an auto south of here and who was captured near Cedar Springs, waived examination in justice court, and was bound over to circuit court. He pleaded not guilty to highway robbery before Judge John S. McDonald, and his trial was set for June 26. He was held on $10,000 bail.

Matthews claims that Millard Johnson, who pleaded guilty to the hold-up and was sentenced by Judge McDonald for life in Jackson, was alone in the job.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The [illegible] nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled [illegible] and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the last three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. E. W. Dickover, of Utica, Ohio, Route 1. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for [illegible] that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took [illegible] of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

MRS. DICKOVER.

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

Amusing Trick of Messengers.

The stamp trick is a very common one with messengers because of the amount of amusement derived from it. It consists in sticking a new stamp on a step or some prominent place, and watching the various attempts of passers-by to pick it up, which, of course, are unsuccessful.—London Mail.

For Business Reasons

"If you really cared about me—" Elinor began, breaking off there in a choking sob.

William, her husband, frowned heavily, and said sarcastically, "Of course I don't care—you are only my wife—for whom I spend my days toiling and grubbing—and from whom I get in return—"

"I try! You know I try—ever so hard!" Elinor flashed out. "But your—your—m-mother—won't—let me have a minute's peace."

"Won't—eh? I really hadn't noticed it," William retorted, still sarcastic. "I suppose the real root of the matter is—you want me to leave her. Understand—I shall not do it! That's flat. You married me with your eyes open—knowing all she had done for me—that I was her only child—besides, I told you outright I would never leave her lonely. You agreed—anything to get me. Now—you want to get away from your bargain."

"Do you want to get away from your bargain?" Elinor asked, suddenly calm, sparks at the bottom of her eyes drying them magically.

William did not answer—only smiled provokingly. After a little she went on, still clearly, "If you do—I will take myself away—as soon as we have gone over the accounts. I want to leave things straight."

"Really, Elinor—this is too ridiculous. With the Travers expecting us to dinner—and the theater afterward," William began—he was not smiling any more, but still his voice was hard.

Elinor's head went up. "You do not answer," she said. "I take silence for consent. As to the Travers, you can make my excuses—say you came to tell them I was—indisposed."

The door opened without any preliminary knocking. Mrs. Alsop, the elder, came through it saying with a frown, "William, you should be resting—you can have fifteen minutes before it is time to dress. Elinor never thinks of such things—but if you are to go on doing yourself justice you must take care of yourself. And tonight I want you to be your best self. The chief justice, who is to be at the Travers', is an old beau of mine—"

"Suppose you go in my place—I am staying at home. And I can help you dress," Elinor said, her voice studiously commonplace.

Her mother-in-law stared at her.

"Not going!" she echoed. "I take your place! I knew you were poorly bred, but must say I never dreamed you could be ignorant enough to think of such a thing."

"Say 'kindness' for 'ignorance,' mother," William interposed. "Elinor is impulsive—and very generous. Of course, her suggestion is impossible. But I know she thought only of giving you pleasure—the pleasure of meeting an old friend."

"It will be much greater pleasure to have him see my son and his wife at their best, among the best people," Mrs. Alsop said proudly. "As for James Dwight, I don't care a pin—except to have him see I made no mistake in refusing him. He will be bound to see it—you are so much your father's son."

The clock striking the half hour, made her hurry off with a vexed exclamation.

As the door shut behind her William went up to his wife, laid a hand upon her arm and said, not very easily: "You are very angry, Elinor—that I know. And it is in your power to take a deep revenge. Unless you go tonight, I cannot. That will mean the loss of Traver's good will and good word, which just now are vitally important to me. He and his wife count on us to liven their party. The others are rich, but heavy—and wild to be amused."

"We are not paupers—thanks to my mother. She saved my father's estate, you know. But one can't stand still—you know that without telling. I have invested more than I ought to have risked in a deal that Traver can make successful. Knowing that—you must decide. I throw myself on your mercy."

"On my justice, you mean," Elinor said lifelessly. "Therefore I will go. It shall never be true that I added to the harm I did you in marrying you the wreck of your fortune."

"Come, now, let's kiss and be friends," Alsop said, trying to take her in his arms.

She eluded him, turned to her toilet table, and began pulling the pins from her hair, saying over her shoulder: "As I am staying only for business reasons, and so long as they are important, there seems to be no occasion for us ever to quarrel again."

She was the life of the party that night, so blithely brilliant, so [illegible] fascinating, Alsop was amazed. He knew she could be so, but heretofore she had been either too indolent or too indifferent to show off. All the Traver guests made much of her—before the home-going she had many engagements, tentative, to be sure, but certain to materialize.

Even the great chief justice was quite taken off his feet. "Tell your mother I thought her the most fascinating of women—until I met the daughter you have given her," he said to Alsop as they shook hands.

"Come and tell her so yourself, sir," Alsop answered. But the older man held up his hands with a face of comic dismay.

If Elinor heard or saw the byplay she made no sign. In the car as they whirled home she sat inert amid her wraps, answering with commonplace quiet whatever Alsop had to say. There was no rebound in her—she did not even admit how stupid she had found the rich folk. Her husband was all taken aback—she had always been as responsive as a harp-string and as vivid as a summer day.

In his heart be cursed roundly the root of trouble—the little lame dog she had found and fetched home, only to have it sent by his mother straight to the pound. This was the sensible thing, of course—but the furry innocent, hungry and friendless, had gone straight into Elinor's heart. She had begged to keep it—only until it was well, and she could find a home for it. Her mother-in-law had been inexorable, with the result of sending her into stormy tears. Throughout the next six weeks of dry-eyed calm on her part, William Alsop thought he would welcome anything that would bring back the tears.

She kept going, going, from her late rising to her later lying down. The house she had let slip into older hands, giving over even the account books which had been her special pride. Business drove Alsop as hard as Elinor drove herself in the name of pleasure. She helped him indubitably. Traver stuck at nothing in his behalf. "Want to make some pretty money for the pretty child to throw away," he said sometimes, with a chuckle. Traver's word had weight, especially when his money went behind it. After a feverish campaign, Alsop caught breath—to find himself richer by a quarter of a million.

He started home early, but moved by a queer impulse stopped at a famous jeweler's shop. It had suddenly come to him that Elinor loved pearls. He would buy her a string, the handsomest he could find, even though the cost might be half his recent gains. He was no judge of such things, but the shop imprint was a guarantee—besides, it employed the best of all experts. Alsop had a nodding acquaintance with the expert. Moving among bewildering counters in search of him, he came in view of a couple standing face to face. The woman's back was to him—the man he recognized as an elderly bachelor banker, enormously rich, with the name of being also enormously unscrupulous. He was smiling down at the woman, and saying persuasively, "If you will but permit—what happiness for me. Anything—here—or in the whole world. You love pearls—"

Alsop made almost a leap for the pair—something familiar in the outline of throat and shoulders, in the silken chestnut hair, told him who was listening. But he was man enough, gentleman enough, to carry off things well. "I see my wife has been confessing her pet sins to you, Mr. Vortress," he said, stepping between them. "Are you a judge of pearls? How lucky! My business here is to buy her a string."

"Not now—some other day," Elinor murmured composedly, turning to go.

Not until they had made the round of the park did he speak. Then, lifting his haggard face from the hands that had hidden it, he asked, miserably: "Elinor, how far has this gone? How long have you known Vortress? How dared he offer you—"

"Travers presented him—I have tolerated him for business reasons," Elinor said coldly. "As to his offer—please understand I did not accept. You see—I am still foolish. He told me you had won out—as you don't need me any longer, I am going away—in the morning."

"Elinor! Darling! I need you as never before. I love you, love, love, love you—better than all the world! Try to forgive me—I know I was brutal," Alsop panted. "Only say—you shall have whatever you want—even if it should be a hundred dogs."

Elinor sat trembling, her eyes humid. "I—I don't want—any dog—now," she murmured. "I ought to go away—but truly I cannot—I want my—husband!"

Alsop could not speak.

Found Out What Hit Him.

Before Horace Webb became a clown he was a circus "leaper." He held the record for a double turn leap over six elephants. One night he was standing at the top of the run ready to make a dash for the springboard. The six elephants were lined up and ready. He started down the run and was half way along when he suddenly felt something hit him on the calf of the leg. It rattled him so that he made a misstep and landed with a sprawl on top of the middle elephant. He got a fine shaking up. He couldn't imagine what had hit him and puzzled over it the rest of the day without coming to any conclusion.

The next day he met a fellow on the street whom he had known in his home town. The fellow was tickled to see Webb and said:

"I saw you at the show last night, Horace, and I tried to catch your eye just as you were about to hop-skip those elephants. I did everything I could to attract your attention. I even threw my programme at you. I rolled it up like a ball, and thought I hit you on the leg. You never noticed it."

His Comparison.

"Well, I wish him luck," said Mr. Jones the other night, after reading in the evening paper an account of the wedding of a popular member of the local football team. "But," he added, in a ruminating tone, "marriage is very much like football."

"Don't talk so ridiculous!" snapped Mrs. Jones. "However can you compare football to marriage?"

"Why," replied Jones, "it looks so easy to those who haven't tried it."

Goldsmith's Sketch of Himself.

Goldsmith has accurately sketched himself in the following fashion: "Fond of enjoying the present, careless of the future, his sentiments those of a man of sense, his activities those of a fool; of fortitude able to stand unmoved at the bursting of an earthquake, yet of sensibility to be affected by the breaking of a tea cup."

Eskimo Wife a Hard Worker.

Eskimo widowers often remarry within a week after the demise of the wife. The helpmate of the savage does most of the work, and he is almost helpless without her. She makes and breaks camp, cooks, cuts up her husband's kill and carries it to camp. She dresses the skins of deer and seals. She makes the footgear and clothes, paddles the canoe and carries every burden. Without her no domestic arrangement can go forward.

NEW PARTY PLAN STILL UNSETTLED

Roosevelt Progressive Leaders Work in Chicago.

CONVENTION DATE NOT SET

Gatherings May Be Held in Chicago or Perhaps, in Asbury Park, N. J. Planning Campaign in Different States.

Chicago, June 24. — The Roosevelt third party men who have remained here to discuss the organization of their movement with Colonel Roosevelt have already gotten to work. Governor Johnson of California, who for the present, is the Colonel's chief lieutenant, was empowered by a mass-meeting of delegates and others to appoint a committee of seven which is to confer with Colonel Roosevelt and prepare a plan and platform to be presented to the bolters' convention.

No definite announcement of plan has been made and the date of the convention is still to be decided. It was rumored that it might be held here in Chicago on Aug. 3, and also that an attempt might be made to call the Roosevelt progressives together at Asbury Park. In general the plan seems to be to utilize the Roosevelt machine in states that the Colonel carried at the primaries and in other states to present a complete progressive ticket.

In New York, for instance, if the plans talked of are carried out, there will be progressive candidates for governor, congress and other elective offices that may be open when the contest begins. In Pennsylvania it may be that William Flinn's plan of having the regular Republican electors cast their votes for Roosevelt who, of course, is certain to be the candidate of the new party, may be carried out. In Minnesota it is planned to have the electors who favor Roosevelt resign and then to appoint them by petition, in order to make their positions secure. The plan of action in these and other states depends upon expert legal advice which is still to be had.

At present everything connected [illegible] expressed intention of the Colonel and some of his leaders to make a fight is up in the air.

The Roosevelt delegates, steam rollered and otherwise, to the number of 200 or 300, and Roosevelt shouters, met in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel to inaugurate the formal temporary organization of the new party. Governor Johnson presided at the meeting. At his side were Medill McCormick, James R. Garfield, and Senator Clapp of Minnesota. Governor Stubbs of Kansas came in, but went out again before the meeting got down to business. Cecil Lyon of Texas had a front seat. Few if any of the other prominent Roosevelt men were present.

Governor Johnson announced that the progressives were about "to begin on the road that is to lead to political freedom." He said that in the committee to be formed no attempt could be made at this time to represent each state, but that the time for action had arrived and that they must get down to work.

Then James R. Garfield got up and told the massmeeting that the laws of the different states were at variance so far as the selection of electors were concerned, and that while in some states it would be easy to proceed with their campaign it might be very difficult in others.

"We must lay the foundations with care," he said, "and it is impossible now to outline definitely our plans. I would suggest that we give Governor Johnson the power to select seven men, who, after a conference with Colonel Roosevelt, will be able to present to the convention a plan of action and organization that will make it possible to carry on this great movement." He put the suggestion in the form of a motion which was carried, and Governor Johnson, raising his hand for silence, remarked with great solemnity: "Gentlemen, there is the birth of the new party."

As for the financing of the new party, Mr. Garfield said that there was not the slightest doubt but what plenty of money would be forthcoming.

When asked for [illegible] present strength of the new party Mr. Garfield said that it might be in a way measured by the delegates who sat silent in their places refusing to vote.

Red Bank, N. J., June 24.—As a result of an automobile accident here, Miss Susie J. Reilly was killed and Dennis O'Connor, his wife, and daughter Mary, and Miss Margaret Reilly were injured. All were employed by J. A. Haskell, president of the Dupont Powder Works.

BRYAN WILL AIM TO GET CONTROL

WOULDN'T REFUSE NOMINATION

Nebraska Man Is Warmly Greeted by Crowds Upon His Arrival in Baltimore—Town Rapidly Filling Up.

Baltimore, Md., June 24.—William J. Bryan, after studying the situation here for just three hours, made it known that he had decided to accept the challenge of the conservatives for a test of strength on the temporary chairmanship issue.

Mr. Bryan certainly woke up the town when he arrived from Chicago. His coming was as spectacular as any friend of the people could wish. Despite all the talk that has been [illegible] to put Billy Bryan where he belongs, which the talkers figured out to be the immediate present, most of the delegates on the ground, the camp followers and a considerable share of the population of Baltimore, threw their cheers into the general hurrah. Mr. Bryan's face lit up when the shouters yelled to him that they couldn't "steam roller" him the way the bunch did that other Colonel at Chicago.

If there was any doubt that the Nebraska Democrat has designs upon a nomination for the fourth time it was dissipated soon after his arrival in this city. By his evasive answers to questions on this subject Mr. Bryan showed plainly that he did not propose to commit himself in any way that might prove embarrassing within the next few days. He went further. His answers plainly conveyed the intimation that he would be only too glad to accept the nomination if it came his way. From the moment of Mr. Bryan's arrival in Baltimore it became apparent that he has joined hands firmly with Woodrow Wilson for the control of the national convention.

The crowds have been favored with fair weather. The heat which everybody has been expecting with dread so far has held off. The big hotels are turning people away by the hundreds and everybody is wondering where the still greater crowds now coming are going to be taken care of. Even the optimists agree that by tonight the town will be filled up to the limit.

COURT WARNS CORPORATIONS

Says They Cease to Exist if Certificates Are Not Filed.

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—That corporations whose officers fail to file a certified certificate of their charter with the county clerk within two years shall no longer exist as such in Illinois, is the holding of the Illinois supreme court in the case of the people against C. D. Mackey and others, which was brought by Robert Tilton, state's attorney of Morgan county, in the form of quo warranto proceedings against the defendant, who, with others constituted the Jacksonville Water Works company.

The defendants pleaded that it was through negligence that its certificate had not been placed on record in the county recorder's office. The state demurred to this, but was overruled by Judge Thompson of Jacksonville, and the case went to the supreme court on this issue. The supreme court reversed and remanded the case.

DISLIKE TO QUIT CONVENTION CITY

Guests Are Slow in Leaving Big, Busy Chicago.

MEMORABLE MEETING IS OVER

Republican Convention Nominates Taft and Sherman and Adjourns Sine Die at Late Hour Saturday Night.

Chicago, June 24. — Comparatively few convention guests left the big hotels until Sunday and many not until today, following the adjournment of the Republican convention which placed in nomination William Howard Taft for president and James Schoolcraft Sherman for vice president.

The uncertainties incident to the winding up of the convention activities created a guessing contest for the passenger department officials of the various railroads. Desirous of affording their patrons the best accommodations possible, and inspired by both a friendly rivalry and keen business competition, every effort was made to ascertain in advance just when the convention would adjourn, but it remained a matter of conjecture up to within an hour or so of the closing of the big show.

More than $5,000,000 was spent in Chicago by delegates, politicians and convention visitors in ten days, according to reports of manaegrs of the principal downtown hotels.

Of this amount they figured two-thirds was expended for food, drink and sleeping rooms, the rest being distributed for incidentals, theaters, and at the retail stores.

It was a memorable national convention. What its action portends for the future of political parties in the United States no one can say at this time. The groundwork for the organization of a new progressive party that may affect the solidarity of both the old party organizations was laid. The credited delegates to the Republican national convention who followed the advice of Colonel Roosevelt and refused to perform their functions as members of the body, together with the rank and file of electors who are behind them, are expected to join the new party movement.

And Taft and Sherman is again the ticket.

William Howard Taft was renominated for president on the first ballot at 9:25 o'clock Saturday night.

He received the votes of 561 of the 1,078 delegates entitled to participate in the convention.

[illegible] was not presented and who requested his supporters to refrain from taking any part in the proceedings of a body which he declares was organized by fraud and corruption, received 107 votes.

Roosevelt followers to the number of 344 were present in the convention when the roll was called and refused to vote.

Vice President James Schoolcraft Sherman was renominated on the first ballot immediately after the result of the ballot on the presidency had been announced in the convention.

The vice presidency went begging. There was a general understanding that Mr. Sherman would not stand in the way of the selection of some other candidate for second place on the ticket. The leaders who have been in control of the 1912 national convention wanted a western progressive on the ticket with President Taft. They were unable to find one who would consent to the presentation of his name.

The second place nomination was offered to Governor Deneen of Illinois, to Governor Hadley of Missouri and to Senator Borah of Idaho. When it became apparent that the timber available afforded no chance of a selection the friends of Mr. Sherman announced his willingness to make a try for election.

Senator Robert Marion LaFollette of Wisconsin received 41 votes for president. His Wisconsin and North Dakota strength of 36 was added to by the splitting of the South Dakota delegation, he receiving five of the ten votes, while Roosevelt received the other five.

The name of Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, whose friends were hoping near to the last for a disintegration of the Taft forces that would make their candidate loom strongly as a compromise proposition, was not presented to the convention. Senator Cummins, however, received 17 votes—10 from his own state and 7 of the 8 Idaho votes which were lined up for Roosevelt until he pulled his hat out of the ring.

AUTO STRIKES OLD SOLDIER

Less Than Week Before He Saw Fatal Auto Accident.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 24.—Less than a week ago, Ichabod A. Taylor was a witness to the automobile accident that cost the life of Miss Gladys Gould and serious injury of her sister, Miss Ada.

Some days later he was struck, under similar circumstances, by an automobile driven by George S. Huff, a local real estate dealer, while crossing a down town street. Taylor, an old soldier, was badly hurt, but not fatally, unless complications arise, due to his age.

When Buying, Buy Only the Best

H. L. Bloomquist, Esdaile, Wis., says his wife considers Foley's Honey and Tar Compound the best cough cure on the market. "She has tried various kinds but Foley's gives the best results of all."

Mrs. M. A. McLaughlin, 512 Jay St., LaCross, Wis., writes that she suffered all kinds of pains in her back and hips on account of kidney trouble and rheumatism. "I got some of Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them for a few days there was a wonderful change in my case, for the pain entirely left my back and hips and I am thankful there is medicine as Foley Kidney Pills," For sale by all druggists.

NO MATTER how wise you are, there is bound to be somebody who thinks your ideas are foolish.

Help to Keep Down Expenses

Mrs. J. E. Henry, Akron, Mich., tells how she did so: "I was bothered with my kidneys and had to go nearly double I tried a sample of Foley Kidney Pills and they did me so much good that I bought a bottle, and feel that they saved me a big doctor's bill."

Mrs. Lela Love, wife of Wiley Love, a farmer living near Covena, Ga., says, "I have taken Foley Kidney Pills and find them to be all you claim for them. They gave me almost instant relief when my kidneys were sluggish and inactive. I can cheerfully recommend them to all sufferers from kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists.

Obituary

MRS. EZRA SMITH

Mrs. Ezra Smith died at the home of Harlow Smith Sunday morning at 2 o'clock after an illness extending over seven years, aged 50 years. The funeral was held this morning under the auspices of the L. O. T. M. M. Rev. Hartzog officiating. The burial was at Brookside.

MRS. THOMAS MEADE

Word was received Saturday evening from Detroit, of the sudden death of Mrs. Thomas Meade. She has been an invalid for about a year, death however coming suddenly. Mrs. Meade was just 57 years, old and until this time

The body was brought here Monday afternoon, and the funeral services conducted by the Rev. Mott of Cleveland were held at the home of her son, Richard Meade at 2 o'clock, Tuesday with burial at Raisin Valley.

MEMORIAL SERVICES I. O. O. F.

Promptly at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon the meeting at the I. O. O. F. Hall, was called to order by J. J. Belcher

The Worthy Chaplain then lead in prayer, a solo by Miss Metta McKinney was given in her very best manner, this was followed by a select reading by George Hoag on the I. O. O. F. order, from a book printed in the early forties. Mrs John Collins then gave a fine recitation, Mr. Broas of Homer, father of Mr. Broas of Tecumseh made some very fine remarks, he had been a member of the order for 45 years. Miss Marian Hoag gave a very pretty recitation after which H. W. McClure Secretary of the lodge, read the names of the deceased members and Arline and Geraldine Gillespie as flowers girls selected twelve boquets from the mass of flowers, and presented them to the committee, who laid them upon the altar in the name of the members who had passed away.

Mrs. John Gray and Mrs. Frank Jack representing the floral committee presented 150 boquets to the committee in charge for decorating the graves of the deceased members. Eugene Service conveyed these to the cemetery in his carriage, and the committee scattered them over the many graves of Oddfellows, who sleep in Brookside.

Newspaper Has Record for Size.

The largest newspaper in the world was the Illuminated Quadruple Constellation, which appeared in New York on Independence day, 1858. Its dimensions equaled that of a billiard-table—eight feet long by six feet wide; and, strange to say for an American publication, it had no advertisements. A copy of this mammoth new world production can be seen at the Newspaper Museum of Aix-la-Chapelle, France. Its price was fifty cents.

Almost Lost His Life.

Sunday, while boating on the Globe Mill pond, Lyman Root was taken with a fainting spell and fell backward into the water. He was but a few rods from shore, and Wesley and Hollis Clark and Elmer Hooten, seeing the accident, went speedily to his rescue. As he came up they grabbed him by his clothing and brought him to shore. He was in an unconscious condition and it took several minutes of hard work with artificial respiration before he regained consciousness. Lyman Root is an expert swimmer and under ordinary circumstances would quite enjoy the dip.

STOKES JACKSON DEAD

Noted Democrat Expires after Long Battle with Illness.

Late Sergeant-at-Arms Led Party in Many Hot State, District and County Contests.

Greenfield, Ind., June 24.— Death, long expected, but bravely resisted for many weeks, came to Uriah Stokes Jackson. The sergeant-at-arms of the national house of representatives expired. All members of the immediate family were at the bedside.

Mr. Jackson for many years had been a figure of national prominence, and the news of his death brought messages of condolence from men of note in all parts of the country. Although he had shown signs of illness during his term as chairman of the Indiana state Democratic committee, he departed for Washington at the opening of congress, and assumed his duties as sergeant-at-arms. On April 28 his condition grew alarming and his son, Omer Jackson, was summoned to his bedside. Within a few days it was announced that his condition was hopeless.

Stokes Jackson was a native of Hancock county, born Aug. 18, 1846. He was reared on a farm in Vernon township and gained early distinction as a politician in his native community. He served four years as state chairman, had been chairman of the Sixth District organization and often guided the efforts of the Democratic organization in Hancock county. He served two terms here as county sheriff and on one occasion was elected when every Democrat in the county met defeat. He was a man of remarkable tact as a leader and is accredited by politicians with leading the state ticket to success in two campaigns.

As a lawyer he was unusually successful, having practiced in Hancock county and vicinity for many years

MIDSUMMER MEETING O. E. S. LENAWEE-MONROE ASSOCIATION

Addison June 20

The Addison Chapter O. E. S. Faith, No. 217, were host to the Lenawee-Monroe Association last Thursday, and bore their part nobly.

The afternoon was given over to the real business of the Association, and in the evening the exemplification of the work was given by officers selected from the Chapters represented.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was as follows:

Pres.—Mrs. S. W. Anderson, Tecumseh,
1st. Vice Pres.—Mrs. John B. Eldridge, Adrian,
2nd. Vice Pres.—Mrs. Green, Addison,
Sec. and Treas.—Mrs. M. Lawson, Deerfield. re-elected,
Chaplin—Mrs. Crofrot, Addison,
Marshall—Mrs. Oren Howes, Hudson,

Ninety eight responded to roll call at the afternoon session. There were eight ladies who represented the Tecumseh Chapter. The winter session of the Association will undoubtedly be held in Tecumseh,

OSBORN IS FOR ROOSEVELT

Makes Brief Statement on Nomination of Taft.

Lansing, Mich., June 24.—When told that Taft had been nominated for president by the standpatters, Governor Osborn made the following brief statement:

"I stand for the principles Roosevelt has stood for all during his campaign. Further than this I have nothing to give out for publication until after I see what is done about a third party national convention."

Students Awarded Prizes.

Marion, Ind., June 24.—Commencement exercises for the thirty graduates of the common schools of Grant county were held here. The address was given by L. J. Rettger of Terre Haute. The judges decided the contests and awarded prizes as follows: Oratory, Frank T. Nesbit of Monroe county, first; Martha Tucker, Van Buren, second; Hazel E. Wiltsee, Pleasant township, third. Scholarship, Inez Brewer, Liberty township, first; Lelia V. Williams, Washington township, second. Composition, Hazel Wiltsee, first; Marjorie Frantz, Sims, second.

NOT A KICK

Enthusiastic Meeting of the Business men of Tecumseh not a Dissenting Voice to the Proposition to the Lighting of Our Streets.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Fine Banquet Served by the Barret Brothers. Congeniality Prevailed

About one hundred of the representative business men of Tecumseh, responded to the invitation to the banquet held at the Barrett Hotel on Monday evening. A fine four course banquet was served.

J. H. Smith was appointed Chairman of the meeting and also acted as Toastmaster.

The organization of a new association and the lighting of the street was discussed in a very enthusiastic manner.

A committee of three, consisting of F. B. Wood, Chas. Bidwell, and Newbold Satterthwaite, was appointed who in turn nominated a committee of seven to form an executive board to adopt laws for an ACTIVE Business Men's Association (the old one having slept long enough). They were also directed to find out the cost of installing and maintaining the lights on the street, and to report the information gained at the earliest possible moment to this same fine turn out of business men. The committee were: C. A. Wright, G. E. Belding, F. S. Anderson, P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, James McCann, C. H. Williamson and J. H. Smith.

The Rev. Mr. Hewitt the new Rector of St. Peters church made a few very spicy remarks and was followed by the Rev. B. R. Weld in a very appropriate manner.

Fremont Furnace Company, Fremont, Ohio.

The new furnace company at a meeting held Monday, June 17, elected directors and officers for the ensuing year. Previous to the regular meeting a meeting of the incorporators was held and books were opened for the sale of stock. Plans for the reorganization of the company were also perfected. The board of directors elected the following officers:

President—A. H. Jackson
Vice President—T. C. Harris.
Secretary and General Manager—John H. Combs.
Treasurer—D. B. Smith
Superintendent—W. R. Eberly.

The Fremont Furnace Co. was started by well known Tecumseh citizens in November, 1910, and has been successful from the start, in the first six months making and shipping nearly two hundred furnaces. The company has decided to increase its capital stock to $50,000 and incorporate as a stock company in Ohio, this being done at this meeting. All the stock thus far is sold in the city of Fremont, which indicates the esteem in which the old officers and directors are held and the confidence the people have in the business outlook of the Fremont Furnace Co. They have many friends in Tecumseh who wish them all success.

Personal Items

Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Field who have been attending the Alumni at Manchester, came Monday for a visit with his brother, George Field and family.

Mrs. Nat. Doke of Detroit, came Monday for the re-union of Mrs. L. E. Barnes' class of the M. E. Sunday school which was held in the church parlors Monday afternoon.

We keep in stock at all times, a full line of Deering repairs, also sections guards and rivets for McCormick, Champion, Milwaukee and Plant mowers and binders.

S. W. & L. E. Temple.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mary Ellen Newsome, was the little hostess Saturday afternoon, when she celebrated her fifth birthday with a party.

Some lads and lassies with their mothers responded to the invitations and celebrated the occasion in a very fitting manner. The day was fine and every thing to amuse the young people was in readiness for them, and the beautiful lawn surrounding her home was brilliant with the human blossoms that dotted it in every part. A table was spread on the lawn where a most appetising lunch was served to the little ones, a huge birthday cake being the most noticeable feature. The mothers were served later on the porch. Many pretty gifts were presented to Mary Ellen and a most delightful afternoon was spent. Clifford Rosacrans of Toledo, was the out of town guest. Those present were:

Mrs Chas Deery and two children George and Teresa, Mrs. W. D. Reed and two children David and Ellen, Mrs. G. N. Kennedy and daughter Catherine, Mrs. G. R. Gillespie and daughter Francis, Mrs John Austin and son Raymond, Mrs. A. E. Deming and son John, Fredrick Temple, Mrs. Chas. Williamson and sons Bernard and Edwin, Mrs. Fred Rosacrans and daughter Marjorie and grandson Clifford and Eugene Keyser.

Dividing the Night.

BERDAN & CO. TOLEDO OHIO

The difference is easily explained

There is as much difference in canned tomatoes as in fresh.

Good canned tomatoes are only good tomatoes properly canned. CHEF tomatoes are carefully selected and canned whole. They are uniform in size and uniformly ripe. They ripen in the field and are packed the day they are picked. They are firsts only—perfect tomatoes in prime condition.

CHEF tomatoes are so much better than ordinary tomatoes that they must be seen to be appreciated.

ECHOES FROM THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

Taft and Sherman Nominated on the First Ballot.

Root is a masterly hand at the gavel. He arrived one hour late. There were three blows of the gavel, a long prayer, instructions issued to Heaven for the running of the convention—And then the game started. Nellie Bly says, he looked like the cat that had eaten the canary.

The band played "Should Old Acquaintance be Forgot" as Bryan in his alpaca coat marched down to his reporter's desk. When they did that he stopped and bowed. It was a Republican convention, but a Bryan reception.

Imagine this unbroken procedure. In voting, the "ayes" sounded loud and strong. The "nays" sounded louder and stronger, Mr. Root invariably saying "The 'ayes' have apparently carried." This became the joke of the day, a roar of laughter meeting the unchanging decision.

Taft had only six more votes than were needed, rather a tight squeeze.

The wise and effective corporation Republicans say, the Democratic machine at Baltimore will offer to Mr. Trust Moloch as pure and safe, sane and servile, a Trust candidate as Moloch's hardened old heart could desire.

Root reminded one of the kind man who cut off his dog's tail a half inch at a time because he had not the heart to cut it all off at once, proceeding slowly and cautiously. In appearance he was more than fair to the Roosevelt men, and in important matters did not let Roosevelt gain one point.

Again were dainty refreshments served at this convention. Not only in Paradise Aigrette Row, but all through the convention hall, baskets of-luncheon and hot coffee were passed around, no one leaving the hall from 9 a. m, to 9 p. m.

Michigan votes at the convention were 20 for Taft, 9 for Teddy, 1 no choice.

It is said that the first salary received by Taft was $6 per week as a reporter.

The biennial convention of Woman's Clubs meets in San Francisco June 25, the same day that the Democratic convention meets in Baltimore We will now await with deep anxiety to see if they can possibly do as well as the Chicago convention, as we would not wish them to be out done by mere man.

It is lucky, says Helen Ferber, that the convention closed when it did. As the wives of the delegates were tired of washing out their silk gloves and hose, and drying them in their rooms at the hotels and pasting their handkerchiefs on the mirrors and tubs.

One by one the big men of the convention and the special writers are folding their tents like the Arab, and stealing away toward Baltimore where Maryland chicken and biscuit on the side, abound.

It will take a pretty good mechanic to convert a "steam roller" into an alluring "band wagon."

Bryan, the "peerless leader," looms large as a presidential possibility at the Baltimore convention with Woodrow Wilson and Champ Clark. The only sure thing about the convention, however, is that it will be a fight with conservatism on one hand and progression on the other.

Baltimore will be pleased to have Chicago taken off the map for a few days.

ARE YOU GUILTY
Do You Smoke too Much, Drink too Much, Eat too Much?

It takes a mighty good stomach to feel ready for a good breakfast the morning after the banquet or social session.

"What do you want for breakfast?" inquired Brown's good wife.

If you eat drink or smoke or drink too much always remember that two little MI-O-NA stomach tablets taken just before you go to bed will destroy all poisonous gases and leave you with a sweet clean stomach in the morning.

For Indigestion and all stomach distress, MI-O-NA is the best prescription in the world, C. A. Wright & Son sell it on money back plan. Large box only 50 cents.

They Put an End to it

Chas; Sable, 80 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pill to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

DOWNWARD COURSE

Fast Being Realized by Tecumseh People

A little backache at first.
Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak.
Urinary disorder quickly follows;
Dropsy and finally Bright's disease.

Don't take this course. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

Mrs. Geo. Burroughs, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me had been permanent. Since I publicly endorsed this remedy in December 1905, I have had no further need of a kidney medicine. My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began there use. In a few weeks my condition had improved in every way and my pains and aches were a thing of the past."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For a woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

MRS. DICKOVER.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. [illegible] Dickover, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

PLATFORM OF REPUBLICANS

Adopted at National Convention in Chicago.

TARIFF REVISION ADVOCATED

Move to Investigate the High Cost of Living—Further Revision of Banking Arrangements—Rights of Individuals.

The Republican party, assembled by its representatives in national convention, declares its unchanging faith in government of the people, by the people, for the people. We renew our allegiance to the principles of the Republican party and our devotion to the cause of the Republican institutions established by the fathers.

It is appropriate that we should now recall with a sense of veneration and gratitude the name of our first great leader who was nominated in this city, and whose lofty principles and superb devotion to his country are an inspiration to the party he honored—Abraham Lincoln. In the present state of public affairs we should be inspired by his broad statesmanship and by his tolerant spirit toward men.

Views Record with Pride.

The Republican party looks back upon its record with pride and satisfaction, and forward to its new responsibilities, with hope and confidence. Its achievements in government constitute the most luminous pages in our history. Our great national advance has been made during the years of its ascendency in public affairs. It has been genuinely and always a party of progress; it has never been either stationary or reactionary. It has gone from the fulfillment of one great pledge to the fulfillment of another in response to the public need and to the popular will.

We believe in our self-controlled representative democracy, which is a government of laws, not of men, and in which order is the prerequisite of progress.

The principles of constitutional government, which make provision for orderly and effective expression of the popular will, for the protection of civil liberty and the rights of men, and for the interpretation of the law by an untrammeled and independent judiciary, have proved themselves capable of sustaining the structure of a government which, after more than a century of development, embraces 100,000,000 of people, scattered over a wide and diverse territory, but bound by a common purpose, common ideals, and common affection to the constitution of the United States.

Growth of United States.

Under the constitution and the principles asserted and vitalized by it the United States has grown to be one of the great civilized and civilizing powers of the earth. It offers a home and an opportunity to the ambitious and the industrious from other lands. Resting upon the broad basis of a people's confidence and a people's support, and managed by the people themselves, the government of the United States will meet problems of the future as satisfactorily as it has solved those of the past.

The Republican party is now, as always, a party of advanced and constructive statesmanship. It is prepared to go forward with the solution of those new questions which social, economic, and political development have brought into the forefront of the nation's interest. It will strive, not only in the nation but in the several states to enact the necessary legislation to safeguard the public health; to limit effectively the labor of women and children; to protect wage earners engaged in dangerous occupations; to enact comprehensive and generous workmen's compensation laws in place of the present wasteful and unjust system of employers' liability; and in all possible ways to satisfy the just demand of the people for the study and solution of the complex and constantly changing problem of social welfare.

Rights of the Individual.

In dealing with these questions it is important that the rights of every individual to the freest possible development of his own powers and resources and to the control of his own justly acquired property, so far as those are compatible with the rights of others, shall not be interfered with or destroyed.

The social and political structure of the United States rests upon the civil liberty of the individual, and for the protection of that liberty the people have wisely, in the national and state constitutions, put definite limitations upon themselves and upon their governmental officers and agencies. To enforce these limitations, to secure the orderly and coherent exercise of governmental powers, and to protect the rights of even the humblest and least favored individual are the function of independent courts of justice.

The Republican party reaffirms its intention to uphold at all times the authority and integrity of the courts, both state and federal, and it will ever insist that their power to enforce their process and to protect life, liberty, and property shall be preserved inviolate. An orderly method is provided under our system of government by which the people may, when they choose, alter or amend the constitutional provisions which underlie that government.

Laws Against Long Delays.

Until these constitutional provisions are so altered or amended in orderly fashion, it is the duty of the courts to see to it that when challenged they are enforced.

That the courts, both federal and state, may bear the heavy burden laid upon them to the complete satisfaction of public opinion, we favor legislation to prevent long delays and the tedious and costly appeals which have so often amounted to a denial of justice in civil cases and to a failure to protect the public at large in criminal cases.

Since the responsibility of the judiciary is so great, the standards of judicial action must be always and everywhere above suspicion and reproach. While we regard the recall of judges as unnecessary and unwise, we favor such action as may be necessary to simplify the process by which any judge who is found to be derelict in his duty may be removed from office.

International Disputes.

Together with peaceful and orderly development at home, the Republican party earnestly favors all measures for the establishment and protection of the peace of the world and for the development of closer relations between the various nations of the earth. It believes most earnestly in the peaceful settlement of international disputes and in the reference of all justiciable controversies between nations to an international court of justice.

Monopoly and Privilege.

The Republican party is opposed to special privilege and monopoly. It placed upon the statute book the interstate commerce act of 1887, and the important amendments thereto, and the anti-trust act of 1890, and it has consistently and successfully enforced the provisions of these laws. It will take no backward step to permit the re-establishment in any degree of conditions which were intolerable.

Experience makes it plain that the business of the country may be carried on without fear or without disturbance, and at the same time without resort to practices which are abhorrent to the common sense of justice.

The Republican party favors the enactment of legislation supplementary to the existing anti-trust act which will define as criminal offenses those specific acts that uniformly mark attempts to restrain and to monopolize trade, to the end that those who honestly intend to obey the law may have a guide for their action, and that those who aim to violate the law may the more surely be punished.

The same certainty should be given to the law prohibiting combinations and monopolies that characterizes other provisions of commercial law, in order that no part of the field of business opportunity may be restricted by monopoly or combination, that business success honorably achieved may not be converted into crime, and that the right of every man to acquire commodities, and particularly the necessities of life, in an open market uninfluenced by the manipulation of trust or combination may be preserved.

Federal Trade Commission.

In the enforcement and administration of federal laws governing interstate commerce and enterprises impressed with a public use engaged therein, there is much that may be committed to a federal trade commission, thus placing in the hands of an administrative board many of the functions now necessarily exercised by the courts. This will promote promptness in the administration of the law and avoid delays and technicalities incident to court procedure.

The Tariff.

We reaffirm our belief in a protective tariff. The Republican tariff policy has been of the greatest benefit to the country, developing our resources, diversifying our industries, and protecting our workmen against competition with cheaper labor abroad, thus establishing for our wage earners the American standard of living.

The protective tariff is so woven into the fabric of our industrial and agricultural life that to substitute for it a tariff for revenue only would destroy many industries and throw millions of our people out of employment. The products of the farm and of the mine should receive the same measure of protection as other products of American labor.

We hold that the import duties should be high enough while yielding a sufficient revenue to protect adequately American industries and wages. Some of the existing import duties are too high, and should be reduced. Readjustment should be made from time to time to conform to changed conditions and to reduce excessive rates, but without injury to any American industry.

To accomplish this correct information is indispensable. This information can best be obtained by an expert commission, as the large volume of useful facts contained in the recent reports of the tariff board has demonstrated.

Changing Conditions Require Study.

The pronounced feature of modern industrial life is its enormous diversification. To apply tariff rates justly to these changing conditions requires closer study and more scientific methods than ever before. The Republican party has shown by its creation of a tariff board its recognition of this situation and its determination to be equal to it.

We condemn the Democratic party for its failure either to provide funds for the continuance of this board or to make some other provision for securing the information requisite for intelligent tariff legislation. We protest against the Democratic method of legislating in these vitally important subjects without careful investigation.

We condemn the Democratic tariff bills passed by the house of representatives of the Sixty-second congress as sectional, as injurious to the public credit, and as destructive of business enterprise.

Cost of Living.

The steadily increasing cost of living has become a matter not of national but of worldwide concern. The fact that it is not due to the protective tariff system is evidenced by the existence of similar conditions in countries which have a tariff policy different from our own, as well as by the fact that the cost of living has increased while rates of duty have remained stationary or been reduced.

The Republican party will support a prompt scientific inquiry into the causes which are operative both in the United States and elsewhere, to increase the cost of living. When the exact facts are known it will take the necessary steps to remove any abuses that may be found to exist, in order that the cost of the food, clothing and shelter of the people may in no way be unduly or artificially increased.

Banking and Currency.

The Republican party has always stood for a sound currency and for safe banking methods. It is responsible for the resumption of specie payments, and for the establishment of the gold standard. It is committed to the progressive development of our banking and currency system.

Our banking arrangements today need further revision to meet the requirements of current conditions. We need measures which will prevent the recurrence of money panics and financial disturbances, and which will promote the prosperity of business and the welfare of labor by producing constant employment.

We need better currency facilities for the movement of crops in the west and south. We need banking arrangements under American auspices for the encouragement and better conduct of our foreign trade. In attaining these ends, the independence of individual banks, whether organized under national or state charters, must be carefully protected, and our banking and currency system must be safeguarded from any possibility of domination by sectional, financial, or political interests.

Money for the Farmers.

It is of great importance to the social and economic welfare of this country that its farmers have facilities for borrowing easily and cheaply the money they need to increase the productivity of their land.

It is as important that financial machinery be provided to supply the demand of farmers for credit as it is that the banking and currency systems be reformed in the interest of general business. Therefore, we recommend and urge an authoritative investigation of agricultural credit societies and corporations in other countries, and the passage of state and federal laws for the establishment and capable supervision of organizations having for their purpose the loaning of funds to farmers.

The Civil Service.

We reaffirm our adherence to the principle of appointment to public office based on proved fitness and tenure during good behavior and efficiency.

The Republican party stands committed to the maintenance, extension, and enforcement of the civil service law, and it favors the passage of legislation empowering the president to extend the competitive service so far as practicable. We favor legislation to make possible the equitable retirement of disabled and superannuated members of the civil service, in order that a higher standard of efficiency may be maintained.

We favor the amendment of the federal employes liability law so as to extend its provisions to all government employes, as well as to provide a more liberal scale of compensation for injury or death.

Campaign Contributions.

We favor such additional legislation as may be necessary more effectually to prohibit corporations from contributing funds, directly or indirectly, to campaigns for the nomination or election of the president, the vice president, senators, and representatives in congress.

We heartily approve the recent act of congress requiring the fullest publicity in regard to all campaign contributions, whether made in connection with primaries, conventions, or elections.

Conservation Policy.

We rejoice in the success of the distinctive Republican policy of the conservation of our national resources for their use by the people without waste and without monopoly. We pledge ourselves to a continuation of such a policy.

We favor such fair and reasonable rules and regulations as will not discourage or interfere with actual bona fide homeseekers, prospectors and miners in the acquisition of public lands under existing laws.

The Navy.

We believe in the maintenance of an adequate navy for the national defense, and we condemn the action of the Democratic house of representatives in refusing to authorize the construction of additional ships.

Flood Prevention.

The Mississippi river is the nation's drainage ditch. Its flood waters gathered from thirty-one states and the Dominion of Canada, constitute an overpowering force which breaks the levees and pours its torrents over many million acres of the richest land in the union, stopping mails, impeding commerce, and causing great loss of life and property.

These floods are national in scope and the disasters they produce seriously affect the general welfare. The state unaided cannot cope with this giant problem, hence, we believe the federal government should assume a fair proportion of the burden of its control so as to prevent the disasters from recurring floods.

Reclamation.

We favor the continuance of the policy of the government with regard to the reclamation of arid lands; and for the encouragement of the speedy settlement and improvement of such lands we favor an amendment to the law that will reasonably extend the time within which the cost of any reclamation project may be repaid by the land owners under it.

Rivers and Harbors.

We favor a liberal and systematic policy for the improvement of our rivers and harbors. Such improvements should be made upon expert information and after a careful comparison of cost and prospective benefits.

Alaska.

We favor a liberal policy toward Alaska to promote the development of the great resources of that district, with such safeguards as will prevent waste and monopoly.

We favor the opening of the coal lands to development through a law leasing the lands on such terms as will invite development and provide fuel for the navy and the commerce of the Pacific ocean, while retaining titles in the United States to prevent monopoly.

Philippine Policy.

The Philippine policy of the Republican party has been and is inspired by the belief that our duty toward the Filipino people is a national obligation which should remain entirely free from partisan politics.

Immigration.

We pledge the Republican party to the enactment of appropriate laws to give relief from the constantly growing evil of induced or undesirable immigration which is inimical to the progress and welfare of the people of the United States.

Safety at Sea.

We favor the speedy enactment of laws to provide that seamen shall not be compelled to endure involuntary servitude, and that life and property at sea shall be safeguarded by the ample equipment of vessels with lifesaving appliance and with full complements of skilled, able-bodied seamen to operate them.

Republican Accomplishment.

The approaching completion of the Panama canal, the establishment of a bureau of mines, the institution of postal savings banks, the increased provision made in 1912 for the aged and infirm soldiers and sailors of the republic and for their widows, and the vigorous administration of the laws relating to pure food and drugs all mark the successful progress of Republican administration, and are additional evidence of its effectiveness.

Economy and Efficiency.

We commend the earnest effort of the Republican administration to secure greater economy and increased efficiency in the conduct of government business. Extravagant appropriations and the creation of unnecessary offices are an injustice to the taxpayer and a bad example to the citizen.

Civic Duty.

We call upon the people to quicken their interest in public affairs, to condemn and punish lynchings and other forms of lawlessness, and to strengthen in all possible ways a respect for law and the observance of it. Indifferent citizenship is an evil from which the law affords no adequate protection and for which legislation can provide no remedy.

Arizona and New Mexico.

We congratulate the people of Arizona and New Mexico upon the admission of those states, thus merging in the union in final and enduring form the last remaining portion of our continental territory.

Republican Administration.

We challenge successful criticism of the sixteen years of Republican administration under Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt, and Taft. We heartily reaffirm the indorsement of President McKinley contained in the platform of 1900 and 1904, and that of President Roosevelt contained in the platform of 1904 and 1908.

We invite the intelligent judgment of the American people upon the administration of William H. Taft. The country has prospered and been at peace under his presidency. During the years in which he had the co-operation of a Republican congress an unexampled amount of constructive legislation was framed and passed in the interest of the people and in obedience to their wish. That legislation is a record on which any administration might appeal with confidence to the favorable judgment of history.

We appeal to the American electorate upon the record of the Republican party and upon this declaration of its principles and purposes. We are confident that under the leadership of candidates here to be nominated our appeal will not be in vain; that the Republican party will meet every just expectation of the people whose servant it is; that under its administration and its laws our nation will continue to advance; that peace and prosperity will abide with the people, and that new glory will be added to the great republic.

The platform also favors legislation for a parcels post, laws for the protection of American citizenship and a revived merchant marine.

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN ALIVE

His Estate Divided and Property Was Disposed Of.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 24.—Somewhat of a sensation was created here by the news from Delta, Col., that Dr. W. J. Fairchild, former Battle Creek physician of prominence, mourned as dead for three years, has turned up alive. Fairchild conducted a health home here and was well known about the state.

In 1909, Fairchild went to the Gunnison river, near Delta, to take a swim. His clothing, his money, and his gold watch were found on the bank, and six months later he was declared legally dead, and his estate settled. Battle Creek attorneys helped to dispose of his property.

Now, Dr. Fairchild has returned from Alaska with a weird tale of loss of memory. He says that he was unconscious of his surroundings from the time he felt the cold splash of Gunnison river to when he came to his senses on a ship bound for Alaska. Even then, he could not remember his own name. Recently he suffered a fall, causing concussion of the brain, and when he came to, he regained his mental equilibrium. After a long search he traced Mrs. Fairchild and son to Denver, where the family has now been reunited.

Eskimo Wife a Hard Worker.

Eskimo widowers often remarry within a week after the demise of the wife. The helpmate of the savage does most of the work, and he is almost helpless without her. She makes and breaks camp, cooks, cuts up her husband's kill and carries it to camp. She dresses the skins of deer, and seals. She makes the footgear and clothes, paddles the canoe and carries every burden. Without her no domestic arrangement can go forward.

Goldsmith's Sketch of Himself.

Goldsmith has accurately sketched himself in the following fashion: "Fond of enjoying the present, careless of the future, his sentiments those of a man of sense, his activities those of a fool; of fortitude able to stand unmoved at the bursting of an earthquake, yet of sensibility to be affected by the breaking of a tea cup."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

GRAND RAPIDS—After being lost to his relatives for many years, mourned as dead, then suddenly being found in Boston, Willard S. Turner, who gained distinction as a musician during the Civil War, returned to Grand Rapids. He is sixty-eight years old. He was born in Detroit. When the war broke out, Turner enlisted with a Michigan regiment. He was a musician of rare talent and was immediately made leader of the regimental band. On his return from the front, Turner was made leader of twenty-five bands which participated in the grand review which made the memorable parade down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington in 1865. He later traveled with Robinson's minstrels, leading the orchestra and band for several years on its tour of the United States. Then he suddenly dropped from sight.

GRAND RAPIDS—Michigan State Insurance Commissioner Palmer filed a petition in circuit court against the Modern Circle, a fraternal organization, to show cause why that organization should not turn over its business and accounts to him. He alleges that the society is insolvent. An order was issued in compliance with Palmer's request. An answer filed by the society admits all the allegations. Commissioner Palmer alleges the total assets of the society are $1,850.50, while the total liabilities amount to $11,098.78, of which $9,698.81 is due on death accounts and $1,400.47 for salaries of officers of the organization. The society has 1,100 members in Michigan and was incorporated in April, 1903.

IONIA—Clayton Masters was arrested in this city on a forgery charge. He came here from Coral and has been working in local factories and on the street. He presented to a local clothing merchant a check for $15 in payment for a $1.50 purchase. The check, purported to have been drawn by H. B. Webber, who repudiated it at the National bank. Masters is reported to have attempted to pass other checks about town. He is twenty-four years old.

ALBION—J. S. Merrill, who is under arrest in this city on a perjury charge in connection with securing a marriage license under an assumed name, waived examination before Justice McCutcheon and was bound over to the next term of circuit court for trial. His bail was set at $2,000. Merrill married Mabel Grover of this city under the name of Brown, and she signed the complaint against him soon after his disappearance a few weeks ago.

LEXINGTON—Richard Mason, a well to do farmer who lived eight miles northwest of this place, went to the pasture to get a horse, but was gone so long that members of his family began an investigation and found him dead. A halter strap was wound around his hand and had formed a half hitch and it is supposed that the horse had run away and dragged Mason with it as his face was kicked so the features were not recognizable.

TRAVERSE CITY—Mrs. Witte of this city, who with her husband is charged with the death of her stepdaughter, took the stand in her own behalf. The last testimony to be taken will be that of physicians who will give a story of excellent treatment of the child. Mr. Witte was on the stand and admitted that he had paid little attention to the manner in which his wife had treated her stepdaughter.

Repentance.

The man who repents before he is found out is generally pretty sure that somebody has picked up the right clew.

LEELANAU COUNTY MOURNS

Probate Judge Steiner Garth Is Claimed by Death.

Omena, Mich., June 25. — Judge Steiner Garth, probate judge of Leelanau county, died at his home in Northport at the age of sixty-two. Judge Garth for many years served as a public servant in this vicinity. He was always returned to office whenever a candidate because of his honesty and devotion to his trust.

He was always a staunch Republican, but never allowed loyalty to his party to interfere with his duty to the people. A widow and nine children, besides all of Leelanau county, mourn his death.

UNIVERSITY HOLDS JUBILEE

Celebration to Last Five Days—Thousands of Alumni Come.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 25. — The University of Michigan began the celebration of its diamond jubilee. From now until next Thursday night Ann Arbor will practically forget its usual business routine in an effort to provide accommodation for the thousands of Michigan alumni who are pouring into the city for the event.

The feature of the first days' program was the baccalaureate address delivered to the graduation classes by Bishop Charles Sumner Burch, '75, of New York.

AUTO STRIKES OLD SOLDIER

Less Than Week Before He Saw Fatal Auto Accident.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 25.—Less than a week ago, Ichabod A. Taylor was a witness to the automobile accident that cost the life of Miss Gladys Gould and serious injury of her sister, Miss Ada.

Some days later he was struck, under similar circumstances, by an automobile driven by George S. Huff, a local real estate dealer, while crossing a down town street. Taylor, an old soldier, was badly hurt, but not fatally, unless complications arise, due to his age.

Spikes in Poles a Peril.

Bay City, Mich., June 25.—Because several companies that own poles carrying electric wires have placed these poles near to the sidewalks with iron pegs driven into them just the right height to catch small boys' eyes, it is probable that the council will be asked to pass an ordinance that will require the companies to pull the pegs

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN PROVES TO BE ALIVE

Estate Had Been Divided and Property Disposed of.

Sensation Created at Battle Creek by the News That W. J. Fairchild [illegible] ern State.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 24.—Somewhat of a sensation was created here by the news from Delta, Col., that Dr. W. J. Fairchild, former Battle Creek physician of prominence, mourned as dead for three years, has turned up alive. Fairchild conducted a health home here and was well known about the state.

In 1909, Fairchild went to the Gunnison river, near Delta, to take a swim. His clothing, his money, and his gold watch were found on the bank, and six months later he was declared legally dead, and his estate settled. Battle Creek attorneys helped to dispose of his property.

Now, Dr. Fairchild has returned from Alaska with a weird tale of loss of memory. He says that he was unconscious of his surroundings from the time he felt the cold splash of Gunnison river to when he came to his senses on a ship bound for Alaska. Even then, he could not remember his own name. Recently he suffered a fall, causing concussion of the brain, and when he came to, he regained his mental equilibrium. After a long search he traced Mrs. Fairchild and son to Denver, where the family has now been reunited.

FOR ANOTHER INTERURBAN

Chicago Men Apply to Michigan Railroad Commission.

Lansing, Mich., June 22.—Application was made to the state railroad commission by several Chicago capitalists for permission to incorporate the Michigan City, Lakeside and St. Joseph Electric Railway company with a capital stock of $750,000. Before any public service corporation is admitted by the secretary of state, it is necessary to get the approval of the railraod commission.

The commission has reached no decision as yet. It is set forth in the application that it is the intention of the promoters to build a line from St. Joseph, Mich., to Michigan City, Ind., following the lines of the recently abandoned Pere Marquette roadbed.

The Chicago stockholders are: G. C. Marsh, P. C. Cramer, Otto Egloff, Melvin R. Wadsworth and J. H. Macmillan.

MAN BLOWN 100 FEET

While Blasting Stumps, He Is Frightfully Hurt—Will Live.

Traverse City, Mich., June 22.—William Nelson, a prosperous farmer living seven miles southwest of the city, was injured by a dynamite explosion while blasting stumps on his farm. He was blown a hundred feet when the explosion let go. His left hand was blown off and his right hand and arm so terribly mangled that there is little hope of saving them. His face and body were terribly bruised in many places.

Mr. Nelson has a large family. None of those who were assisting him in the work were injured. Notwithstanding the severity of his injuries, he will recover.

Misunderstanding Inevitable.

Does anyone expect to go through life without being misunderstood? We are sometimes misunderstood—and hear of it; we are frequently misunderstood — and never know it.—Humphrey J. Desmond.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY STARTED

It Is Dedicated "to the Service of the People.

ROOSEVELT STANDARD BEARER

Governor Johnson, Medill McCormick, Senator Clapp, James R. Garfield and Other Notables in the Movement.

A new political party, dedicated—in the language of Colonel Roosevelt—"to the service of the people," was launched in Orchestra hall at Chicago by the majority of the uncontested delegates to the Republican national convention.

Colonel Roosevelt delivered the keynote speech. He said he would accept the candidacy for the presidency if at a delegate convention to be held later it was determined that he was the man to lead the fight. He urged that men, regardless of present party affiliations, who believed in the doctrines he enunciates shall join in the cause.

The Roosevelt delegates, steam rollered and otherwise, to the number of 200 or 300, and Roosevelt shouters, met in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel to inaugurate the formal temporary organization of the new party. Governor Johnson presided at the meeting. At his side were Medill McCormick, James R. Garfield, and Senator Clapp of Minnesota. Governor Stubbs of Kansas came in, but went out again before the meeting got down to business. Cecil Lyon of Texas had a front seat. Few if any of the other prominent Roosevelt men were present.

Governor Johnson announced that the progressives were about "to begin on the road that is to lead to political freedom." He said that in the committee to be formed no attempt could be made at this time to represent each state, but that the time for action had arrived and that they must get down to work.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Then James R. Garfield got up and told the massmeeting that the laws of the different states were at variance so far as the selection of electors were concerned, and that while in some states it would be easy to proceed with their campaign it might be very difficult in others.

"We must lay the foundations with care," he said, "and it is impossible now to outline definitely our plans. I would suggest that we give Governor Johnson the power to select seven men, who, after a conference with Colonel Roosevelt, will be able to present to the convention a plan of action and organization that will make it possible to carry on this great movement." He put the suggestion in the form of a motion which was carried, and Governor Johnson, raising his hand for silence, remarked with great solemnity: "Gentlemen, there is the birth of the new party."

PRISON FOR GOMPERS

John Mitchell and Frank Morrison Are Included.

At Washington Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison, and John Mitchell, the labor leaders, were held guilty of contempt of court by the supreme court of the District of Columbia in connection with a court's injunction in the Buck's stove and range boycott case. They were once sentenced to jail on a similar charge. The federatio nleaders will attempt to appeal again to the supreme court of the United States, which reversed their former conviction.

The court sentenced Gompers to one year, Morrison to six months and Mitchell to nine months, the same as on their previous conviction.

ALLEGAN — Thomas E. Streeter, who was the oldest surviving pioneer of Allegan, is dead at the age of eighty years. He came here when there was only one house in town and has not only seen the place grow into the beautiful city it is, but also helped by building many structures. A portion of the city was named for him. A widow and three children survive.

KALAMAZOO—The numerous Kalamazoo friends were notified of the death in Salt Lake City of Mrs. Chas. H. McGurrin, after a brief illness. Mr. and Mrs. McGurrin recently left Kalamazoo to reside in Salt Lake City and the news of her death created much surprise here.

When Buying, Buy Only the Best

H. L. Bloomquist, Esdaile, Wis., says his wife considers Foley's Honey and Tar Compound the best cough cure on the market. "She has tried various kinds but Foley's gives the best results of all."

Mrs. M. A. McLaughin, 512 Jay St., LaCross, Wis., writes that she suffered all kinds of pains in her back and hips on account of kidney trouble and rheumatism. "I got some of Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them for a few days there was a wonderful change in my case, for the pain entirely left my back and hips and I am thankful there is such a medicine as Foley Kidney Pills." For sale by all druggists.

NO MATTER how wise you are, there is bound to be somebody who thinks your ideas are foolish.

Help to Keep Down Expenses

Mrs. J. E. Henry, Akron, Mich., tells how she did so: "I was bothered with my kidneys and had to go nearly double. I tried a sample of Foley Kidney Pills and they did me so much good that I bought a bottle, and feel that they saved me a big doctor's bill.'

Mrs. Lela Love, wife of Wiley Love, a farmer living near Covena, Ga., says, "I have taken Foley Kidney Pills and find them to be all you claim for them. They gave me almost instant relief when my kidneys were sluggish and inactive. I can cheerfully recommend them to all sufferers from kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists.

Man Coughs and Breaks Ribs

After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him.

A few teaspoonsful ends a late cough, while persistent use routs obstinate coughs, expels stubborn colds or heals weak, sore lungs. "I feel sure its a Godsend to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton, Columbia, Mo., "for I believe I would have consumption today, if I had not used this great remedy." Its guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50 cent or $1.00 size at C. A. Wright & Son's.

GREATEST ATTACTION OF THE SEASON

With the elaborate looking and specially designed posters and lithographs of Sun Brothers' Big Shows seen on the local billboards and walls, announsing their appearance hereon July 10, there are many to revive the old contention that the tented show harms a city in what it takes away from it.

This paper considers that the loss is more than answered in what the show brings, to say nothing of the dollars left behind in the nature, of feedbills, license fees and other forms of paid claims, the volume of fun and delight bequeathed to the amusement loving elements of citizenship brings us in debt to the showman.

We despise the cynical growling that is provoked by the occasional invasion of folks who earn their living by exercising their talent of making the world happier.

The man who begruges the patriotism is himself a very poor pattern of the virtue that he preaches. The Sun Brothers' Shows are making their twentieth annual tour, and they are bringing this season the greatest amusement effort of their long managerial career. There is a greater collection of wild beasts, trained animal novelties and many star European and American performers.

The show gives two complete and unabridged performances daily, in fair or rainy weather, at 2 and 8 p. m. On the morning of show day and on the exhibition grounds, directly in front of the main entrance will be presented upon a magnificent scale a series of "thriller" free exhibitions.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Do you know that?

The Senior Class in Saline have the interest of their school at heart and have started a fund for purchasing a system of clocks and an automatic signal for the control of classes.

Those most interested in the work among teachers and pupils have long felt the need of this, and the Class of 1912 have started the fund, the Juniors also have pledged to raise a certain sum and the lecture course committee have given $75 so the system is assured. Good for Saline. Who next?

Manchester expects to be busy for the next two or three months with every available laboring man is on the new water works system. A large force of men is needed and the contractors are anxious to rush the work along and men and teams are in great demand. Manchester is coming to the front with improvements right along and is to be commended for its enterprise and push.

Brooklyn is alive to the fact that good roads are the best advertisement that a town can have, so they are busy drawing gravel etc. The farmers donated team work, the business men sent out shovelers and the township furnished the gravel. The work has progressed finely. "Good roads" should be the slogan all over the country.

A GROUCHE'S STORY

A couple of old grouches at the Metropolitan Club in Washington were one night speaking of an old friend who, upon his marriage, took up his residence in another city. One of the grouches had recently visited the old friend and, naturally, the other grouch wanted news of the Benedict.

"It is true that he is henpecked?" asked the second grouch

"I wouldn't say just that," grimly responded the first grouch, "but I'll tell you of a little incident in their household that came within my observation. The very first morning I spent with them, our old friend answered the letter-carrier's whistle. As he returned to us, in the breakfast-room, he carried a letter in his band. Turning to his wife, he said: "'A letter for me, dear. May I open it?'"

Obituary

MRS THOMAS G. MEAD

Elizabeth R. Sutton, the daughter of Asa W. and Sarah A. Sutton, was born November 22, 1854 at Sutton Mich. She was a student at Raisin Valley Seminary and after completing her course there, attended Earlham College for two years.

She was united in marriage to Thomas G. Mead, September 9, 1875. To them were born two children, a daughter Olive S., now Mrs. James Hagerman of Detroit, and a son Richard T. Mead of Tecumseh. The husband and two children survive,

Mrs. Mead was a life long resident of this vicinity and a birthright and active member of the Society of Friends. She was generous in sharing herself and her means for the Tecumseh meeting. She was a woman of strong qualities and a devoted wife and mother. Her Christian character good judgement, executive ability and unselfish thought for others, won for her many friends. In her quiet way, she rendered assistance to many, who by her death realize the loss of a valued friend,

Mrs. Mead quietly passed away on Saturday, June 22. The interment was at Raisin Valley Cemetery.

AN IDEAL BOY'S OUTING

The Lenawee County Camp for boys of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held at Wampler's Lake July 17th to 27th. Here is an opportunity for parents to give their boys an inexpensive outing of ten days, which is both instructive and enjoyable. The fact that a responsible leader is appointed for each group of six boys insures a proper supervision of every boy in camp. The program of the ten days is so arranged that there will be something doing all the time, so that there will no dull hours and no opportunity for the boy to long for something to do.

Wampler's Lake this year is a popular Y. M. C. A. camping ground. The Adrian Y. M. C. A. camped there and both Jackson and Toledo Associations are planning their outings at the same place. The cost for the entire ten days is five dollars. This includes the entire expense for the boy, except his railroad fare. A pamphlet fully explaining the camp location, what the boy should take nature and extent of the program and the method of application, has been printed and copies may be obtained from Secretary F. B. Fenn. The camp is limited to thirty boys so those planning to go must have their application in early.

A FINE MEMORIAL

The Class of 1912 of the University of Wisonsin numbering over 600, left a fine memorial to the University in the form of a student fund to be used for needy students.

Dr. L. W. Dowling a member of the Students Loan Committee, accepted the fund, Dr. Dowling is a former student of Adrian College and a Lenawee boy.

Dr. Dowling made a fine speech in receiving this gift commending the class on the form their memorial had assumed. He said "It is typical of the coming era of universal peace when a memorial is so made that it can reach into the unknown future and offer aid to those who may be in need, and at the same time commemorate the accomplishment of a great deed, or the fulfilling of a great ideal."

85TH ANNIVERSARY

RE-UNION

Mrs. L. E Barnes'
Class M. E. Church

Monday June 24, was the eighty-first birthday of Mrs. L. E. Barnes' and her class at the M. E. Sunday School held their annual re-union in the church.

For over 30 years it has been the custom to meet together once a year for a social visit with their teacher Mrs Helen M. Griswold, and after her death which occured four years ago, when Mrs. Barnes took her place the custom has been kept up, a short program and a picnic supper being the leading features of the occasion.

There were twenty-nine of the class present at this meeting with several invited guests.

A letter was read from the Rev. Wm Ward a former pastor of the church, written to Mrs. Barnes on the occasion of her birthday and was full of comfort and cheer, and as ray of sunshine in a cloudy day. As the pastor Rev. G. N. Kennedy could not be present, he sent a letter of regret, and a beautiful poem entitled "The Larger View" which was fully appreciated by teacher and class. A pleasant social hour was spent in recalling the days of long ago when many who today wear the crown of grey hair as the badge of age, were the young members of this class, endeared to all by its hallowed associations.

While years may mark their teacher old, yet in heart and conversation she is as young as any and the mutual prayers are that she may be spared to them for many years to come, and that these cherished reunions may never be dropped from their yearly routine.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

Press dispatches from Concord, N. H., report that the "State convention to propose amendment to the New Hampshire constitution has assembled and proceeded to organize. A number of questions have been suggested for the cosideration of the convention, but the only ones that have aroused public interest are the proposals for woman suffrage and the adoption of a short ballot to lessen the cost of election under the direct primary system now in force."

Since Ohio's constitutional convention has approved the woman suffrage proposal by a vote of 74 to 37, it is confidently expected that the Buckeye State will follow California into the equal suffrage column at the special election September 3. Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, State President, has secured a corp of the most able workers in the movement, and is in receipt of volunteer offers of assistance from Maine to California, including one from an American woman traveling in Europe.

"Wisconsin is doing for America," declares Hon. Frederick C. Howe, of New York, "what Germany is doing for Europe. It is an experiment station in politics, in social and industrial legislation, in the democratization of science and higher education. "The question of woman suffrage will be voted on in Wisconsin at the November election.

Nevada's next Legislature, which convenes in January, 1913, will have before it the final passage of a resolution to amend the State's constitution giving the right of suffrage to women and to submit the question to the voters for amendment or rejection. The bill has been approved by both houses of one Legislature, but the law requires that favorable action be taken by two successive Legislatures before submitting any question to the voters of the State. A vigorous campaign is being waged in support of the amendment under the able leadership of Miss Anne Martin, a graduate of the University of Nevada and daughter of a prominent banker.

ECHOES FROM THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

At 11:45 Tuesday morning a ripple of hand clapping and shouts from the crowd assembled in the convention hall at Baltimore, Md, announced that Cardinal Gibbons had arrived and would open the convention with prayer. Mayor Preston, of Baltimore, got a round of applause as he entered the hall. Chairman Mack called the convention to order promptly at 12:15 when the actual business of the day began.

William Jennings Bryan got into the hall and made his way to the stage without a ripple of applause. He shook hands with Cardinal Gibbons and then surveyed the audience with great interest.

California received a great ovation when her delegation marched in behind the first Clark banner. Its great white field topped with blue and fringed with gold told the crowd that Champ Clark was her candidate.

The "Houn' Dawg Special," composed of eleven Pullman cars, brought in the Missouri delegation and other friends of Champ Clark. Each delegate wore Champ's portrait.

It is claimed that the Emerson and Belvidere lobbies are all strewed with "Rs" that the northern delegates have dropped in recognition of the fact that they are in Dixie land.

W. J. Bryan will continue to write newspaper items for three days, and attend to his fight with the Parker faction at the same time.

Pennsylvanias delegates openly told the New York delegates, "Either you help us put over Wilson, or we will jam Bryan down your throats.

"Has anyone sought harmony more than I?" asked Mr. Bryan at Baltimore Tuesday. Thousands of "Nos" were shouted, but there were also many smiles at the idea of Bryan as a harmonizer, this style of harmony being off the same piece as that of Roosevelt's. This kind of harmony is getting out of fashion.

"We don't want too much harmony," said David H. Smith, of Kentucky." A little fighting will do us all good. Do you think I would have come up here if I had thought there was to be no scrap." Not much.

Dooley says, "Alther the prayer, but havin' no connection with it, Mr. Parker was nominated as timperory chairman.

Mr. Hennessay said, "What d'ye spose thim millyonaires ar-re doin' in Baltymore?" "Oh," says Mr. Dooley, "Lookin' afther their investments."

Oratory is stifled in Baltimore. The audience being keen in hectoring the speakers, it was much like the exchange of courtesies between baseball enthusiasts and an unpopular umpire.

There are no postmasters at the Baltimore Convention.

And now there are rival candidates for President. At the Federation Convention being held at San Francisco, Ohio as usual is greedy for the honor.

The Convention Hall at Baltimore has been called a fireless cooker.

Southern hospitality still flourishes, the Society side of the Baltimore Convention occupiel several columns in the local newspapers.

The Baltimore Convention was held in the same language as the one at Chicago.

Washington has proved a handy cyclone cellar to those who wish to dodge some of the political issue that arise.

Who will arise to the top in the Stew, in the Fireless Cooker remains to be seen.

Appreciation.

Rev. W. B. Harzog is in receipt of a letter from the Central University of Indiana, saying they had just received a letter from one of their students in Southern Brazil, asking if he might have the privilege of translating into the Portuguese language, the doctor's work on "Ancient Masters and Jesus." The gentleman is a native of the country, is a teacher and well educated and would be assisted by a brother who at present is writing the history of Brazil to be used in the public schools. They have also an American scholar who would lend his aid to the work. This is surely a compliment to the doctor and reflects very highly on his book.

TRADE BOOSTERS
Detroit In Line

About fifty of the prominent business men of Detroit, made a two days trip this week through the country, calling on their patrons and friends.

In time past these trips have been made by rail, but in this day of rapid transit, some sixteen automobiles were called into requisition and made the trip in fine style. An accident to one of the autos near Britton, was rather a damper on the pleasure of the day, the steering gear of the car went wrong and it went crashing into a ditch, demolishing two telephone poles. The car was ruined and several of the occupants more or less injured but none seriously. They were made comfortable by the doctors in Britton, and returned to Detroit on the Wabash road.

The autos drew into Tecumseh between 3 and 4 o'clock Tuesday, the "boosters" making short calls on the business men of the town, and distributing their Detroit banners with a free hand, departing on their journey about 5 o'clock.

Tree Surgery.

A representative of the Allen Forestry Co., of Rochester, are now working in town doing tree surgery work. They are at present working on the estates of Messrs. Dunn and Wood. Their presence at this time is due to their recommendation from the Michigan Agricultural College where they are students. Their work consists of treating trees that are decayed and in a run down condition. The work is done by contract or by the hour.

ARE YOU GUILTY
Do You Smoke too Much, Drink too Much, Eat too Much?

It takes a mighty good stomach to feel ready for a good breakfast the morning after the banquet or social session.

"What do you want for breakfast?" inquired Brown's good wife.

If you eat, drink or smoke or drink too much always remember that two little MI-O-NA stomach tablets taken just before you go to bed will destroy all poisonous gases and leave you with a sweet clean stomach in the morning.

For Indigestion and all stomach distress, MI-O-NA is the best prescription in the world, C. A. Wright & Son sell it on money back plan. Large box only 50 cents.

They Put an End to it

Chas. Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. For sale by all druggists.

Move on Now!

Says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now" says the big, harsh mineral pill to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

SECRETARY WILSON

Invited to Open the Michigan State Fair—Fine Training for Boys.

Detroit, June 26.—The Hon. James R. Wilson, secretary of the United States department of agriculture has received an invitation to open the Michigan State Fair Sept. 16. The directors feel that Secretary Wilson will be so much interested in this fair owing to the many innovations that have been brought forth that he will accept the invitation. The state fair of this year with the "Boys State Fair School" and with the "Miniature Model Farms" is putting forward ideas which if adopted all over the country by other state fairs will serve to stimulate agriculture.

To the eighty-three boys, one from each county of Michigan, who won in the examinations held recently there will be added fifty or more boys to the state fair school some of whom will pay their own expenses while others means will be devised to allow those boys who were runners up for the successful candidates, to gain that knowledge which they are so anxious to obtain.

Many of the Detroit school boys joined the colony at the Miniature Model farms now being tilled at the fair grounds and twenty-two young farmers are busily employed each day preparing the ground and planting late crops. A supervisor, N. P. Hull, master of he State Grange is supervising the work.

PLAN A PERPETUAL CALENDAR

All Nations to Unite in Working Out an Idea Long in Minds of Many.

A conference of all nations will be held next summer at Geneva, Switzerland, to discuss suggestions for an international perpetual calendar. At that time Leroy S. Boyd will present his calendar, which has 13 months of 28 days each, making a total of 364 days in the year. The 365th day is not included in any month, but will precede the first day of January and will be called New Year's day. A similar arrangement is made for leap years. The 366th day is not counted in any month, but follows the last day of December and is called Leap Year day. The additional month is called Solaris, and comes between June and July. As an illustration, the year 1916 is used, because, according to the present calendar the first day of that year will begin on Saturday, which would become New Year's day under the perpetual calendar. That would make the following day, Sunday, be known as Jan. 1, 1916. Every month would have the same number of days and every month and every week would begin on Sunday and end on Saturday. That would make the same date in each month fall on the same day of the week. Such a perpetual calendar would make it unnecessary to have a printed calendar for every month, because the days of each month are identical with those of the first month. One of the benefits expected to result from a perpetual calendar is that it will facilitate business calculations. Under the new system a month will mean exactly 28 days and not 30 or 31 days, as at present.

AGE OF ICEBERGS UNKNOWN

One of the Mysteries of the Sea There Is Little Probability of Being Solved.

The age of an iceberg is problematic. The berg that sank the Titanic may have been forming on the coast of Greenland when Columbus crossed the sea, or even before that. Then again it may have been reared by the elements since Peary's first expedition to the pole, but probably it antedated steamships by many years. In 1841, a great berg appeared off St. John's, N. F. Its pinnacle was fully 100 feet above the sea, and its base formed a glittering island in the middle of which, imbedded between two hills of ice, were two ships side by side. The masts were gone, but otherwise the upper works seemed to be intact. Scattered about the decks were various objects that might have been the frozen bodies of the crews. All were covered with snow. Several old sailors approached the berg as near as they dared to and scanned the ships through powerful glasses, but could not see any name or anything to indicate their nationality or business on the seas. There were no signs of life aboard them—nothing but the motionless masses under their white coverings. They were believed to be part of Sir John Franklin's expedition, and were seen at the mouth of the harbor almost stationary for several days. Then one morning the berg was gone, and the ultimate fate of the derelicts it carried is still one of the mysteries of the sea.

Must Do Without Almanac.

It looks as if the Chinese public in the south will be in a fix this year for the want of the usual almanac, which is an indispensable requisite in every household in order to distinguish between lucky and unlucky days and the like. The little kobos are sold by the hundreds of thousands and the trade got them ready as usual. To meet the situation new covers were put on with the new dates, while the inside remained the same as if there had been no change. The sale of these is strictly interdicted and nothing has been provided to take their place.—Pekin Daily News.

Fireman's Unique Wedding.

A fireman's wedding in a burnt-out church is certainly something of a novelty. Such a wedding has just taken place in the chancel of St. George's, Leicester, the greater part of the building having been destroyed by fire last year. It was the first fireman's wedding in Leicester, and the bridegroom's colleague, formed a guard of honor and arranged an arch of axes, etc., under which the bride and bridegroom passed out after the ceremony. Fireman Sturges, the bridegroom, was among those who fought the flames at St. George's last October.—London Tit-Bits.

Midway at the Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Be the Most Striking and Original of All

By HAMILTON M. WRIGHT.

FOLLOWING the battleship parade into San Francisco harbor—the opening event of the Panama-Pacific International exposition in 1915—there will be a program of events of world interest and importance in a succession of two months apart, interspersed with lesser events: Yacht and motorboat races of an international character for great trophies and cash prizes; aviation meets with the famous bird men of the world; Olympic games, in which the athletes of the world will take part; intercollegiate contests; automobile races, in which the holders of the world's records will participate in the automobiles of every nation; military maneuvers, in which the crack cavalry and infantry of this and other nations will participate upon an extended scale. The location of the exposition gives widest scope for the greatest international sports program in history, The auto races will pass into Golden Gate park before the huge concrete Coliseum seating 75,000 people. The military maneuvers and Olympic games will also be held in the Stadium. On San Francisco bay motorboats will vie for the world's records before the Harbor View site of the exposition. Noted yachtsmen will sail from Europe across the Atlantic to New York and then through the Panama canal to San Francisco. Personal invitations will be extended to the foreign rulers to attend the exposition if possible or to be represented by their diplomatic representatives in the royal yachts.

The concession and amusement features at the exposition will be among the most striking and original ever displayed. The "Midway" will be located at the Harbor View site of the exposition, the location of the night life of the exposition, and every possible feature that can be conceived as appropriate to an exposition will be shown. The Chinese residents of San Francisco have under way a project for a great Chinese concession which will be surrounded by a replica of the great wall of China, inclosing within its environs a series of Chinese communities and embracing every possible feature of interest in Chinese life from the manufacture of silks and ivory and woodcarving to sampans and junks floating on miniature waterways and portraying the life of the river dwellers around Canton. The concession will cost $1,000,000, and influential Chinese with American attorneys and engineers will shortly leave for the orient. From Nevada concessionaires will establish a riproaring mining camp, picturing the days of '49 and the bonanza era of the Comstock lode. Bret Harte's heroes, old Wells Fargo stage drivers, gamblers and gambling, bad men, prospectors, shootings and holdups will lend a realistic touch to the camp.

But the chief charm of Harbor View for most people will lie in its setting on San Francisco bay. As the crow flies the site extends along the water front for about a mile, but following the irregular contours of the shore the distance is more than that. Along the entire water's edge at Harbor View will be built an esplanade, or bund, along which visitors may walk, and an existing lagoon will be made the basis of a superb yacht harbor. Classic columns will rise from the water's edge, and near by will be the great exposition structures, the Palace of Liberal Arts, the educational building, the manufactures building and other edifices that house the more serious phases of the exposition, as distinguished from the amusement features. Harbor View lies as an amphitheater, with its sides the wooded slopes of the Presidio and the tenanted hills of San Francisco. It is near the most populous part of the city and is not more than twenty minutes' walk from Nob Hill, where lived the multimillionaires of California's early mining days. Looking down from the hills one can see all over the Harbor View site, while from Harbor View itself one may look out over the bay through the Golden Gate to the Pacific ocean. At night Harbor View will be brilliantly illuminated with incandescents, Finsen lights and waterfall illuminations. A chain of lights will stretch across the Golden Gate, the international fleet of battleships in the harbor will be illuminated, a huge commemorative structure towering 1,800 feet above the Golden Gate will be surmounted by a searchlight, and its outlines will be limned with incandescents. In fact, the contours of the exposition site will be visible for miles away.

The west will be on exhibition to those who view the Panama-Pacific International exposition in 1915. Under the stimulus of cheap railroad rates and convenient traffic arrangements thousands will have an opportunity that they could have in no other way to know their own country better. Side excursions to the Yosemite, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, the Yellowstone National park, the Redwoods of the north coast of California, the big trees of the Sierras on the approach to the Yosemite, the side trip to Alaska by the inland channel, will be parts of the delightful and educative features of a visit to the exposition.

Routing over any of the eight transcontinental roads that terminate upon the Pacific coast will enable the traveler to come by one route and return by another. Visits to the slopes of Puget sound and the great fast growing cities there, the Great Salt lake, the Santa Clara valley, with its prairies of flowers; the orange orchards stretching from the northern portion of the state to Los Angeles; Redlands, Riverside and San Diego and the journey through the Panama canal, either coming or returning, perhaps most wonderful of all, will be among the unusual opportunities of 1915, to see much of the world at a moderate expenditure and under conditions never before obtained. When the Panama canal is in operation ships will negotiate the journey between Atlantic and Pacific coast ports in less than three weeks' time.

ANN ARBOR—Paul Boyke had a narrow escape from death recently in jumping into the Huron river from the bridge on the Whitmore Lake road. He struck beside a submerged spile which scraped the entire length of his body, cutting and tearing the flesh badly. The shock stunned him for a time, and when he did not come to the surface his companions dove for him. He will recover.

BATTLE CREEK—While much excited in handling a new machine, Orville Green ran down Mrs. William Schroeder, wife of a prominent merchant, on Main street. She was picked up and carried into a store, where medical aid was summoned. It is feared that she sustained severe internal injuries. The driver of the machine was arrested pending the outcome of her injuries.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough. No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. WM. DORN, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 157 pounds."

A newly elected Australian labor M. P. returns his occupation as "tailor's cutter"—an avocation rarely represented in parliament. Some time ago, says the London Chronicle, Australia had a remarkably eloquent and witty tailor, who became not only an M. P., but a minister of the crown. To him a new governar made this maladroit remark: "I hear, Mr. Jones, you were once a tailor?" "Yes, my lord, I was." "And how are you engaged now?" "Taking your excellency's measure."

Leap-frog, hop-scotch, foot ball, and many other games need have no terrors for the mother who has bought her son Wunderhose. Let him scuffle, slide, jump all over the play ground—no strain, no holes, no ravel. These wonderful stockings are made from Wunderyarn; dyed with Wunderdye. Wunderyarns are spun from the largest and toughest cotton fibre known. They are twisted and combed until they have the strength of rope, with the "feel" of silk. Only double threads of Wunderyarn—no single ones whatever—are used in Wunderhose. The heels, toes and knees are reinforced, and remember the strength of re-inforcing yarn does not depend on the thickness. That is one of the reasons why the heels and toes of Wunderhose are [illegible] and pliable and yet so strong. In Wunderhose families the mother helps her children with [illegible] other mothers are slaving with the darning needles.

Baltimore, July 1.—When the Democratic national convention reconvened at 11 o'clock today after the over-Sunday adjournment practically no progress had been made toward straightening out the tangle which twenty-six ballots had failed to unravel.

The deadlock confronting the convention when it met again this forenoon was the most remarkable in the history of modern politics. No one in the convention today was able to recall another instance in which it had required anything like the number of ballots to nominate that so far had been taken without result.

Having failed to nominate with the week-end, it was not anticipated the delegates would hurry to a decision today and the fight seemed likely to be prolonged for several days. In fact there was strong talk of adjourning the convention for thirty days. The Clark people were confident that enough of their delegates would remain steadfast to constitute the necessary one-third to prevent a nomination. Many of the delegates were hopeful that an early decision might be reached, but the two leading candidates, when the convention met today, were so far short of the 725 1-3 votes necessary to nominate that the problem ahead seemed a most difficult one.

The situation into which the convention had deadlocked itself was productive of nothing more than a bedlam of opinions. Leaders who are usually to be relied upon for information as to the real situation, admitted that they were unable to make even a sensible guess. The complexity of the situation was best illustrated by the interviews secured from the captains of the various forces.

CHARLES F. MURPHY

Senator O'Gorman, of New York, said: "I believe that Woodrow Wilson will be nominated. The trend is toward Governor Wilson. The people seem to want him, and the logic of the situation points toward his nomination."

Senator Kern, of Indiana, admitted that he was puzzled about who would eventually be named, but he added: "There will be an agreement within three days." He was asked if the agreement would be secured by the withdrawal of both Clark and Wilson, but he didn't want to admit that.

On the other hand, the principal leaders of the Clark, Wilson and Underwood forces agreed in only one thing—that these candidates would not get out of the race.

Senator Stone, of Missouri, in answer to whether Speaker Clark would withdraw with Governor Wilson said: "Champ Clark will never quit. We are ready to battle until election day if necessary. Mr. Murphy says he will stand by Clark to the end, and we see no reason to doubt Mr. Murphy's good faith."

Ex-Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, agreed with Senator Stone. "They are trying to sneak the nomination," he said, "away from a man that the majority of Democrats have chosen for a leader, and we won't submit to it."

Tom Taggart, of Indiana, had this to say: "I look for an early settlement. If the candidates and leaders won't get down to business the delegates will take the job out of their hands. I consider that Governor Harmon is in a strong position.

"Will it be Wilson and Marshall?" Taggart was asked. "It will be Marshall and Wilson," said the Indiana boss.

Governor Gilchrist, of Florida, one of the Underwood leaders, was confident that Underwood would eventually be named.

LONG DEADLOCK RECALLS OTHERS

Baltimore Tie-up Like Struggles of Earlier Days.

SESSIONS OF 1852 AND 1880

Famous Political Sessions Which Made the Nomination of Pierce and Garfield Historical for Number of Ballots Cast.

Baltimore, July 1. — The now famous deadlock of the Democrats has recalled to old-time politicians a similar convention, held in this same city in 1852, when the greatest number of ballots ever polled in a national convention were cast before Franklin Pierce was named to lead the Democrats in the presidential campaign, by a vote of 282. The total number of votes in the convention was 288, and forty-nine ballots were polled.

The convention opened June 1, and remained in session until June 6. General Lewis Cass of Michigan, who had been the party nominee four years before, led on the first ballot with 116 votes, while approimately 188 were necessary to a choice. On the thirty-fifth ballot, Virginia gave fifteen votes to Pierce, until then an unknown factor.

On the thirty-sixth ballot Mr. Pierce gained fifteen votes and then followed on in successive ballots with slow and nominal gains. Finally on the forty-eighth ballot Cass had 73, William L. Marcy 90 and Pierce, 55, with several other candidates dividing the remaining votes.

When the forty-ninth ballot was begun, the delegates "stampeded" to Pierce and he received 282 votes to 6 for all the others.

Republican Convention Record.

The Republican party made its convention record at Chicago in 1880 when it selected James A. Garfield as its nominee. The convention assembled in June, but spent three days in preliminaries, and deciding cases of contested delegates. When the vote on candidates was finally reached General Grant, seeking a third nomination, led with 306 votes, while James G. Blaine ran second with 284, several other candidates dividing the remaining votes, with 378 votes necessary to a choice. Finally the convention adjourned for the day after polling twenty-eight ballots without effecting a choice.

The following morning the twenty-ninth ballot showed but little change. On the thirty-fourth ballot, however, James A. Garfield, having received one vote on the second ballot of the day before, was given seventeen votes. Garefild's showing aottracted attention and on the thirty-fifth ballot changes in the Blaine forces gave him 50 votes. On the next ballot he was given 399 votes and the nomination.

The present convention in Baltimore is the most protracted which the party has held since 1868, when twenty-two ballots were necessary to effect the nomination of Horatio Seymour at New York.

Baltimore's Many Ballots.

The Democratic national convention reassembled at 1:07 p. m. Saturday to resume balloting on a candidate for the presidency. Twelve ballots had been taken during the previous early morning and all night sessions without result.

It was the hottest day of the week and the delegates straggled into the hall shedding coats and collars.

Mr. Bryan reiterated and intensified his earlier statement that no Democrat could afford to accept the nomination if New York's vote is necessary to give him a two-thirds majority. He asserted again his [illegible] position of a single term for president. When asked: "Do you want the nomination now?" he looked pityingly at his questioner and made no reply.

Thomas Taggart said that Indiana would go to Wilson when the break came, but that the delegation was pledged to Marshall until released by him.

With little delay the thirteenth ballot was taken and resulted: Clark, 554½; Wilson, 356; Underwood, 115½; Marshall 30; Harmon, 29; Foss, 2; Bryan, 1.

After the fourteenth ballot had been taken Mr. Bryan arose and asked permission to explain his vote. There were loud cries of "No," but also of "Bryan, Bryan!"

Permission was granted, Mr. Sulzer in the chair. Mr. Bryan said, reading from a written statement:

"Nebraska voting Clark 13, Wilson 3, serves notice on the convention that some Nebraska delegates will not vote for any man whose nomination depends upon the vote of New York. I shall withhold my vote for Mr. Clark as long as New York's vote is recorded for him. I will take the same position with regard to any other man."

There was a tremendous uproar in the convention as Mr. Bryan concluded. McCorkle of West Virginia asked whether Bryan would support the nominee if named with the aid of New York votes. Bryan said there was a distinction as between being a party to a nomination and refusing to support the nominee.

Senator Stone let it be known that he had sent telegrams to Harmon, Underwood, Marshall and Wilson saying a majority had voted for Clark and asked them in the interest of harmony to withdraw their candidacies.

The fourteenth and fifteenth ballots were taken and showed very little change, Clark losing 4 and Wilson gaining 6 votes over the thirteenth ballot. Matters began to look as if ballot.

After the announcement of the twenty-sixth vote Representative Palmer declared that the delegates had reached the limit of physical endurance, that it was not desirable that the convention work on Sunday and moved adjournment until Monday. Accordingly, the convention adjourned at 11:07 until 11 o'clock today.

TAFTS ARE TO MIGRATE

Will Open Their Summer Home at Beverly, Mass.

President and Mrs. Taft Attending Sanferfest in Philadelphia This Evening.

Washington, July 1.—The president and Mrs. Taft left at 3 o'clock this afternoon for Philadelphia where they will arrive at 6 o'clock. They will be met by a committee of the Saengerbund and by President Tilden of the Union League club. They will be driven to Union League club house, where a private informal dinner will be given them by President Tilden.

They will then be driven to the Saengerfest. The president and Mrs. Taft will leave Philadelphia at 12:15, arriving in Washington shortly after 3 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Robert and Miss Helen Taft will arrive from Cincinnati Wednesday morning and the president and his family will leave that night for Beverly, Mass., to open their summer home. The president will return to Washington after installing his family in their summer home.

Fight May Result Fatally.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 1.—John McCarthy lies near death as the result of injuries received while fighting with Adam Wenzel. During the dispute over the treatment of a horse, McCarthy was pushed over, his head striking the curbing. His skull was fractured. Wenzel is in jail.

SUFFRAGETTES BREAK WINDOWS

Postoffices All Over Great Britain Are Attacked.

WOMAN SHAKES THE PREMIER

While at a Reception Mr. Asquith Has an Unpleasatn Experience with a Suffragette, Who Is Finally Thrown Out.

London, July 1. — A campaign of destruction in postoffices throughout the country was begun by suffragettes. The women smashed windows in the central postoffice at Manchester and also those of the Reform club.

Some of the branch offices in London, Hitchin and Letchworth were similarly raided.

Besides those, the postoffices at Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Derby, Ilkeston, Ludlow and Southend were damaged by suffragette window-smashing flying columns.

Several women were arrested. At police stations they announced their action was the beginning of a plan to smash the windows of every postoffice in England.

Premier Asquith was attacked again last evening while attending a reception given by Lady Glenconner. A woman caught him by the lapels of his coat and shook him until the premier was breathless.

Then two men among the guests caught Mr. Asquith's assailant and hurled her down stairs. A sleeve was torn off of the suffragette's dress, her combs fell out of her hair, her gold watch was broken, and she lost a diamond brooch.

STUNNED AS HE DIVES

Tecumseh Young Man Drowned While Bathing.

Tecumseh, Mich., July 1.—Will Leeders was drowned in the Globe mill pond. In company with Ernest Howard, a fellow employe in the fence factory, he went to the pond for a swim. Leeders dived from the bridge over the waste weir into about fifteen feet of water and struck his head on a plank beneath the surface which stunned him. He came to the top, but sank again.

His companion tried to save him, but could not get him. He ran for help and Elmer Hooten dived and brought him ashore. Dr. Hardy was at once summoned, but was unable to resuscitate him. Leeders came here from Hamler, O., last winter, was twenty-one years old, and unmarried. He has no relatives in Tecumseh.

WANDERS TO LAKE; DROWNS

Mrs. Lovejoy Is Victim of Accident at Otter Lake Sanitarium.

Flint, Mich., July 1.—Mrs. William Lovejoy, a resident of this city, who has been taking treatments for some time at the Otter Lake sanitarium, was drowned in the lake near the institution. Mrs. Lovejoy got the key to her room from the nurse, unlocked the door and wandered out.

Her body was found some time later in six feet of water, about 100 feet from shore Mrs. Lovejoy was forty-five years old.

One Drowned; Another Nearly.

Cheboygan, Mich., July 1.—Steven Yon, aged eleven years, son of Octave Yon, was drowned while swimming in the Cheboygan river. His companion, Ernest Scott, aged sixteen, attempted to rescue him, but was grappled by Yon and pulled under. Scott was pulled out and restored after half an

THREE CONSPICUOUS FIGURES

Murphy, Rryan and Belmont Objects of All Eyes at Baltimore.

Baltimore, July 1. — Since W. J. Bryan began his bombardment of Charles F. Murphy, Thomas F. Ryan and August Belmont, they have been among the most conspicuous figures in the convention, whether they have liked it or not.

Many of the delegates from the west and south, wanting to make sure that they could get a close view of Mr. Ryan and Mr. Belmont, made excursions to the Virginia and New York delegations. Mr. Ryan was in his seat when a Texan walked up to him. "Say," said the Texan, to the first Virginian he came to, "point out Thomas F. Ryan, will you?" "Right here," said Mr. Ryan, raising his hand and smiling. The Texan ambled off. When he got back to his delegation he said: "I just spoke to this fellow Ryan and there ain't no horns on him."

A Missourian tackled a New York man who has a reputation for jesting and asked that August Belmont and Perry be pointed out. It so happened at the time the Belmonts were not in their seats. "See that man over there," said the New Yorker, pointing to John H. McCooey of Brooklyn, "that's August Belmont. The man over there," pointing to Secretary of State Edward Lazinsky, that's Perry Belmont."

BODY HANGS HOUR IN AIR

Chicago Man Electrocuted on T. H., I. & E. Near Brazil.

Brazil, Ind., July 1.—Louise Segale, twenty-two, an electrician, whose home is in Chicago, was electrocuted here by 2,200 volts on wires of the T. H., I & E. east of Brazil.

He hung suspended by one arm for some time before the power could be turned off and the body lowered with ropes.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs colds or any bronchial affection its unequaled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

What Makes A Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and tired, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart, for making such a good medicine." Only 50c. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son's.

HE WENT OVER THE WABASH

Story of Stuyvesant Fish's Futile Effort to Teach a Switchman to Be Polite.

Elmer T. Stevens of Charles H. Stevens & Bros. told the following story at the Association of Commerce luncheon at the La Salle hotel in Chicago:

"When Stuyvesant Fish was president of the Illinois Central railroad, he was sitting in his office one morning with the door closed, looking over some reports. The door was suddenly opened and in came an Irishman with his hat on his head and his pipe in his mouth, and, walking up to Mr. Fish, he said: "I want a pass to St. Louis."

"President Fish, somewhat surprised, looked up and said, 'Who are you?'

"The man replied, 'I am Pat Casey, one of your switchmen.'

"President Fish, thinking it was a good chance to teach the man a little lesson in etiquette, said: 'Now, Pat, I am not going to say that I will refuse your request, but there are certain forms that a man should observe in asking a favor. You should knock at the door before you come in, and when I say "Come in," you should enter, and, taking off your hat, and removing your pipe from your mouth, you should say, "Are you President Fish?" I would say, "I am. Who are you?" Then you should say, "I am Pat Casey, one of your switchmen." Then I would say, "What can I do for you?" Then you would tell me, and the matter would be settled. Now, you go out and come in again in a little while and see if you can do better.'

"So the switchman went out, closing the door. About two hours later there was a knock on the door and President Fish said, 'Come in.' In came Pat Casey, with his hat off and his pipe out of his mouth. Pat said, 'Good mornin', are you President Fish of the Illinois Central?' President Fish said, 'I am. Who are you?' 'I am Pat Casey, one of your switchmen.' 'Well, Mr. Casey, what can I do for you?' 'You can go to h——. I got a pass over the Wabash.'"

WITTY, AND ACTUAL TRUTH

But Probably Explanation of Washingtonian Failed to Satisfy Foreigner.

There is a certain public man in Washington long noted for his quaint wit. One day last winter, when the sidewalks were quite slippery by reason of a fall of sleet that morning, this official and his wife were proceeding down a thoroughfare carefully picking their way. Just ahead of them was a little foreigner, a member of one of the legations, who was having just as much difficulty as they in keeping on his feet. Finally the little fellow slipped and fell, but not with sufficient force to injure him. His dignity, however, received a frightful shock, for he sprawled over the pavement in the most ludicrous way.

The lady could not restrain a smile, perceiving which the irate foreigner, as soon as he had picked himself up, rushed forward and presented the official with his card.

The recipient looked the card over very carefully. "Beg pardon," said he, "but why am I thus favored?"

"Your ladee here," raged the foreigner, "she laugh at me as I fall! I, sir, I demand the satisfaction!"

The American gently handed back the card. "I'd like to oblige you, my dear sir," said he, "but I think you've addressed the wrong party. I would suggest that you go to this lady's brother and demand of him the satisfaction you seek. She is no blood relative of mine!"

PENNY WISE, POUND FOOLISH

Contractor Saved His Nickel, but Was Out Something on the Transaction.

How to save a nickel and lose a thousand dollars is a lesson learned by a Bronx contractor. He was at the Fordham station of the Third avenue elevated and he wanted to go to West Farms, at the end of the Lenox subway, to submit a bid on a contract. The ordinary way to make such a trip would be to pay two car fares, but this careful contractor saw a way to complete the journey for a single fare, but he says he will never do it again.

He bought an elevated ticket and rode down town to Third avenue and One Hundred and Forty-ninth street, where he got a transfer to the downtown subway train. He intended to ride down to the next station, Mott avenue, get off there and cross to the uptown side and ride back to his destination, thus saving five cents. Unfortunately that day there was an accident in the subway, the trains were blocked for nearly an hour and he was in a train that was stalled half way between two stations. When he finally did arrive at the office he found all the bids had been opened and the contract awarded. His bid, however, was lower than the one accepted, yet it was for a sum sufficiently large to have shown him a cool profit of $1,000.

Then he went out and spent about $20 in drinks to drown his sorrow.—New York Times.

AMUSEMENTS

What is, perhaps, the finest thing ever seen in motion pictures is "THE LADY OF THE LAKE" which will be shown at the Opera House as a special feature Thursday July 4th. This extraordinary production is taken from Sir Walter Scott's poem of "The Lady of the Lake" and produced by the Vitagraph Company which insures the best of photography and presented with a cast of unusal excellence amid the wildest and most beautiful scenery imaginable. In short a magnificent animated conception of Sir Walter Scott's world famous poem correctly costumed and and closely following the story.

The management has booked this big feature at a heavy additional expence, the rental alone being $10.00 for the day, but it is worth it. You will say so too after seeing it. It is a picture worth coming miles to see. Over 3000 feet of film and every foot a feature.

GAVE OF SURPLUS WEALTH

Rich Men in Other Days Lavish in Their Donations to Their Favorite Cities.

"Many a man who has inherited millions," once said Frederic Harrison, "is gnawed with envy as he watches a practical man turning an honest penny. How he would like to earn an honest penny! He never did; he never will; and he feels like a dyspeptic invalid watching a hearty beggar enjoying a bone or a crust. Many a rich man is capable of better things; but he does not know how to begin!" The ancient law suggests a restoration of the liturgies, the public services of rich men as they were organized in the model Greek republics. "At Athens the liturgies were legal and constitutional offices imposed periodically and according to a regular order by each local community on citizens rated as having capital of more than a given amount. . . . It always remained a public office, a duty to be filled by taste, skill, personal effort and public spirit. Rich men contended for the office. The chief ambition of a rich man came to be that of making splendid gifts to his fellow citizens, and theaters, stadiums, colonnades, aqueducts, gardens, libraries, museums, pictures, statues—all were showered upon favorite cities by wealthy men who possessed or coveted the name of citizen." A few multimillionaires in our American republic have made public benefactions. May their tribe increase! The gift of a public hospital or a school building is always in order.—The Christian Herald.

IMPROVEMENTS IN ONE OF OUR VILLAGE PARKS.

Work on the Standpipe Park is going on steadily. The council has granted the lighting and tables and seats are being made and placed. The trees have been trimmed and the park will be in readiness for Fourth of July family picnics. It will be a great improvement to the east end of town as well as benefiting all of Tecumseh. The Civic Improvement Society has begun this good work and we hope they may be able to continue from time to time, and that Tecumseh may become noted for its fine parks. It seems that this park is deserving of the name of Peter R. Adams who donated it to the village.

FINDS POISON IN ANOTHER

Analyst Reports on First Husband of Mrs. Louise Lindloff.

Chicago, July 1.—The results of an autopsy held on the body of Julius Graunke, first husband of Mrs. Louise G. Lindloff, alleged poisoner, under arrest in Chicago, were announced in Milwaukee by Dean Richard W. Sumner of Marquette university.

The analysis found arsenic in large quantities in the liver and kidneys.

District Attorney Zabel of Milwaukee county announced that an inquest will be held soon and that in all probability a warrant will be issued charging Mrs. Lindloff with murder.

Sensations to be sprung were prepared in Chicago by Assistant State's Attorney Claude F. Smith and Police Captain Baer.

Miles, Long and Short.

Considering the size of Switzerland one might expect a mile to be about as far as one could throw a ball, but the hardy mountaineers think 9,153 yards the proper thing, even when, as it generally is, it is very much up hill. The Swiss is the longest mile of all, being followed by the Vienna post mile of 8,296 yards.

The Flemish mile is 6,869 yards, the Prussian 8,237 yards, and in Denmark they walk 8,244 yards and call it a stroll of a mile. The Arabs generally ride good horses and call 2,143 yards a mile, while the Turks are satisfied with 1,826 yards, and the Italians shorten the distance of a mile to 1,766 yards; just six yards more than the American has in mind when the agent waves his hand and blandly remarks, "About a mile."

Gathered in Twelve-Pound Trout.

What is said to be the largest trout caught in Montana streams was received from J. W. Scott, proprietor of the hotel at Armstead. It weighed 13 pounds, 8 ounces. From tip of tail to mouth it measured nearly three feet in length, a yardstick extending an inch at each end when laid beside the catch. It was 16 inches around the fish, measuring over the back fins.

The fish was dressed and, when reweighed in Butte tipped the scales at 13 pounds.—Anaconda Standard.

DROWNED.

William Leeders, Aged 22 Years, Meets Death in the Globe Mill Pond Saturday, June 29th, About 6 O'clock P. M.

LEAVES FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHER, SISTER AND SWEETHEART.

Tecumseh was a scene of excitement Saturday evening when it was reported that William Leeders was drowned in the Globe Mill Pond about 6 o'clock.

Mr. Leeders and his friend, Ernest Howard, went down for a swim at the close of their day's work They both dived from the wasteweir and, coming up, Mr. Howard noticed that his comrade was struggling in the water. He immediately went to his assistance and grabbed him by his clothing. Both of them went down, but came up again, when Leeders seized him by the foot and again they sank. By this time Howard's strength was spent and he had to save himself.

There were a number of young children on the bank, but they did not sense the danger and failed to call help. Later they sent for Elmer Hooten, an expert swimmer, who found the body in about twenty feet of water. Dr. Hardy was called and did everything possible to resuscitate the body, but life was extinct. The remains were taken to the home of H. J. Stahl to await the arrival of relatives. His father, Chris Leeders, and a brother, of Hamler, Ohio, and his brother-in-law, E. J. Miller, of Napoleon, O., came Sunday morning and the body was taken Monday morning on the 10:40 train to his home in Hamler for burial.

There are several theories in regard to the cause of his death, the one most plausible being that in diving he struck his head on the coffer-dam which stunned or dazed him as there were two bruises, one on the forehead and one on the temple. Another theory is that he was over heated and the plunge in the cold water effected the action of the heart.

The relatives stated that it was a great shock to them all when they received the telegram announcing his death, but thought it was an accident in the factory, or an attack of appendicitis, as he has had several attacks in the past year or two.

He came here last fall to live with his favorite sister, Mrs. E. J. Miller, and worked in the Anthony fence factory. When Mr. and Mrs. Miller left about a month ago for Napoleon, he remained behind.

His engagement to a young lady of Tecumseh was recently announced and he had everthing bright in life to look forward to and his death at the early age of 22 years seems sad indeed.

AGAIN THE FATAL REVOLVER.

Merlin Mattis, while Handling a Revolver, Accidentally Shot Himself, Dying in about Six Hours, Aged 14 Years.

What proved to be a fatal accident occurred Sunday afternoon when a company of young boys, who had been shooting turtles in the Red Mill pond, stopped to remove the shells from their revolvers. The group consisted of Merlin Mattis, two Peotter brothers and Herbert Gove.

Merlin Mattis evidently was looking into his revolver when, in some unforseen way, it was discharged. The ball entered the pupil of his right eye and came out back of the left ear. The revolver was 32-caliber. The boys at this time were on the railroad crossing in Brownville near the residence of Ed Hand. He was taken to Mr. Hand's home and Dr. Hardy was called who rendered all the assistance possible, but death came to relieve the boy's sufferings Sunday evening at 11 o'clock. He was unconscious from the time of the accident and never rallied.

He was 14 years old and a pupil in the fifth grade in Miss Brown's room, and was considered a very bright scholar. The blow was a great shock to his parents, his mother going from one fainting spell to another. A trained nurse, Miss Jennie Gillespie, was called to attend her.

The father, mother and one little sister are left to mourn the sudden taking away of their loved one. The funeral will be held at the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

PTOMAINE POISONING.

Dr. Hardy was called Sunday to attend a case of ptomaine poisoning, the patient being one of a company who were making a trip from Indianapolis in several high grade runabouts. It is thought that while on the boat coming to Detroit, they ate something that caused the trouble as some of the party were taken ill in Detroit. The doctor made the patient comfortable and later she was able to resume her journey.

Conkey's Lice Powder kills body lice, not merely scaring, chasing or stunning. Itching, scratching, lousy hens can't make profit for you Get a 25c pkg. (15 oz.) or a 50c pkg. (48 oz.) Your hens will pay for it. We sell on guarantee—money back if your fowls aren't rid of body lice after you try the Conkey way.

CONKEY'S CHOLERA CURE

A fowl will die of cholera quickly, and the dread disease will spread with great rapidity to the rest of the flock. High fever causes burning thirst and loss of appetite. CONKEY'S CHOLERA CURE is the Only Remedy Given in the Drinking Water. It is tasteless and wonderfully cooling to the inflamed membranes. Reduces fever and kills germs. For cholera, indigestion, bowel trouble, dysentery, constipation, etc., it has no equal. Cures old or young birds. One 50c pkg. makes gallons of medicine. Try it.

BIGGER POULTRY PROFITS

It's no disgrace if your fowls get lousy—but it is a shame to let them STAY LOUSY! Don't fool with home-made stuff, or waste time trying unknown dopes. GET QUICK AND SURE RESULTS by using CONKEY'S LICE POWDER. 25 cents buys a good, liberal-sized box. It is positive death to lice, ticks, etc. Equally effective for lice on setting hens and young chicks. GETS THEM ALL! Cleans up the coop! Absolutely harmless to even the smallest chick. Easy to apply and does the business or your money back. Get a package today.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remeber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higble, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

HEADED OFF BY DIPLOMACY

Kitchener's Smooth Way of Keeping Egyptians From Mixing In Turco-Italian War.

Egypt is actually a Turkish province, although the British control is so complete and tenacious that the sovereignty of Turkey is of the most shadowy kind. None the less Turkey has the nominal right to order the Egyptian army to cross the frontier into Tripoli and to help in the discomfiture of the Italian invaders. But although Turkey has wisely refrained from issuing orders that would not be obeyed there has been a desire on the part of many Egyptian officers to volunteer in her cause, and these officers have asked Lord Kitchener's permission to absent themselves from their posts for that purpose. Lord Kitchener's reply, quoted in the Fortnightly Review, shows a certain sardonic humor that must be classified among the finer weapons of diplomacy. He says he would gladly give the desired permission, but he fears that the upward pressure in the junior ranks of the Egyptian army would compel him to place the absentees on the retired list, which would be a grievous return for patriotic valor. So he advises them to curb their heroic ambitions, so natural to Egyptians, and stay at home. To a number of nomad Bedouins, who made similar applications Lord Kitchener expressed his surprise that they should wish to fight at all. Not having regarded them in the light of warriors, he had never included them in the Egyptian conscription, an error that should be henceforth corrected in view of their martial inclinations. Thereupon the Bedouins decided that there was no place like home.

THOUGHT SHE DESERVED AID

Mother of Six Fine Babies Glad to Receive Advice of State Board.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, some time ago conceived the idea of sending to the mother of every baby reported at the end of every month some educational material from the state board office, together with a polite note wishing the mother and child well, and offering to help the mother in any way the board might do so to enable the baby to be started right in its life battle. In reply to one of the communications, Dr. Hurty a few days ago received the following letter:

"I would like to inquire as to the nature of the help you are prepared to give to the mother of six fine, healthy youngsters. I doubtless shall wish advice, as sixty dollars a month doesn't admit of extensive fees to a physician, and I feel that as a woman who has made the struggle I have to give my offspring the mental, physical and moral status which is theirs I should have all the aid possible.

"There is not an old soldier, no matter how bravely he has fought, so deserving as a faithful wife and mother. I thank you very much for your kind offer."—Indianapolis News.

Dragon Not China's Emblem.

As shown in its prompt repudiation by the republic of China, the dragon was not the emblem of China; it was the emblem of the late imperial family of Manchus. This Oriental dragon is one of the powers of the air, although wingless; one of the forces of nature which the Taoist religion has defied. The dragon kings dwell partly in water and partly on land; their shrines are for that reason erected on river banks. The germ of the dragon idea in the primitive races inheres in some persistent memory of the greater lizards, such as the crocodile of the warmer waters. The Chinese dragon being without wings is accordingly closer to type than is the winged dragon of the mythology of our more remote and northern race. As late as the "Historia animalium" of Conrad Gesner (1564) science believed that one had but to travel far enough, say to the more remote defiles of the Alps, and he would surely encounter dragons.

SNAKE CHARMERS OF OLD

Homer and Virgil Mention Them and Ancient Tablets Show the Tamed Serpents.

Snake taming is mentioned by Virgil, and Homer refers to the snake owned and specially favored by Ajax. That the Macedonians were on intimate terms with reptiles is shown by tablets bearing images of women feeding serpents. Other tablets show serpents twining around columns in the temple of Hercules, where they were placed by people in token of gratitude to the god.

The chariots of Minerva and Ceres were drawn by snakes and snakes guarded the altars of many of the gods. On a fragment of a Pompeiian fresco a serpent is depicted coiled in a tree on a stretcher borne by two slaves.

The guardian serpent was the good fairy of the antique home and the watchful guard of the family honor. Even at the present time the Mexican peasants flock to Cocula from all the country round about to keep the feast day of St. Dominic, the saint who conferred on man the power to tame serpents. On St. Dominic's day snake-charmers appear in Cocula bearing adders and other reptiles. In Umbria the snake is supposed to possess the power of working miracles.—Harper's Weekly.

PAID WELL FOR HIS BOAST

Probably In the Future Dubbleigh Will First Find Out Identity of His Listener.

"Thet's a derned fine-lookin' car o' yourn, mister," said the old man with a chin whisker, as he inspected Dubbleigh's motor standing in front of the Eagle House at Togus.

"You bet it is," said Dubbleigh. "I came over here from Watkins Corners this morning in just fifty-five minutes. Going some, eh?"

"Ya-as," said the old gentleman, stroking his whisker thoughtfully. "Kin ye prove it?"

"I have witnesses in my guests," said Dubbleigh.

"Wal-al, I'll take yer word for it," said the stranger. "Jest fork over twenty-five, and we'll call it square. I'm Jestice o' the Peace raound here, and it'll save time to settle this here vi'lation right now."—Harper's Weekly.

Herodotus a Muckraker.

Such as believe the tales of the Egyptians credible are free to accept them for history. For my own part, I propose to myself throughout my whole work faithfully to record the traditions of the several nations. The Egyptians maintain that Ceres and Bacchus preside in the realms below. They were also the first to broach the opinion that the soul of man is immortal, and that when the body dies it enters into the form of an animal which is born at the moment, thence passing on from one animal into another until it has circled through the forms of all the creatures which tenant the earth, the water and the air; after which it enters again a human frame, and is born anew. The whole period of the transmigration is (they say) three thousand years. There are Greek writers—some of an earlier, some of a later date—who have borrowed this doctrine from the Egyptians and put it forward as their own. I could mention their names, but I abstain from doing so.—Herodotus.

Horse Came Back.

A. H. Whitman, a Los Angeles (Cal.) jeweler, says that a cat may come back, also a horse. Witman owned a horse for several years, and recently deciding that the animal had outlived its usefulness, he gave a young man $5 to take the equine into the country and shoot it.

He then decided that he must have a new steed, so inserted an advertisement in the newspapers. Among several answers, one especially appealed to him.

It stated that the writer possessed a gentle family horse, and gave a description which sounded good to the jeweler.

Accordingly, he journeyed to China, from which town the letter came, looked over the horse, and bought it. When he got the animal home he noticed something familiar in its actions, and upon closely examining the animal, found it to be the one he had paid to have shot.

Finance Has No Boundaries.

Finance nowadays is limited by no national boundaries. American newspapers contain advertisements of a "City of Tokio (Japan) Loan" for the purchase of that city of electric tramways and electric lighting systems. The loan, amounting to about $45,000,000, is apportioned between New York.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over [illegible] years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

MRS. DORN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DORN, of New Brookland, S.C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 1[illegible] pounds."

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

One of the prettiest home wedding of the season occured Wednesday, afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Exelby, when their oldest daughter Miss Mildred became the bride of Fay A. Wiggins in the presense of about 35 invited guests

The affair was beautiful in all of its appointments When the guests had all assembled, and just before the bridal couple entered, Miss Floy Underwood, sang "O Promise Me." At just four o'clock, Miss Donna Exelby, sister of the bride, played a beautiful wedding march, and the bridal couple unattended except by little Miss Francis Zeluff who was pretty in all white and carrying the bride's roses, entered the parlor and took their places in one corner where there were banks of ferns. Standing beneath a large white ribbon bow and white flowers Rev. E. L. Stiffy of Adrian conducted the ceremony.

The house decorations were of ferns roses and catalpa blossoms After congratulations a lovely two course dinner was served by six young ladies cousins of the bride Both are popular young people of this place, the bride having lived here all her life, is a graduate of the high school, was in the State Bank here for some time, and is now organist in the Christian church. The groom has been a mail carrier for the last two years

Arrested for Mistreating Girl.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 1.—As a result of a pitiful story of misusage told by sixteen-year-old Hazel McGrath four young men are locked up and other arrests are expected. The girl says she was taken to a cottage at Lake Goguac, plied with whisky until she was intoxicated, and then mistreated. Those under arrest are George Ball, Alpho Bailey, Avon Longwell and Harry Layrason. It is expected that before the matter is closed at least fifteen young men, most of them from well known families, will be implicated in the affair.

Farmer Attempts Suicide.

Coldwater, Mich., July 1.—Freeman Whitney, a Bethel township farmer, attempted suicide. Shortly after breakfast Mrs. Whitney went into a bedroom and found her husband writhing on the floor almost unconscious. Two young neighbors, hearing cries, hurried into the house and untied a rope he had tied to a bedpost and resuscitated him. He has had periods of melancholy. He will be taken to Kalamazoo.

Resurrected Romance

By Lillian E. Sweetser

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Bang!!!!

The slam of the big front door shook the house.

Aunt Hetty, sitting at her sunny window, started at the noise, and, glancing out, saw Jack Maynard run down the steps and hurry away—anger and decision in every movement.

A few moments later a step on the stairs announced the arrival of her niece, Mabel, a sweet, lovable girl, but somewhat spoiled by the constant attention of the whole household to every whim of its youngest member.

As the door opened, a flushed, tear-stained face appeared, and Mabel was soon enfolded in Aunt Hetty's comforting arms, while the soft, white hands caressingly smoothed the tumbled hair.

As far back as Mabel could remember, Aunt Hetty had always been her refuge—her haven in all of childhood's storms, and, even now, a young woman, with a sparkling engagement ring, the sweet, old lady was still her confidant.

Day after day she might be found in the same rocker, in the same window, occupied with a dainty bit of sewing, which, when finished, invariably found its way into Mabel's wardrobe; and nobody knew of the dreams and memories woven into the sheer garments. Happy days passed in review, as some girlish confidence would recall a similar occurrence in her own history; and, though years had passed, a tear would fall for the lad who had died to save others.

After the burst of grief had subsided, Mabel raised her head, and gravely announced:

"Jack and I are through, Auntie." At the question in the gentle look she added: "Well, it is just this way, dear; if he cannot trust me now, he never will, and I will not stand being ordered like a child!" A sob interrupted, then she went on:

"You know those beautiful roses papa brought home for me yesterday are in the library. When Jack noticed them, to tease him, I asked him if he did not think they were a 'nice present.' He asked whom they were from, of course, and I said, 'a gentleman.' Then, instead of joking, as I was doing, he got angry, and ordered me to tell him who sent them. At that, naturally, I would not, when he was so cross, and he said such mean things—was willing to believe that I had been playing with him all the time. When I was wearing his ring, too, auntie! I tried to give it back, but he threw it on the floor and rushed out, without giving me a chance to explain. Now he can stay, if he doesn't care any more than that!!" A fresh burst of tears and the curly head went deep into the comforting lap.

Aunt Hetty thoughtfully contemplated the sorrowful figure.

"Do you think that you were just right yourself, dear? Remember that the forbearance and forgiveness of true love cannot always be on one side. True hearts should be above causing another pain for a simple joke."

"I know it wasn't right," was the faint response, "but I meant to tell him in a moment, and never thought of him doing that way. He ought to have had more faith in me than that." Mabel wiped her eyes defiantly.

Aunt Hetty sighed, and a mist came before her, as she replied gently:

"Little girl, people can live years in a minute—countries and lives be destroyed, but an angry word lives forever. Would you like to hear a story—a true one, about a girl, just as loving, impulsive, and thoughtless as you?"

Mabel assented eagerly, her own woes forgotten for the time, at the prospect of one of her aunt's stories.

"Years ago," began the sweet voice, "a girl lived in a beautiful southern town. She had everything to make her happy—father, mother, brother, and a home, of which she loved every nook and corner. She was very popular in the younger set, and many were the flattering proposals of marriage that she received. But, in her open-hearted manner, she liked them all the same, and after repeated refusals (contrary to the usual rule) they were all like big brothers to her—ever watchful for her pleasure and comfort, without rivalry and jealousy.

"Matters went on this way for several seasons. Gossips wondered—talked, and finally doomed her to a solitary spinsterhood, as one after another joined the ranks of the 'big brothers.'

"But one day came a change. The girl's brother brought home a friend—a former college room-mate. His home was far away, and on a trip for the business interests of his father he had combined duty with the pleasure of a visit to his friend.

"We read of 'love at first sight,' and I think that is what it must have been, for, from the first, the girl was a different person. The interest was mutual, and they rode, danced, and sang together. In quieter moods, the quaint, old summer house was their retreat, where many happy hours were spent reading together or exchanging confidences. The whole household realized how matters were developing, even before they did themselves, but, as the young man was above reproach in every respect, all were discreetly blind.

"Meanwhile, the young man's father was growing impatient for his return, so the inevitable parting grew near. It came and went, leaving a tearful, yet happy maid, with an engagement ring, that recalled the loving promise of a speedy return, and then—no more partings.

"The ring was set with a single, perfect pearl. It had been his mother's, and, as she turned it on her finger, she reflected its purity, and resolved to be worthy of it."

Mabel's eyes grew wide at the mention of the ring, and she started to interrupt, but, with a glance at Aunt Hetty's absorbed expression, she resisted, and listened with a sympathetic wonder.

"The weeks that passed were busy ones—dressmakers and the whole retinue of servants preparing for the event to come, and the time was checked off daily on the little desk calendar, as the letters were written. The replies were carefully hoarded, and put away in a dainty book, with keepsakes of other days.

"At last, the day of her lover's arrival dawned, and she moved about as if in a dream, until she was clasped in a pair of strong, young arms and realized that it meant the end of partings.

"Happy days followed in swift succession, until the wedding day was but a week distant. While sitting in the summer house, planning their bright future, she spoke of the beauty of her ring. He had noticed a little plain ring that she had always worn, and idly inquired about it. To tease him, she ignored the inquiry, thus rousing his curiosity, and, before they realized it, heated words had followed. Then, girl fashion, she felt abused, never thinking of the silly way it had all started, her own fault, and how easily it might have been remedied. He told her that if she left in anger, it would be the end. Of course, she did not think he really meant it, and liked to see how far her power went, so, with her head in the air, she went to the house, never dreaming but what he would follow her. He did not.

"In the morning, after a sleepless night, she descended the stairs in a repentant mood, to find a note on the hall table, simply informing her of his departure, in response to an urgent message from home. 'Will write from there,' was the only grain of comfort she could see. Frantic at the turn of affairs, she sped up the stairs, back to follow him in mind, with a remorseful letter.

"As she hastily penned her sorrow and love, the house was aroused by the news of a serious railroad accident, in which was the very train that her lover had departed on. Later came the news of his death, caused by a falling beam, as he was heroically helping the wounded to places of safety before the fire reached them.

"That was the end—end of all the fond hopes and plans—she never saw him again, and you can perhaps imagine what that girl's lifelong remorse must have been."

Aunt Hetty's voice was tender, and her eyes suspiciously moist, as she noted her niece's countenance.

"Now, you see," she went on, "why I have opened my heart, dear—to save you from a like sorrow, for the girl was I, as you have already guessed. Time softens all sorrows, and, eventually will make all things right."

"I'm going and 'phone Jack right now, auntie. I'm glad you told me, and I wish somebody had told you. I shall always remember it, for what would I do if anything happened to Jack?" With an impulsive hug and kiss, Mabel hurried out.

An hour later two radiant faces betokened reconciliation, but, as Mabel buried her face in another bunch of roses, a shade of sorrow went over her at the thought of the girl of long ago, and her shattered dream. Glancing at Jack's happy smile, she thanked God within herself for the timely warning of Aunt Hetty.

WHY ADVERTISE A DIVORCE?

Writer Objects to New Custom of Indicating It by Change of Ring.

What is there about divorce that should induce a woman to advertise the fact that she has obtained one? asks Leslie's. Some western women are trying to introduce the custom of wearing a wedding ring on the little finger of the right hand when one becomes divorced.

A truly modest woman who has obtained a release from the matrimonial relation will want to keep herself in the background, and the greater the justification for such release the less desire there is to advertise the fact. Miss Acton, a prominent Boston lawyer, well says: "Any custom that draws public attention to one's private misfortune is vulgar."

Instead of wearing the wedding ring on another finger as a mark of an unfortunate and untimely matrimonial experience, a sense of propriety should prompt a woman to put the ring in a secret place known only to herself, there to stay with all other unpleasant memories of the past.—New York Herald.

The Probable Breadwinner.

Representative Henry of Texas was talking at a dinner in Washington about an impecunious nobleman.

"He is engaged to a Chicago girl," said Mr. Henry. "The girl's mother was boasting about the match at a tea. 'May,' she said, 'will occupy a very remarkable social position now. I am endeavoring to educate her up to it.'

"'Oh, I see,' said a friend. 'You are teaching her, I suppose, to wash and iron, to do plain sewing, address envelopes, or something of that sort.'"

AWAKENED TRAIN OF THOUGHT

Little Incident That Would Have Made Almost Any Man Superstitious.

Seeking to dispel the pangs of lonesomeness occasioned by the absence of his wife, who had been away for several days visiting her parents in another city, a fashionable and well-known resident of the East side invited a number of his men friends to his home one night last week to play cards and clink glasses.

Being fond of music the host engaged a four-piece orchestra and while his guests exchanged deals and raised the cut glasses to their lips he found more pleasure in reclining in a favorite leather cushioned chair and listening to the music.

It was nearing the time for departure when one of the merry-makers proposed that each guest drink a toast to the host and that he respond, When all had followed the suggestion they turned toward the host. "Tell us what you are thinking of your wife," one suggested as the party giver hesitated.

Raising his glass to a level with his lips he was about to respond. "I was thinking and wondering—"

Just at that moment the orchestra began its rendition of "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now."

The guests never heard the response, but if they had lingered outside and peered through the library window they would have seen him writing a letter which was later enclosed in an envelope bearing a special delivery stamp. The contents of the message have not been made public, but the wife came home two days later.—Kansas City Journal.

Wonderful Kano.

In many ways is Kano a wonderful place to find in central Africa. This native city has great enfolding walls, twelve miles in circumference, pierced by thirteen deep gateways with platform and guardhouse and massive doors heavily clamped with iron. Its written records date back nearly 800 years. And although incomparably the most important it is not the oldest of these Hausa cities—Katsina, now in the same province, is probably older.

Boating on Boiling Lakes.

In the southern part of New Zealand there are hot springs where the Maoris go boating on boiling lakes. There are also little holes in the earth through which the steam spouts, and the native women use these places instead of fires for cooking.

Doubtful About the Joke.

My daughter had tried to inculcate courage in her two-year-old boy by telling him when any accident befell him that "it was only a joke." One night a tornado struck the neighborhood, and while trees were crashing around them and they expected momentarily to be carried away he crept up to his mother and, pulling her dress, said, "Mamma, is this a joke?"—Exchange.

Solves the School-Day wear problem
Wunderhose FOR CHILDREN $1

The Webster Anderon Co.

School Days Bring Many Problems

You owe it to your children to see that they are well dressed and comfortable. How can it be done on the least money? Stockings have been the greatest trouble. You know the kind that look well until the first recess. If your boy is the right kind of boy, he plays so fast he forgets all about his stockings. To grow he must play that way. Give him the kind of stockings that take care of themselves—

Wunderhose

Leap-frog, hop-scotch, foot ball, and many other games need have no terrors for the mother who has bought her son Wunderhose. Let him scuffle, slide, jump all over the play ground—no strain, no holes, no ravel. These wonderful stockings are made from Wunderyarn; dyed with Wunderdye. Wunderyarns are spun from the largest and toughest cotton fibre known. They are twisted and combed until they have the strength of rope, with the "feel" of silk. Only double threads of Wunderyarn—no single ones whatever—are used in Wunderhose. The heels, toes and knees are reinforced, and remember the strength of re-inforcing yarns does not depend on the thickness. That is one of the reasons why the heels and toes of Wunderhose are so soft and pliable and yet so strong. In Wunderhose families the mother helps her children with their books when other mothers are slaving with the darning needles.

Executive, Being Unable to Attend Commencement Dinner, Sends Special Message.

Incident to commencement exercises the University of Michigan celebrated this year its "Diamond Jubilee," or seventyfifth aniversary.

Governor Osborn was to have been one of the principal speakers at the commencement dinner, but being unable to attend on account of his disabled foot, his address in the form of a message, as given below was read by Hon. L. L. Wright, state superintendent of public instruction.

The Governor's Greetings.

The age of the university means nothing if taken only as a measurement of time. As indicating the early thought given to matters of higher education in a new country, and as an index to the character of Michigan pioneers, it is fundamentally important. The event of which this is a commemoration is the founding of the university at Ann Arbor. The germ of the university was implanted in 1807 and had its first tangiable development in 1817. So today we will remember with grateful appreciation the names of Reverend Gabriel Richard and the Reverend John Monteith. We will put John D. Pierce in their company and credit these three men, enlisted in the higher service of mankind, with laying the corner stone of this prideful institution.

As representing all of the people of Michigan I would testify to their love for the university and appreciation of it, and I would gather and sound their applause for all who have served the university unselfishly—and their names are multitude. No man, whether regent, president, dean, professor or instructor, has ever successfully attached himself to the university in selfishness. Those who have builded this institution so splendidly and have made it a monument to the finer and higher things of life have done so for the very love of that learning and justice which fit men to best appreciate and serve their fellows.

Throughout America, and especially in the western states, University of Michigan men have led the way in the foundation of higher conceptions of citizenship, practical responsibility and devotion to society. Those alumni who have paid their indebtedness to the state for the education it gave them have done so in best manner through citizen service—and almost all have paid back something. The gathering forces of the years endeavor, set in motion by clear direction here, are doing their part in the betterment of the world and in making conditions that permit a more real happiness of mankind.

As the university grows greater and stronger it is more and more consecrated to morals and brotherhood as companions of higher truth. The broadening of the university spirit permits the display here of both truth and error. There is no better way to cure error than to expose it to view and discussion. There is no better way to impress and magnify truth than to give it living competition with error.

Another thing has been achieved as the years are building their pyramid, and that is a finer democracy of education as contrasted with the old spirit of intellectual aristocracy and exclusiveness. After all, the great educator and moralist spoke in words of wisdom when he said that the most complete education is one that addresses the mind to higher purposes and fits the heart to mighty love.

I do not wish to close this message without acknowledging the service and the spirit in which it is rendered of the board of regents, your president emeritus, and all the faculties. The university will progress as they win it; and it will have, and I may safely pledge it, the support of Michigan in its effort to lead the way, as it has always led the way in the work of finished democratic education.

CHASE S. OSBORN, governor.

VIGOROUS PROTEST

Against Chinese Colonization to Till Michigan Muck Lands.

Governor Osborn has made public a decidedly interesting letter written by Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, member of the executive board of the American Civic Federation:

"I am much disturbed by what I see in this morning's paper about the Chinese buying up large tracts of muck land in our state to redeem it and do market gardening for Chicago.

"This, to me, has a very sinster aspect. It means that Michigan farmers are parting with really valuable land for a song, that they will be under-bid by the Chinese in one of the greatest markets in this world; that we may acquire a large, undesirable alien population, and that the agricultural resources of our state may be exploited by Chinese companies in a fashion to do the farmer, and all of us, great and irreparable injury. I feel much concerned. Do you feel at all as I do about it? Is there anything we can do to stop it or to discourage it? Cannot you, as governor, give out an interview on the subject?

"At any rate it seems to me such a menacing situation that I felt I must write to you about it."

CYCLONE WRECKS CITY

Two Hundred Persons Killed and Injured at Regina, Sask.

At Regina, Sask., about two hundred persons were killed and injured in a cyclone which swept over the city and tore its way northeasterly through eight blocks, namely from Albert street to Hamilton street, in the business part of the city.

Three of the largest churches in the city were demolished, the Methodist, the Baptist and the Knox Presbyterian as well as the Young Men's Christian association and the Masonic Temple buildings.

Falling walls and flying debris killed people as they walked on the street or hurried along in automobiles. The estimated number killed and injured is 200. All available conveyances were called to pick up the dead or injured who were then hurried off to hospitals or homes.

The telephone office was in the heart of the ruins and all lines were put out of commission, the operators being removed from the debris. The power plant was also put out of commission and the town is without electric power or light.

Along Victoria street, from Sixteenth to Eleventh street, 300 houses were destroyed and many people killed.

At Eleventh street the wholesale business district was reached and warehouses, banking institutions, and retail stores were sent into heaps of ruins, while the air was filled with flying wreckage.

The property loss is roughly estimated at $1,000,000, including the building and plant of Regina Standard. Damages are reported at Q'Appalle and other places in the path of the storm.

Sprung an Old One on Him.

By the way, I saw a string of exceptionally large monkeys. I mentioned that they looked like small men, and a darky broke in and said: "Boss, them monkeys can speak if they wanted to, but they are afraid that if they did they would be put to work."—Northwestern.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—Nearly one thousand taxpayers of Lansing crowded into the city hall when the state tax commission held its first public review of the assessments made by the local assessing officers. Some of them gasped in astonishment when they learned that many valuations had been boosted almost 100 per cent. George R. Horton, of Fruit Ridge represented the state tax commission and he stood his ground bravely when a number of irate citizens expressed their opinion of the tax commission's work in no uncertain terms. For several months expert appraisers employed by the state tax commission have been at work in Lansing. They claim to have a record of all the real estate transactions that have been recorded in the city during the last year, and have used these figures in making many of their estimates.

LANSING — A score or more of witnesses, six jurors, two attorneys, two principals, one justice, one officer and one clerk spent the greater part of one afternoon deciding whether a buff and brown cat, alleged to be part Angora, belonged to Mrs. Daisy Farrand, a local society woman, or to Bessie Havens, the little daughter of a farmer. The jury decided for the little girl. The Havens family and several of their neighbors testified that the cat was one of a family of seven kittens born at the Havens home two years ago. They claimed they found the cat at the Farrand house and took it home.

KALAMAZOO—Nathan S. Taylor who is the drain commissioner of this county, has just been notified by the attorney general that he must be elected again this fall, although he was elected for a four-year term two years ago, if he desires to serve the county two years longer as commissioner. Taylor recently discovered that the state law relative to drain commissioners had been changed and that their term shall run only two years, notwithstanding the fact that they might have been elected for longer terms.

GRAND RAPIDS—Frank Sobiszowski, Jr., who had recently confessed embezzling $8,000 from the Kent State bank, was sentenced to from two to ten years, with a recommendation of three and one-half years in Ionia by Judge William B. Brown in the superior court. Sobiszowski was assistant savings teller when he began to lead a fast life.

MT. PLEASANT — While several small boys were playing in an old building on Allen Dawson's place they found a loaded revolver. One of them pointed the weapon towards a little Manley boy aged seven years, and shot him in the forehead. The child died. Each boy denies the shooting, but cannot tell which one did it.

KALAMAZOO—The Kalamazoo police drove nearly seventy-five tramps out of the city. The foot-travelers had established a camp just east of the city on the river bank and were apparently making plans to stay there for the summer. If they return the hoboes will be put to work on the road gang.

KALAMAZOO — Meager advices have just been received in Kalamazoo that James Doyle, a former prominent resident of this city, was killed in Portland, Ore., when a scaffolding on a building fell. Doyle was a well-known contracter. His body will not be brought back here for burial.

ESCANABA—Four of the immense warehouses and the entire stock of staves, hoops and headings were destroyed by fire at the Escanaba cooperage plant of the Northwestern Cooperage & Lumber company of Gladstone. The loss is $15,000.

SHREWD IDEA OF DIPLOMAT

Where Russian Officer of Embassy Proved More Than a Match for Abdul Hamid.

Diplomatists abroad tell how a distinguished member of the Russian corps diplomatique cleverly outwitted Abdul Hamid, the late Sultan of Turkey. The Russian displayed a curious ingenuity in introducing the business of his country in the guise of personal pleasure.

It appears that the Sultan had absolutely refused to grant an audience to any member of the diplomatic body at Constantinople and that during the period in question Abdul Hamid spent the greater part of his time in cock-fighting, an amusement whereof he was passionately fond.

The Russian heard that his imperial majesty stood in need of fresh birds to supply the place of those killed in fight, whereupon the wily Muscovite procured a fine-looking white fowl of the barnyard species, caused it to be trimmed and spurred to resemble a gamecock, and sent it in a richly decorated cage to the Sultan.

The ruse was successful, but the Sultan, at first delighted with the gift, soon sent for the diplomatist to explain, if he could, why his bird had shown no inclination to fight. The Russian went, examined the bird in the presence of Abdul Hamid, and with great astonishment and regret acknowledged that it was quite unable to cope with the royal gamecocks, which were undoubtedly of a superior breed.

A conference followed on the subject of gamecocks in general; and when this was finished the Muscovite succeeded in drawing the Sultan in a mood for conversation of a different character, and in time adroitly introduced the political matter he had so long awaited an opportunity to discuss. After a long interview he returned to his embassy triumphant over his colleagues.—Harper's Weekly.

GRAVE CAUSE FOR DISPUTE

Romanticists and Others Have Opportunity to Squabble Over This Happening.

The Winans will has upset the theory of the cynics that romance is dead in the world. Here is an innkeeper's daughter who receives a fortune of $500,000 just for being kind to an old man. In all her dreams of the future she never thought of being able to present to the Prince Charming that would eventually come along such a princely dower. She went about her work delivering the milk and cream from her father's dairy, little thinking that the old gentleman, who year after year was her father's guest, was all along planning to make her a rich heiress as a reward for her little kindnesses. The picture is idyllic. Unfortunately, some of the rightful heirs of the deceased multimillionaire fail to see the poetry of it and have already given notice of a contest. There is a son who has been cut off with a paltry $200,000 and there are two grandchildren who have been entirely forgotten. In the case of the son the will is particularly significant, since the relative smallness of the amount can be traced to the father's disapproval of a marriage that was wholly romantic. The cynics may still claim that their contention is supported by the courts.

Copying the Mississippi.

The city of Seville, Spain, which is on the "banks of the sweet Guadalquiver," has been almost completely beleaguered recently by reason of the phenomenal rise of that river, which has abandoned its role of a meandering, sentimental stream and become a raging torrent bearing death and destruction in its course.

Put Ban on High Heels.

A Minneapolis manufacturer recently forbade the wearing of high heels on their shoes by the young women in his establishment.

CANNOT HIDE THEIR IDENTITY

Senders of Wireless Messages Readily Recognized by Man at the Other End.

Amateur wireless operators who break in on regular calls by commercial companies and then sign with a fictitious name may find themselves quickly identified, according to wireless operators in Chicago. The reason is that the "hand" of an operator is as quickly recognized in wireless work as in ordinary telegraphy.

Telegraphers always recognize the "hand" of a man who transmits messages and some out-of-town men have reputations for "beautiful sending" among Chicago operators. Wireless men say that the mere fact that wires have been obliterated in their business makes no difference to the man at the receiving end. He can tell at once who is sending the message if he has heard from the same man before.

"Only the other day I received a message from a station on the lake which came from a familiar hand," said a wireless operator. "I identified it at once as that of a friend I had known years before, but could not break in at that time without interrupting the message. As soon as he completed his work, however, I sent him a personal call. It turned out that he was the man of my acquaintance.

"Some of these amateurs who think they can fool the wireless will find themselves in a peck of trouble some day for interfering with messages. It is easy to become acquainted with their 'hand' if they practice at all regularly. If they play any jokes on an operator and sign fictitious names they may find out after all that they cannot disguise themselves. Their own way of sending, which differs for every individual, betrays them."

SIGNIFICANCE OF SOUTH POLE

Science Will Welcome the Discovery So Long Looked Forward To.

At least three branches of science, it is hoped, will derive important benefits from the conquest of the south pole—meteorology, geography, and seismography. More immediately important than any other result is to be, it is probable, the influence of of the discovery on meteorology. In no long time, as a consequence of the weather maps based upon the fuller knowledge of atmospheric currents in the Antarctic, doubtless brought by Scott and Amundsen, the prediction of the weather will be made a much more exact science. One of the results hoped for is the forecasting of the conditions of the monsoons in India and averting thereby a vast amount of damage to property and loss of life.

To work out the many observations pertaining not only to meteorology but to the other sciences and to report on the collections in detail must, as a writer in the London Times points out, be the work of years. It is already possible, however, to conjecture from the mass of expert information published here and abroad regarding Amundsen as well as Scott what are the outlines of a great section of the globe of which only the fringe has heretofore been touched by the explorer.—Current Literature.

Nations Brought Closer.

We have already spoken of the new telephone cable which is laid across the channel, so as to connect France with England, this being designed on the Pupin system, so that speech is very clear and the various provinces of England can now have connection with Paris. Recent news states that connection can now be made from London to Switzerland in a practical way for the first time, so that conversations can be held between London and Geneva by way of Paris and Lyons and between London and Basel by the way of Paris and Belfort.—Scientific American.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs colds or any bronchial affection its unequaled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

AT BIRTHPLACE OF DICKENS

Almost a Shrine, Where Many of the Hurrying Crowds Pause to Do Reverence.

A great signboard partly covers the little house where Charles Dickens was born. "Charles Dickens' Birthplace," it says, and all the hurrying world entering old Portsmouth pauses to look at it. The street, Commercial road, might be a street in any large city, and the house is no alien edifice in the vista of ugliness. A hundred years ago the traffic may have been quieter and the flowers in the front gardens not quite so dusty—a century leads us back such a very long road. In the spring of 1812 we picture Mrs. John Dickens, wife of the humble clerk in the navy pay office, bringing her baby boy—her first son—to the small windows for a glimpse of the London stage coach bound for the Portsmouth dockyard. Little did the tired mother think as she held him there that his life would one day affect some of the passengers on the coach, the people who walked or rode in the street, the thousands going about their business in Portsmouth and the tens of thousands upon thousands all over the country. Whoever made so many men laugh and weep as Dickens? What pen has opened the doors into as many lives? No heart has every been closer to the facts of human life than that of the beardless boy who shyly winked at his Sam Weller and sent him forth with laughter that was to blow into a gale. On Weller's footsteps they come, those common and yet uncommon types he drew forth from the bone and sinew of Great Britain. The boy born in Commercial road was to be the apostle of everyday people, and the multitude of tradesmen he wrote of would make a trades' directory.—The Ladies' World.

NEVER LACKED FOR SOLDIERS

How Japanese Forethought Supplemented Military Skill in the Great Struggle With Russia.

Brig. Gen. Robert K. Evans, says the Army and Navy Journal, told of meeting, just after the Russo-Japanese war, a friend who had been a military attache with Oyama's army in the Manchurian campaign, and asked him what had been the most striking and noteworthy incident that came to his notice during the war. His reply was: "Without doubt it was this: In the battle of Mukden I noticed a large body of troops on the field whose presence I could not account for from any information in my possession. I rode over and inquired who they were. I was told, 'These are the reserves sent from Japan to take the places of the men who will be killed and wounded in the next great battle.' And there they were on the field while the battle was going on." This is a most instructive incident, thought General Evans. Here Oyama lost in a great battle a certain number of thousands of men. The next day they were all replaced by an equal number of trained, instructed and disciplined men. The army was as strong numerically as before the fight. It had probably gained in efficiency by the practical experience of the officers and men who had been under fire and still remained in ranks.

Guess at Philanthropist's Identity.

John M. Longyear, of Brookline, is now thought by his friends to be possibly the mysterious contributor of $2,500,000 to "Tech." Henry C. Frick, Thomas A. Edison and Andrew Carnegie are previous guesses. The list bids fair to resemble a directory of philanthropic multimillionaires. Mr. Longyear, who thus has greatness thrust upon him, made his money in ore and timber lands in Michigan and elsewhere in the west.

Obituary

O. M. PALMER

O. M. Palmer passed away Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock after a prolonged illness, aged 72 years.

The funeral was held this afternoon at one o'clock at the home Father Fisher officiating. Burial at Manchester.

Beside his wife, he leaves one sister Mrs. Benj. Reynolds and two brothers Samuel Palmer of Manchester and Charles Palmer of Paris, Mich.

MYRON D. BILLMEYER

Myron D. Billmeyer was born at White Pigeon, St. Joe county, July 7, 1858, and departed this life June 19, 1912, aged 53 years, 11 months, 25 days. At the age of seven years, in company with his parents, he moved to their farm. At the death of his father, which occurred June 8, 1900, he took possession of their farm which he has operated successfully. His entire life was spent here with the exception of the few years he spent in the west.

April 4, 1903, he was united in marriage with Mrs. Hattie Lewis who, with her two children, Mrs. S. J. Wilson, of Alpena, and Harvey Lewis, are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. Besides these there are three sisters and two brothers, Mrs R. W Martin and Mrs. F. M, Porter, of Los Angeles: Mrs. Mary Dutton, of Philadelphia; Ernest Billmeyer, of South America, and Dr. Joseph Billmeyer, of Norwalk, Ohio. The latter was the only one of the surviving brothers and sisters who was able to attend the funeral which was held at the late home Friday, June 21st, at 2 o'clock. Rev. H. B. Dunning, of Corunna, Rev. J. D. DeSpelder, of Tecumseh, and Rev. E. D Crawford, of Holloway, officiated, Mrs. Sarah Rappleye and Mrs. Robert Houseman, of Ridgeway, rendered two beautiful hymns.

The burial at Brookside was held under the auspices of the F. and A. M. of Tecumseh. He was also a member of the A O. U. W. at Lexington, Neb., and Raisin Grange No. 214.

AT THE FUNERAL OF M. D. BILLMEYER

Thy friends, dear Myron, this sweet summer day
Are grouped in clusters on the homestead sod;
Thy trees, beloved, round them their shadows lay—
Sad shade—but crowned by sunlight cheer from God.

Low - voiced these friends, their dreamy eyes bedewed,
Recall to mind thy kindly words and deeds,
And one by one dear memories are renewed,
And sweet as waftings from your clover-meads.

We loved thee, Myron, and our thoughts of thee
Through years to come will blest and helpful be:
Thy beaming kindness, like the sunlight free,
Sure, Memory's eyes must sparkle as they see

Unmurm'ring fortitude when pain oppressed,
The songs which in the night thy Maker gave—
They'll live, they'll live, to bless us when depressed,
When ills assail to whelm us, wave on wave.

We hear the praises of thy pastor friend,
The strains of music loved by thee so well;
We bear thy flower-wreath'd dust, our way to wend
In pensive mood, through wold and woody dell,

To where the silence waits thee and the shade,
And bowers of rest that angels guard and keep,
Where Love's sad pilgrimage shall oft be made,
With wreaths of kindly thoughts to grace thy sleep.

Farewell! Thy free barque seeks the open sea,
And wings, like homing dove, her facile flight—
But what if o'er her dwindling sail there be
The glow of hope, the Homeland's harbor-light?

J. A. DESPELDER.

And it is furthered Ordered, That a copy of this order be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy) HARRY L. LARWILL,
Judge of Probate.

E. I. LARWILL, Probate Register.

Turned Joke on Inspector.

This curious incident comes from Suhr, Switzerland: An inspector of schools, without any previous warning, visited the village school and found the elderly teacher asleep at his desk and the children departed, having apparently taken French leave. To give the teacher a great surprise and a bad quarter of an hour, the inspector decided to wait until he awoke, and seated himself on a bench in front of the culprit. The hours passed and the inspector himself went to sleep. The teacher, on awakening and seeing who was sleeping before him, quietly left the school for home. Without entering the school room the concierge locked up the school and the slumbering inspector. Several hours later the concierge heard a great noise and, arming himself, opened the door, and was greatly surprised to find the angry inspector before him.

Locked Antlers in Glacier.

Mute evidence of a mortal combat that may have occurred centuries ago was revealed to J. K. Magnussen, a timber cruiser on the slopes of Mount Baker, says the Portland Oregonian.

Lying in the lower edge of Roosevelt glacier were the crumbling bones of a buck deer of more than ordinary size. Digging down into the ice the cruiser uncovered the remains of a second animal, the body in an excellent state of preservation. The antlers of the animals were tightly interlocked, showing that the deer had died in battle.

From the position of the skeleton and the body in the glacier, Magnussen is of the opinion that they had been carried a long distance down the mountain side. As the glacier flows only four or five inches a day the battle of the bucks may have occurred centuries ago.

Wily Will.

"Didn't you think that was a beautiful girl with me today, Will?"

"What girl, my dearest?"

"Why she was with me when you met us outside the church."

"Was there a girl there, dear? I didn't notice. I was looking at you."

And then she loved him all the more.

ECHOES FROM THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

WILSON and MARSHALL

Woodrow Wilson, the Yankee Doodle—Dixie Candidate, Received the Nomination on the 46th Ballot.

It seemed to be a game of "Eeny-meeny-miney-mo" at the Baltimore convention and it seems that Wilson remembered the game of his boyhood and began with Eeny on himself, thus securing the "Mo" that nominated him.

Mrs. R. F. Gainor, democratic delegate from California, was an enthusiastic supporter of Champ Clark.

It is said that there was a great shortage in the delegates' cash at the Baltimore convention They resembled the father of a large family after Christmas.

Cash and rubbish on field of battle. Quarters, nickles and dimes, even dollars, ten wagon loads of wastepaper, five wagon loads of empty bottles, three loads of dirt, scrapings from the floor. "It sure is going some."

The trouble with the Democratic Convention was there were too many bosses. Murphy a boss, Sullivan a boss, Taggart a boss, and Bryan the biggest boss of all.

Bryan, remarking on the tumult and rioting at the convention, after one of his speeches, said, "It was a surgical operation and it was possibly a mistake not to have administered choloform. but I did not expect quite so much tumult."

Edna Ferber says, "It took three days, but it was worth waiting for, that Thursday night display, when the Democratic National Convention redeemed itself, socially, theatrically and spetacularly, not to mention politically. * * * It was a dressy affair, too. One man wore his dress suit and Mrs Norman E. Mack, of Buffalo, would have dressed up any audience unaided and single handed, in the splendor of her white lace gown with diamonds sprinkled about with impartial lib rality, the whole dazzling effect garnished and completed by a white hat, frothing with white paradise."

"Oh, this convention wasn't any slouch of an audience, and Baltimore furnished a full chime of belles for the first time since the hordes began to gather,"

Michigan was the most split up of any in the convention, voting on five different candidates, but finally went solid for Wilson.

You might call this a spectacular convention with the high kickers, the high flyers, their wives and their Rhode Island Red Roosters, umbrellas cow bells, yells and hisses.

Wilson refused to go to Baltimore. Like Taft, it paid best in the long run to stay away from the scene of action.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland and her daughter Esther were quiet, unobtrusive attendants at the Baltimore convention, taking a deep interest in every phase of the meeting.

And now for the tug of war.

OUR YOUNG BOOSTERS.

The "Holy Terrors" and Their Young Friends Showed Their Patriotism July 4th;

A LESSON TO TECUMSEH CITIZENS.

Even if the present generation is lacking in patriotism, it is with great pleasure that we note that the coming generation is having it instilled in their hearts and minds. The only spectacular demonstration that Tecumseh afforded was that given by the "Holy Terrors" and their friends A parade, headed by an auto guarded by postillions and holding the "Barkers" and, incidentally, the ice cream and cake (the children not wishing to lose sight of this). Following came George and Martha Washington, Pochahontas, the Prince, the Highlander, Uncle Sam and citizens on foot. They paraded our streets in good style, and surely deserve much praise for their observance of the Glorious Fourth of our forefathers. A generous supply of ice cream and cake completed their demonstration.

Hazel and Donald Hall were celebrating at Wamplers the 4th.

Roger Anthony of Walkerville, Ont, is home for ten days vacation.

Ernest Coller is now driving an R. C. H. car. Who comes next?

Jay Kenyon of Detroit was the guest of his parents over the 4th,

July 4th 1912 our flag displayed forty eight stars upon her field of blue.

Misses Florine, and Azella Bennett were spending the 4th. at Wamplers Lake,

Harry Shea and Miss Bessie Van Antwerp spent the 4th at Wamplers Lake.

Miss Ella Murphy and Percy Boyd were celebrating the 4th at Wampler's lake,

Mr' and Mrs. W, W. Whiting were with the crowd at Wamplers Lake, the 4th.

John Gaston was a visitor at Wamplers Lake the 4th.

Misses Jennie Owen, Grace Steinhoff and Ruth Ingram returned from their visit with Miss Katheryn Haas at Wamplers Lake, this morning.

In Society

Entertained.

Mrs. F. D. Rector entertained a company of little girls Wednesday in honor of the fifth birthday of Miss Madeline Boyce, and to meet the little cousins from California. Those present were Madeline Boyce, Dorothy and Ruth Rector, of California, Arlene, Geraldine and Frances Gillespie and Wilhemina Anderson. The young ladies had a most delightful time and enjoyed the feast of good things that their hostess spread before them. And when Good Nights were spoken, they departed for their homes tired but happy.

TECUMSEH CLUB PICNIC

Mrs. B. J. Garlinghouse and Mrs Levi C. Hayden were the hostesses for the Tecumseh Club on Tuesday evening, they varied the regular program by entertaining on the banks of the Globe Mill Pond to a picnic supper. WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

THOUGHT HIS TIME HAD COME

Imagination Truly Is a Wonderful Thing, as Kansas Man Is Likely to Admit.

Every summer John Fisher, a Liberty grocer, and Frank Cockrell, a retired farmer, maintain a camp at the mouth of Shoal creek on the Missouri river, about 15 miles below Kansas City and four miles south of Liberty.

Last summer they were entertaining, among others, J. D. Taylor, a farmer of near Manola, about 65 miles northwest of Alberta, Canada. The hosts and their guestst were grouped around a small camp fire, scantily attired and partaking of fried catfish with relish, when Taylor grabbed at his leg and arose to his feet with a howl that sounded like the siren of the Gunter.

"I'm a goner, boys," he groaned, as he hopped around on one leg, gripping the other powerfully with both hands and imploring someone between whiles to get a club and get busy. "There's a snake in my pants leg as big as my arm and it's squeezing and biting me to death."

Fischer grabbed one side of the trouser leg in question and Cockrell the other and they ripped with right good will, but no snake appeared. When Taylor was sans pants, however, they took the remnant from his hands, and closely merged with the interior was found the stringy remains of a small frog.

"And that's what imagination will do for you," said Taylor, as he hunted up a box and climbed upon it tailor fashion to finish his interrupted session with the fish.—Kansas City Journal.

NOT DRAWN FROM FLOWERS

Perfumes Today Are Extracted From Almost Everything but Seemingly Natural Source.

There are few perfumes today that cannot be made from chemicals, synthetically, as the chemists call it. Formerly all perfumes were extracted from flowers, fruits, spices, woods or other vegetable and animal substances. The first perfume to be imitated was vanilla, in 1876. Heliotropine followed, but obtained by oxidation of a by-product of camphor.

Terpinol is one of the most freely used constituents of perfumes. This is a near relation of turpentine. With this a little oil and aquafortis a chemist can produce a perfume that can scarcely be distinguished from those exhaled by the lily of the valley, lilac and Cape Jessamine, varying according to the proportions in which the chemicals are blended.

Artificial violet is a combination of citrol (an essence extracted from lemon), Indian vervaine, or lemon verbena, with common acetone, a substance very like pyroligneous acid.

No chemist has been able to counterfeit musk, but a synthetic perfume called musk is made from toluene a by-product of benzine and coal tar. This is changed to a complex carburet, treated with azotic and sulphuric acids, is diluted and sold as musk.

Most of the cheap perfumes are imitations and they are almost always inferior to the flower extracts. So it might properly be said that it is a wise flower that knows its own perfume.

Forced to Sacrifice Beard.

The Wisconsin farmer whom Judge Holhand condemned, in lieu of a fine which he could not pay, to have his flowing beard cut off, may find consolation in the fact that a similar order deprived a man in New York of long and carefully cultivated whiskers a few days ago. The man is employed in a manufacturing concern where his duties bring him in contact with rapid moving machinery. The proprietor's little son, in a visit to the factory, stood near the machine which the bearded man was operating and asked: "Don't the hair ever get mixed up with the silk?" The operator simply smiled, but the father, realizing a danger, gave the man then and there the option of shave or discharge. He chose the former.

PLAYED CARDS IN GRAVEYARD

Old-Time Practice Was Until Recently Indulged in at Least One Place in the United Kingdom.

There is a churchyard in the Borough of St. Marylebone, London, in which a tombstone is pointed out to visitors as the one on which Hogarth's "idle apprentice" threw dice. Attention has just been called to the fact that this practice of gambling on tombstones has come down to the present day in at least one graveyard in the United Kingdom.

A lawsuit just decided has stopped the practice in the churchyard of Dungarvan, an Irish village, where some of the inhabitants were in the habit of playing cards on the slabs placed over graves and of dancing to the music of an accordion. The representative church body was the complainant in the case. I sought and obtained an injunction against sixteen persons, restraining them from trespassing upon the burial-ground and premises adjacent to the Church of St. Mary. The master of rolls, who heard the case, held that this privilege was one of permission, and not a right, and that a churchyard was dedicated to the service of God, and not to the recreation of man.

In the days before the Reformation authorities say, the parish churchyard was used as a public playground. Games and revels were commonly held there on Sundays and holidays. At Whitsuntide there was a sort of church fair, held in graveyards, at which ale brewed by the church wardens was served, while dice-throwing, card-playing and bowls were permitted. Cock-fighting in churchyards did not cease until the eighteenth century. There is a story told that a wealthy man in Hurstbourne Tarrant, a village of Hampshire, ordered that a flat tombstone, large enough to enable the boys to play marbles on it, should be placed over his grave.

FAMOUS LEAPS OF BYARD

Hoof Prints Near Newmarket That Mark Jumps of the Legendary Blind Horse.

Near Newmarket, in Lincolnshire, England, there are three marks of a horse's hoofs, and each mark is seven yards distant from the other. Every man who farms the field is careful to keep these marks from being grass-grown or plowed up. For they are the famous marks of Byard's leap, which is recounted in the following story:

There was once a witch of Newmarket who bewitched the cattle and crops of her neighbors and did all sorts of mischief, and at last one farmer went to a wise man and asked him what to do to overcome the witch.

"Tie a naked dagger around your waist," said the wise man. "Then drive your horses into a pond at night and throw a stone into the pond. Mount the horse that lifts his head up first and gallop off to the witch's hut and bid her out to ride with you."

Byard, a blind horse, was the first to raise his head when the farmer threw the stone, so the farmer mounted him and galloped to the witch's hut.

"Out and ride with me! Out and ride with me!"

And out came the witch. She jumped at the horse, and Byard made his first leap, and got away. She jumped again, and Byard made his second leap and got away. At the third leap she sprang behind the farmer and wound her skinny arms about his waist. But the dagger cut her left arm, and she lost all her power, and was never able to trouble anybody again.

Destructive Pennsylvania Deer.

A traveler along the Sugar Camp road the other day saw three deer, a buck and two does, standing at the very edge of the road near a watering trough. They appeared to be as little concerned as cattle, and made no sign of fright until the driver cracked his whip at them. Then they took to the tall timber.

Just a few days before that Henry Dill, near Trout Run, saw a drove of 14 deer along the road not two miles from the farms. It is in that region that last year several farmers had their wheat crop ruined by droves of deer jumping fences and browsing on the tender growth. There is a strong sentiment among the farmers, who are thus put to loss by these animals, that if they would kill them while on foraging expeditions on their lands the law couldn't harm them. If the deer try their thievery out this spring there is liable to be just such cases put up to the state game authorities.—Williamsport Correspondence North American.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as alleying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

MRS. DORN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DORN, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds."

Foss received 45 votes on the twenty-first ballot, but soon began losing them. On the thirty-first ballot he had 30.

At Baltimore Tuesday the Democratic national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president of the United States was called to order at noon by Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national commitee.

Following the settlement of the temporary chairmanship, the Democratic national committee took up the contested cases involving the seats of 82 delegates. The principal contest arose in Illinois, where representatives of the Hearst-Harrison faction were contesting seats, the credentials for which were held by the Roger Sullivan faction. The committee decided unanimously that the Sullivan delegates should hold the seats.

Alton B. Parker of New York, backed by Candidates Clark, Harmon and Underwood and the conservative leaders, was elected temporary chairman of the convention Tuesday afternoon, defeating William J. Bryan, who was supported by Candidate Wilson and other progressives. The vote was 578 to 506, there being four votes for Senator James A. O'Gorman of New York and five not voting.

Bryan bitterly opposed Parker as temporary chairman and said of the Democratic party: "You cannot frighten it with your Ryans, or buy it with your Belmonts."

Parker Takes the Chair.

Mr. Parker was introduced to the convention as its temporary chairman, and started on his keynote speech. Before he had progressed far the crowd began to leave, and as it was apparent the convention could not be held together, a motion to adjourn until 8 o'clock was put and carried.

The feature of the evening session of the convention was the speech of Alton B. Parker, as temporary chairman. The crowds assembled slowly and the convention was a half hour late in getting down to business. Even then the attendance of the public was small, less than a fourth of the gallery space being filled.

Judge Parker was cheered mildly as he ascended the platform from which he was to address the convention. Later, on being introduced, he was greeted with an enthusiastic demonstration. This was increased and the convention showed a [illegible] friendly feeling for the temporary presiding officer when he complimented Mr. Bryan, asked the indulgence of the convention for his late adversary and urged the convention to honor Mr. Bryan with the chairmanship of the committee on resolutions.

The temporary chairman ended his speech at 9:15 p. m. On a viva voce vote the committees were ordered to get busy immediately, and convention adjourned at 9:35 p. m. until noon Wednesday.

Mr. Bryan was offered the chairmanship of the committee on resolutions but declined it. Senator Kern was then elected chairman. The credentials committee elected Joseph Bell of Indiana chairman.

Senator-Elect Ollie James of Kentucky was chosen by the committee on permanent organization for permanent chairman of the convention.

Unit Rule Abrogated.

There were two sessions of the convention Wednesday. The one beginning at noon was devoted almost entirely to oratory. All of the speakers predicted success for the party in the November elections and derided both the Taft and Roosevelt "sections" of the Republican party. At night the convention, at a session beginning at 8 o'clock, began consideration of committee reports and the work of completing permanent organization. In all of the party councils harmony was urged upon the various factions.

After a two hours' struggle Wednesday evening, the historic practice of the Democratic party in regard to convention procedure was foresworn by a roll call vote. The convention voted its defeat by casting 555½ ballots against it and 495 2-6 in its favor.

Judge Parker called the night session of the convention to order at 8:30 p. m. The Rev. L. O. Crouse, of the Mount Royal M. E. church, made the prayer.

The temporary chairman recognized Congressman J. Harry Covington, of Maryland, chairman of the committee on rules. The single feature of his report was the proposed resolution as advocated by Bryan that the candidates be nominated before the platform was adopted. He spoke in advocacy of the innovation and moved the adoption of the report. A roar of "ayes" followed the putting of the question and there was not a single "no."

THE BRYAN RESOLUTION

"Resolved that in this crisis in our party's career and in our country's history this convention sends to the people of the United States, and assures them that the party of Jefferson and Jackson is still the champion of popular government and equality before the law.

"As proof of our fidelity to the people, we hereby declare ourselves opposed to the nomination of any candidate for president who is the representative of, or who is under any obligation to J. P. Morgan, Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont, or any others of the privilege-hunting or favor-seeking class.

"Be it further resolved that we demand the withdrawal from this convention of any delegate or delegates constituting or representing the 'vested interests.'"

The rules committee chairman then reported a rule that delegates elected unit rule. This started the real fight of the night session, two hours being given to debate.

The rule involved whether the Ohio delegation should vote as a unit for Harmon, as instructed by the state convention, or, whether the advisory primaries should hold 19 of the 48 elected as avowed Wilson men should vote as they elect.

Wilson Demonstration.

Mr. Henry read the minority report and gave way to Mr. Covington, who defended the unit rule as Jeffersonian doctrine. Mr. Covington yielded to John W. Peck, of Ohio, who said the minority report was artfully drawn. A second later he casually mentioned that "great governor of New Jersey," and instantly there was a Wilson demonstration. As the Wilson demonstration slackened, Underwood's partisans suddenly sprang to their feet and began cheering frantically. Pictures of at primaries should be bound by the the house leader were waved from galleries. The demonstration lasted thirty minutes.

The convention voted to abrogate the unit rule as it might apply to states in which direct primaries were held. This broke away from Governor Harmon nineteen votes in his home state and abolished the solid delegation from Ohio, on which Harmon was counting under the unit rule. This was a decided victory for the progressives.

Contested Delegates.

Colonel Bryan was master of the situation when the Democratic convention met for its session at 12:45 o'clock.

Immediately following the opening of the convention, the report of the committe on credentials was presented together, with a minority report on the south Dakota cases.

Champ Clark's managers decided to make no minority report to the convention in the Illinois contest. It was intimated to them that such a report might hurt Clark with the Illinois delegation. This ended the Harrison-Hearst contest.

At two thirty roll call was ordered on the South Dakota contests, order having been restorted. Wilson delegates won, the official vote being 639½ to 415.

Following this came the report of the committee on permanent organization and the speech of Permanent Chairman Ollie James.

After the permanent chairman's address the convention adjourned until 8 p. m.

When the working subcommittee of the committee on resolutions met, the members found themselves without a platform draft of suffleient cohesiveness to form a basis for the committee's oprations. A conclusion was arrived at speedily to appoint a second subcommittee to prepare a draft for the conveniences of the subcommittee and later of the full committee, and Mr. Bryan and Mr. O'Gorman were designated to perform that service.

Bryan's Resolution.

The sensation of the convention came at Thursday night's session, when William J. Bryan offered a resolution calling for the withdrawal of Thomas F. Ryan and August Belmont of New York from the convention. Mr. Ryan is a member of the Virginia delegation and August Belmont [illegible] delegation. Both Ryan and Belmont were in the hall when the resolution was presented. It caused a tremendous uproar and precipitated one of the most disorderly scenes witnessed in the convention hall since the Democrats gathered at Baltimore.

Mr. Byran moved to consider the resolution immediately. He then read again his resolution [illegible] representing or under obligations to Morgan, Ryan or Belmont withdraw from the convention. More disorder followed. Mr. Bryan was cheered as he began to speak in favor of his resolution. He denounced "the efforts being made to sell the party into bondage," and asked for a chance to go on record against the Wall street powers, "one who sits with New York and the other with Virginia," and wanted New York to call their roll on the withdrawal of Ryan and Belmont. "I ask for a majority of the New York delegates, not Mr. Murphy," said Mr. Bryan.

The convention was in an uproar. Delegates and visitors were out of their seats, standing on chairs, frensied with excitement. The New York leaders had their heads together and the big men of the convention were dashing here and there for hasty conferences. Chairman James scolded the galleries and said they should be good. Mr. Bryan withdrew that part of the resolution naming Ryan and Belmont, and the resolution was passed by a vote of 883 to 196.

It was 11 o'clock before this muss was out of the way and then the nominating speeches began, W. B. Bankhead presenting the name of Oscar Underwood as the first candidate. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri nominated Champ Clark, Henry Wade Rogers of New Haven placed in nomination Governor Simeon Baldwin of Connecticut, and John W. Wescott did the same service for Woodrow Wilson.

Senator Shively nominated Governor Marshall of Indiana and the band played "On the banks of the Wabash." Governor Harmon was nominated by M. A. Daugherty of Ohio.

The First Ballot.

After the candidates had all been placed in nomination it was 7 o'clock in the morning. One ballot was taken, which resulted:

CLARK	440 1-2
WILSON	324
HARMON	148
UNDERWOOD	117 1-2
MARSHALL	31
BALDWIN	22
SULZER	2
BRYAN	1

There was no choice, as a two-thirds vote, 728, is necessary to nominate. After the announcement of the ballot the convention adjourned until 4 p. m.

At the evening session eleven ballots in all were taken without result.

As the tenth ballot was being taken New York, which had been in caucus since the ninth ballot, deserted Harmon and deposited 81 votes for Clark, giving Clark a total of 537 votes. The taking of the ballot was held up until further missionary work could be done among the other delegations.

The announcement of New York's shift to Clark threw the convention into an uproar. The Clark supporters went wild and continued the demonstration for half an hour. The Clark demonstration was followed by a wild uproar on the part of Woodrow Wilson's supporters.

At 3:05 the convention adjourned until 1 p. m. Saturday.

Balloting Without Result.

The Democratic national convention reassembled at 1:07 p. m. Saturday to resume balloting on a candidate for the presidency. Twelve ballots had been taken during the previous early morning and all night sessions without result.

Mr. Bryan reiterated and intensified his earlier statement that no Democrat could afford to accept the nomination if New York's vote is necessary to give him a two-thirds majority. He asserted again his belief in the proposition of a single term for president. When asked: "Do you want the nomination now?" he looked pityingly at his questioner and made no reply.

After the fourteenth ballot had been taken Mr. Bryan arose and asked permission to explain his vote. There were loud cries of "No," but also of "Bryan, Bryan!"

Permission was granted, Mr. Sulzer in the chair. Mr. Bryan said, reading from a written statement:

"Nebraska voting Clark 13, Wilson 3, serves notice on the convention that some Nebraska delegates will not vote for any man whose nomination depends upon the vote of New York. I shall withhold my vote for Mr. Clark as long as New York's vote is recorded for him. I will take the same position with regard to any other man."

After being in session until 11 o'clock Saturday night the twenty-sixth ballot was taken and the convention adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday morning. There was no agreement reached over Sunday and when the convention reassembled the deadlock was as strong as ever.

The twenty-seventh ballot taken on Monday showed little change, but on the twenty-eighth Indiana deserted Marshall and cast 29 votes for Wilson and 1 for Kern.

Wilson passed Clark on ballot 30.

Continent That Was Lost.

One of the wonders of the word that men hear little about is the Lost Continent. Sea-going men are familiar with the chain of little islands that extend from the continent of Asia down to Australia. Should the ocean go down five hundred feet this Lost Continent would be restored. It is believed that a few aeons ago this Lost Continent really existed.

CALL FOR THIRD PARTY MEETING

Convention to Assemble in Chicago August 5.

NAME--PROGRESSIVE NATIONAL

Call Is Signed by Roosevelt Leaders from Forty States and Addressed to All the People of United States.

New York, July 8.—Colonel Roosevelt's third party convention will be held in Chicago on Aug. 5, either in the Coliseum or Orchestra Hall.

The call for it, signed by Roosevelt leaders of forty states and addressed "to the people of the United States, without regard to past political differences," was issued through Senator Joseph M. Dixon, campaign manager, in the new national headquarters of the party at the Hotel Manhattan.

The party will probably be called the Progressive National Party. The convention will decide as to that. Eight states—Maine, North Carolina, Delaware, South Carolina, Arkansas, Mississippi, Idaho and Nevada—are not represented in the provisional committee which signed the call for the convention. Senator Dixon explained that in all these states Roosevelt controls or has a chance to control the regular Republican organization, hence the omissions.

The method of choosing delegates to the convention will be left to the leaders of the various states. Probably they will be chosen in conventions. Senator Dixon said that the time is too short for primaries. One or two states have already held Roosevelt conventions. The call is as follows:

"To the people of the United States without regard to past political differences who, through repeated betrayals, realize that today the power of the crooked political bosses and of the privileged classes behind them is so strong in the two old party organizations that no helpful movement in the real interests of our country can come out of either:

"We believe that the time has come for a National Progressive movement—a nation-wide movement—on nonsectional lines, so that the people may be served in sincerity and truth by an organization unfettered by obligation to conflicting interests;

"Who believe in the right and capacity of the people to rule themselves, and effectively to control all the agencies of their government, and who hold that only through social and industrial justice, thus secured, can honest property find permanent protection;

"Who believe that government by the few tends to become, and has in fact become, government by the sordid influences that control the few;

"Who believe that only through the movement contemplated can we obtain in the nation and the several states the legislation demanded by the modern industrial evolution, legislation which shall favor honest business and yet control the great agencies of modern business so as to insure their being used in the interest of the whole people; legislation which shall promote prosperity and at the same time secure the better and more equitable diffusion of prosperity; legislation which shall promote the economic well-being of the honest farmer, wage worker, professional man and business man alike, but which shall at the same time strike in efficient fashion—and not merely pretend to strike—at the roots of privilege in the world of industry no less than in the world of politics;

"Who believe that only this type of wise industrial evolution will avert industrial revolution;

"Who believe that wholesome party government can come only if there is wholesome party management in a spirit of service to the whole country and who hold that the commandment delivered at Sinai, 'Thou Shalt Not Steal' applies to politics as well as to business;

"To all in accord with these views a call is hereby issued by the provisional committee under the resolution of the massmeeting held in Chicago on June 22nd last, to send from each state a number of delegates whose votes in the convention shall count for as many votes as the state shall have senators and representatives in congress, to meet in mass convention in Chicago on the 5th day of August, 1912, for the purpose of nominating candidates to be supported for the positions of president and vice president of the United States."

FIVE STORES BURN

Flames at Marquette, Mich., Cause a Loss of $125,000.

Marquette, Mich., July 8.—Fire destroyed $125,000 worth of property in the business quarter, burning five big stores in the Bacon block and the Vierling building, two of the largest structures in Marquette.

Firemen from outside cities assisted the Marquette department in confining the flames to the two buildings.

AMERICANS LEAD OLYMPIC GAMES

Three in 100-Meter Race Shut Out Foreigners.

CRAIG OF DETROIT IS FIRST

Carlisle Indian Wins in Pentathlon—United States Athletes Showing Up Well in All Contests Entered.

Stockholm, July 8.—Three American runners flashed over the line at the finish of the 100 meter race, beating the only foreign competitor, and placing the United States in the lead of all other nations in the Olympic games of 1912. With the exception of the javelin throw won by the Swede Saturday this was the first final decided.

Ralph C. Craig of Detroit, Alvah T. Meyer of the Irish-American A. C., and Donald F. Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania were the men to finish in the order named and this place all the points to the credit of America.

One other event was decided and this was also won by an American, the Carlisle Indian, James Thorpe. He came out with flying colors in the pentathlon, winning with only nine points scored against him. F. R. Bie of Norway was second and another American, James J. Donahue of Los Angeles, third.

In the events in which trials or semi-finals were held the representatives of the United States performed as creditably as they did on the opening day and qualified so many men that the chances [illegible] score heavily are [illegible]. [illegible] running high jump [illegible] men who cleared [illegible] qualified for the final were Americans, England getting two of the remaining places and Sweden, Finland and Hungary [illegible]. The Americans who qualified were:

John G. Johnstone, Boston A. C.; [illegible], New Haven A. C.; Harry J. Grumpelt, New York A. C.; George L. Horine, Leland Stanford university; Alma W. Richards, Brigham Young university, and James Thorpe, Carlisle Indian School.

In the semi-finals of the 800 meters America also came through with flying colors. Two heats were run, four in each, to qualify for the final, and of the eight chosen America supplied six. Hans Braun of Germany and G. M. Brock of Canada were the men that slipped into the final with Uncle Sam's lads, the four British runners being shut out. America's representatives in the final are:

James E. Meredith, Mercersburg academy; Melvin W. Sheppard, Irish-American A. C.; H. N. Putnam, Cornell university; C. B. Edmundson, Seattle A. C.; D. S. Caldwell, Massachusetts Agricultural college, and Ira N. Davenport, University of Chicago.

In the trials for the 10,000 meters, America, although making a good showing, did not shine so distinctly. Lewis Tawanina, the Carlisle Indian, gained a place in the second heat and Louis Scott of the South Paterson A. C. finished third in the third heat. These were the only Americans to qualify.

American swimmers also performed valiantly, though there is a chance that a misunderstanding will keep them out of the final competition without an opportunity to measure their speed with the foreigners.

GIRL'S LIFE IS SAVED

Judge Owen and Mayor Harrison Rescue Drowning Indian Maid.

Chicago, July 8.—John E. Owens, bachelor judge of the county court, who is at present on a fishing trip in upper Michigan, rescued a young Indian girl from drowning in Wassa lake, Waucedah, Mich.

The mayor and the judge were on the banks of the lake at the time the Indian girl decided to go for a swim. The Chicagoans neglected their fishing to watch the swimmer's progress. About 300 feet off shore she shrieked. Judge Owens doffed his [illegible] and part of his clothing. He dived from the pier and hastened to the aid of the swimmer. She was [illegible] when the judge reached her.

Mayor Harrison found a rowboat and the judge and his charge were picked up. The girl spoke the best English and thanked the judge effusively.

Hartman Foundry company, pleaded guilty in the superior court of a $210 forgery. He also confessed that a shortage of $1,[illegible] exists in his accounts.

He was remanded for sentence by Judge [illegible]. Stockdale is twenty-eight years old and unmarried. His home is in Ravenna, Mich. While admitting his guilt in court he said he had gone wrong and began drinking.

STATE DESIRES PROPERTY

[illegible] Condemnation Proceedings in Kalamazoo for Athletic Field.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 8.—Condemnation proceedings were started by the state against property owned by E. N. Wattles that the state desires for an athletic field for the western Michigan normal school.

Numerous efforts have been made to purchase the property from Mr. Wattles, but he has turned every offer down. The field is located directly across the street from the Normal [illegible] and is an ideal one for athletic field.

The Western Normal has been without a suitable athletic field and the property that is being condemned is just what the Normal desires.

TRAIN VICTIM IDENTIFIED

Man Killed at Erie Was Monroe County Farmer.

Monroe, Mich., July 8.—The man who was killed last Tuesday at Erie, south of here, by a northbound Pere Marquette passenger train, was identified by Charles [illegible], a cousin, as that of Leonard Calhoun, forty-three years old and a farmer of London township.

The unfortunate man boarded an Ann Arbor excursion train last Sunday at the village of Azalia for Toledo. It is thought he concluded to walk home, some eighteen miles, got on the wrong track and fell asleep. He leaves his parents, one brother and two sisters.

FINAL GRILL FOR LORIMER OPENED

Dillingham and McCumber Are Heard in His Defense.

MYERS OF MONTANA OPPOSED

Last Stage of Great Fight in United States Senate Sees Friends and Foes Spread Out in Oratorical Line of Battle.

Washington, July 8.—The final stage of the second trial of William Lorimer on the charge of misconduct in procuring his election to the United States senate from Illinois was entered upon in the senate with general debate.

The prospect is that a vote will not be had until the latter part of the week.

Senator Dillingham of Vermont, chairman of the Lorimer investigating committee, and Senator McCumber of North Dakota, supported the Illinois senator's right to his seat, while Senator Myers of Montana made his maiden speech in the senate in opposition to Mr. Lorimer.

Mr. Dillingham devoted himself to an effort to demonstrate that Mr. Lorimer had not been a candidate for the senate until after the senatorial deadlock in the Illinois legislature had continued for more than four months and until it looked as if there must be an adjournment without action. He gave an elaborate account of political conditions in Illinois, and after undertaking to show that the Democrats would not support the re-election of Senator Hopkins, said that on the other hand they were willing to turn to Mr. Lorimer because of their personal regard for him. He said Mr. Lorimer had thought he could be of greater use in the house than in the senate.

Senator McCumber's speech was caustic. He charged that popular sentiment against the Illinois senator was due to ignorance on the subject. Some senators had, he said, been defeated for re-election because of their votes for Mr. Lorimer, but as for himself his vote would not be influenced by popular clamor regardless of the effect of his vote on his own senatorial fortunes. The case had been once tried, he said, and he believed the doctrine of res adjudicata entirely applicable.

Mr. Myers would not accept the doctrine of res adjudicata. He regarded this as simply a new trial and contended that if the senate should not be permitted to grant such a trial it would be the only tribunal controlled by the English system of jurisprudence to which that right would be denied.

The fact that fifty-three Democrats had voted in the Illinois legislature for Mr. Lorimer, a Republican, was sufficent reason for suspicion as Mr. Myers saw the matter.

"It is proof that there is something the matter either with the head or the heart," he said.

Expressing confidence in the irregularity of the Lorimer election, he declared the very atmosphere of the Illinois legislature was charged with corruption on the day of the Lorimer election.

Roosevelt Man's Successor Named.

Springfield, Ill., July 8.—Governor Deneen appointed George W. Cyrus of Camp Point member of the state board of equalization from the Fifteenth district, to succeed Julius Kespohl, Jr., who resigned because he had quit the Republican party to become a Roosevelt progressive.

ALONG THE INDIAN FRONTIER

Kachins Are a Wild and Warlike People, but Are Most Hospitable to Travelers.

"Hidden in the mountains on both side of the frontier road are villages of Kachins, a wild and warlike race which causes much anxiety to the Chinese and to the peaceful Shans inhabiting the neighboring valleys," writes Archibald Rose, British consul at Yunan, China, in an article describing the "Chinese Frontier of India." "The men are keen looking fellows, who spend their days in sharpening their dahs, or long two handed swords, their nights in drinking and in harrying the marches. The burdens of life are literally borne by their women folk, long trains of whom are met along the roads, carrying on their backs great baskets of grain depending from a strap across their foreheads, while their hands are busy spinning strands of cotton yarn, or weaving a straw bracelet for their sweethearts, as they toil up the mountain slopes. They wear a short kilt, supported by numbers of loose rattan girdles, the lobes of their ears are pierced and distended to carry long tubes of silver or rolls of red cloth, and their faces are coarsened by hard times.

"They are hospitable to people, these Kachins, offering a welcome to any passing traveler without question or hope of reward. This spirit of hospitality, indeed, is carried to a point which might almost be considered extravagance. I remember a case at a recent frontier meeting in which a transfrontier Kachin appeared as the complainant. He had accepted an invitation to dinner, dined not wisely, but too well, and fallen down a precipice on his way home.

"The result was a broken leg, and, in consequence, he now appeared in court to sue his host for damages. The erring host paid up quite cheerfully, and the international incident was thus amicably settled over the body of a sacrificial pig."

FIRST SCORE FOR THE MAJOR

Man of Law Wasted Time in Contemplation, but His Opponent Was Quick to Act.

There lived at one time, in the fashionable quarter of Dublin an eminent lawyer who afterwards came to occupy a position on the judicial bench. He was a man of high professional attainments but of testy and irritable temper. His next door neighbor was a retired major, noted for the eccentricity of his habits. Between the two there was anything but a friendly feeling and they did all in their power to annoy and harass each other. One night, memorable in Ireland as "The night of the great storm," the major's chimneys were blown down. Crash they went through the roof of the lawyer's house and thence down through floor after floor, carrying havoc in their course. The man of law was in no good humor as he contemplated the destruction, and what made matters worse was that it was the major's chimney that had occasioned the wreck. His mind was actively engaged in devising some process by which he could get satisfaction from his arch enemy, when this missive arrived from the major:

"Send me back my bricks immediately or I'll put the matter in the hands of an attorney."

YOUTH, TIME OF ANOMALIES

Springtime of Life Is Full of Contradictions, But Is Great Flood of Energy.

How shall I describe Youth, the time of contradictions and anomalies? The fiercest radicalism, the most dogged conservatisms, irreparable gayety, bitter melancholy—all of these moods are equally part of that showery springtime of life. One thing, at least, it clearly is, a great, rich rush and flood of energy. It is as if the store of life had been accumulating through the slow, placid years of childhood, and suddenly the dam had broken and the waters rushed out, furious and uncontrolled, before settling down into the quieter channels of middle life. The youth is suddenly seized with a poignant consciousness of being alive, which is quite wanting to the naive unquestioning existence of the child. He finds himself overpoweringly urged toward self-expression. Just as the baby, born into a 'great, blooming, buzzing confusion,' and attracted by every movement, every color, every sound, kicks madly in response in all directions, and only gradually gets his movements co-ordinated with the orderly and precise movements of his elders—so the youth suddenly born into a confusion of ideas and appeals and traditions responds in the most chaotic way to this new spiritual world, and only gradually learns to find his way about in it, and get his thoughts and feelings into some kind of order.—Atlantic Monthly.

ORIGIN OF A POPULAR DOG

Ancestors of the Scottish Terrier Were Used by the "Todhunters" of the Highlands.

In ancient times each district in the Highlands had its "todhunter," whose duty it was to see carefully that the then flourishing firm of fox, otter and company did not do a too flourishing business in lamb or poultry. Sometimes these todhunters were of "the laird's men," sometimes they were farmers and grazers; but always they were local dignitaries. There was honor and considerable profit in their office, and in time it came to be more or less hereditary. Their duty was simple. They waged a war of extermination against the vermin, which, however, was a very different matter from the good old English sport of fox hunting.

In the rough country horse and hound would have been worse than useless, and reynard made his den in such rocky ground that he could not be dug out. The sole solution was a dog small enough to folow the fox, or otter, or badger, or wildcat into his lair; strong enough to bring him out dead or alive; and game enough to do both. A dog developed from this necessity, and that dog was the ancestor of the present-day Scottish terrier.—Outing.

Dressed Chicken.

She wanted to surprise her husband with a chicken dinner, but after she had gone out into their little chicken run and captured a toothsome-looking young rooster there, she lost her nerve. She simply couldn't bear to hand it the axe. There was a small bottle of chloroform in the house, however, so she decided to prepare his roostership for the oven via the anaesthesia route.

He succumbed quickly, but to her horror he recovered consciousness as soon as she had finished plucking him. Stricken with remorse then, she clother his naked form in a hastily made suit of white flannel, that fitted him like a regular "varsity made" garment. Then she turned him out into the chicken run again.

Editors insist upon happy endings of stories nowadays, so the remainder of this tale is better left untold. Sufficient to say that although fine feathers make fine birds, white flannel never made this rooster himself again.

Inconsiderate Knot.

The drydocking of the schooner Forester, which put in at San Francisco the other day in distress, revealed the fact that the leak, the source of the schooner's distress, was merely a knothole. The knot in one of the bottom planks had fallen out, leaving a hole an inch wide by one and one-half inches long. To keep out the water that came through this knothole the Forester's pumps were kept going night and day and the vessel arrived with ten feet of water in its hold. The desertion of its hole by this faithless knot imperiled the lives of the schooner's crew and involved owners and underwriters in an expense of more than $1,000. The hole has been plugged up, and as this is all that ailed the Forester the schooner will proceed on its voyage as soon as the cargo has been reloaded.

Strange Things in the Wash.

The women are in such a hurry these days to get to their clubs that they are rather careless in wrapping up their family washing which goes to the laundry. Such articles as combs, brushes, shoe-buttoners, pocket knives, dishes and many other articles are quite ordinary finds in family washings. Recently an Erie laundryman rolled a poodle dog out of a family washing. Last week he found an alarm clock.—Kansas City Journal.

Wellesley College in Lead.

Wellesley college is said to have more graduates in the mission field than any other woman's college in this country. Gertrude Chandler, of the class of 1879, now Mrs. Mychoff, was the first Wellesley missionary in the field. She went to Bombay immediately after taking her degree in the first class graduated from Wellesley. The college is represented in the mission field of every country in Asia with the single exception of Korea. There are Wellesley missionaries scattered through South America, Spain, the Philippines, Mexico and Africa.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs colds or any bronchial affection its unequaled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

What Makes A Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and tired, listless, worn out feeling, "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart, for making such a good medicine." Only 50c. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son's.

RAMS NEW HAMPSHIRE

Fall River Steamer Strikes United States Battleship.

No Lives Are Lost, but Both Vessels Must Go into Drydock for Repairs.

Newport, R. I., July 8. — The Fall River line steamship Commonwealth, Captain W. B. Appleby, soon after leaving here for Fall River rammed the battleship New Hampshire, Captain James H. Oliver, in Narragansett Bay, inflicting damages to both that will necessitate their going to dry dock. Luckily there were no casualties.

The accident occurred at 4:25 a. m. There were not many moving about on either vessel at the time and it so happened that the boats struck at points where there were no sleeping quarters. The steel and wooden hulls at the point of impact crumpled up like paper despite the fact that the Commonwealth was beginning to slow down and her paddlewheels were beginning to reverse.

The collison was due to fog, one of the thickest that has enveloped the bay, making it impossible to see a boat's length.

The Commonwealth's bow was badly stove in. The steamer struck the battleship fair and square bow on. The Commonwealth had a large passenger list, 1,100, and a heavy cargo of freight.

The stern of the New Hampshire is badly torn and twisted.

UPHOLDS LIABILITY MEASURE

Shelby County Court Sustains Clause Relating to Number of Employes.

Shelbyville, Ind., July 8.—In overruling a demurrer that had been filed by the defendant in the case of Warren Myers vs. the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway company, a suit for damages for personal injuries received while engaged in decorating the interior of a depot, Judge Blair upheld the employers' liability act of 1911 relating to the employment of five or more persons.

The defendant had attacked the law on the ground that it could not prescribe restrictions for persons employing five or more persons and exempt those employing fewer than that number.

The WEEK'S DOINGS

BAD ACCIDENT

Bernard Babcock son of George Babcock met with quite a bad accident Saturday. He was playing around the hay fork in Mrs. Abner Wilson barn, when his hand got caught in the cog wheel and was quite badly crushed.

Dr. Pauline Bredow hastined to his relief, but for lack of proper dressing thought best to bring him to Dr. Hardy which she did at once, in her auto, Dr. Hardy gave him the neccessary attention and he was taken to his home.

ARRESTED

A young man giving his name as Leon C. Ballard hired a horse for a three mile drive July 4th at the livery of G. B. Garlinghouse. Not returning when expected, suspicion was aroused and John Smith was notified who telephoned around the country and finally located him at Cement City where he was working up a horse trade. He was arrested there by the Deputy Sheriff and taken to Adrian, Saturday morning he was brought to Tecumseh by Sheriff Knowles for examination before Justice Hosmer, in default of $500 bail he was remanded to jail until the October term of court.

He claimed his home was in Binghamton, N. Y.

He traded horses previous to this with a farmer in Franklin giving his name as George Harwood. He got a check of $15 in this trade which he had cashed in town.

BOASTING A POOR EXERCISE

It Loosens the Fiber of the Brain and Makes Men Soft and Flabby.

Boasting is a poor intellectual exercise. It seems to loosen the fibers of the brain and make them soft and flabby. When we read in the New York Medical Journal that card-playing is injurious to the mind, we remember what Dr. Edward Everett Hale said about it: "The bragging of a people used to playing cards," and then coupling the two observations, we get a standpoint from which to view the discrepancies of society.

The Medical Journal treats the matter scientifically and learns from psychology that the keeping the mind on exciting uncertainties renders it inefficient in the consideration of serious things afterward. Go, for instance, from an exciting game of baseball and pick up your Emerson, Ruskin, Sartor Resartus or Progress and Poverty, and see where you are. Stuck in the mud, that's certain. You cannot budge a barley corn. Now, keep that up, day after day, with any sort of sport and then take account of your mental condition.

We suspect the Medical Journal is right, and Dr. Hale's illustration is pat. And if you want to make an effective thinker of yourself, it would be well not to get daft on any game. Take hold of it as an incidental, if you bother with it at all.—Ohio State Journal.

COLONEL READY WITH BLUFF

Writer of Detective Stories Found Himself at Home in Somewhat Trying Situation.

The late Col. H. K. Shakelford, who was a prolific writer of detective stories, had as much presence of mind on one occasion as was ever shown by any of his heroes. He was visiting in a western city, and, having spent the evening with some friends, did not start back to his hotel until after midnight. As he was passing through a dark and desolate street, a footpad stepped out from behind a tree, leveled a revolver at the colonel, and told him to hand over his money. But the authority on detective law was equal to the demand of the moment. He said afterward he thought he had stolen some of his own stuff in extricating himself from the trouble.

"What are you doing on Elm avenue?" he asked the robber, in a threatening tone. "Confound you, I am working this street, and I want you to understand I'll have no other crooks butting in!"—The Popular Magazine.

Lament Religious Apathy.

In Japan all kinds of Christians are lamenting the religious stagnation that seems to have settled on the country, says a writer in America, a Roman Catholic paper. Of the 65,000 Catholics, 40,000 are descendants of the converts of the seventeenth century, and the Greek Catholics have only 20,000 followers. "After 40 years of evangelization there are only somewhere between 80,000 and 100,000 Protestants of all sects," says the writer, who adds that the Japanese are not irreligious, but "like other peoples they are suffering from the religious apathy and unconcern of the times. Just as in Europe and America, the modern Japanese adore the golden calf and, as elsewhere, are struggling for money and place, the natural result of the adoption of a materialistic civilization."

The Fat Rooster.

Very few people credit chickens with having much sense; but at least one young rooster proved, without doubt, that he was wiser than he looked. This cockerel has a habit of ruffing up his feathers during feeding time, and as he was about twice as fat as the rest of the fowls, his owner decided to watch him and to try to find out the cause of his queer behavior. One day, as the fowls sauntered off after being fed, the rooster carried his portly self to a secluded place by the wood pile, and shook himself vigorously; whereupon down fell more than half a pint of grain which his ruffled feathers had caught at feeding time. This he proceeded to eat at his leisure. As he continued to ruffle his feathers and to saunter off to the wood pile after meals, and gained in size daily, his owner had every reason to believe that the rooster had more than his share of common chicken sense.

Annual School Meeting

District No. 7

BUDGET FOR YEAR 1912—13 $8,500

The Annual School Meeting of District No. 7, was held Monday evening July 8, in the Library rooms, there were ten men and five women present.

The meeting was called to order by the Moderator, E. H. Halliday. The yearly report was then called for, and was given by Secretary, Charles F. Patterson, Dr. Brown the Treasurer, then gave his report followed by the report of the Library, given by C. F. Patterson. These reports were accepted and placed on file.

The Financial Statement of District No. 7, will be given in full in the Friday issue of the Tecumseh Herald.

Mr. Halliday stated that there were three vacancies on the School board to be filled, E. H. Halliday, Dr. Frost and Dr. Brown.

E. H. Halliday and Dr. Brown were elected to succeed themselves. J. H. Smith then placed in nomination the name of F. B. Wood to take the vacancy made by the absence of Dr. Frost, Mr. Wood was duly elected.

The budgett made up for the ensuing year of 1912—13 was $8500, divided as follows, $6400 for teachers, $1200 general expenses and $900 for Library. Moderator then called for any suggestions for the coming year.

The general opinion of the large (?) number of interested people in District No. 7 present was that the subject of a new school house was the most important thing to be considered.

Mr. Smith stated that while the school board had this under consideration for a long time, yet they did wish it to originate from the board, but to be the wish of the general public. Mr. Wood then made a motion that the school board be instructed to formulate plans and get estimates for a new building there to be brought before a special meeting of District No 7. This motion amended by R. K. Anderson, that the board be instructed to use money to pay architects for advice and plans. Motion as amended carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

RECEPTION

The Sabbath School of the Methodist church tendered a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collins Monday evening, in the parlors of the church. Mr. Collins has been Superintendent of the Sunday School for some time, but has severed his connection as he and his family are about to remove to Clinton. Ice cream and cake were served, and a token of the esteem in which they were held, Mr. and Mrs. Collins were presented with a nice rocking chair.

SHETLAND PONIES AND BRICK YARD.

An Interesting Inspection of the New and Old Industries.

A lovely motor ride Saturday night out to the Bert Comfort farm, followed by an inspection of the Shetland ponies, made a delightful evening for the editoral force of THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

About a year ago Bert Comfort purchased a span of Shetland ponies in Jackson, Dove and Rainbow, for which he paid $300, both of noted pedigrees, the color of sorrel and white in beautiful marking. They are very gentle and docile and any child can play around them. About four weeks ago he purchased in Adrian a jet black pony less than a year old, named "Cracker Jack," for which he paid $150, and now the newest addition is a little three-weeks' old colt, He is marked in mouse color and white as perfect as if painted and makes a fine playmate for the children, It would pay anybody to drive out and see these ponies in their pasture.

While there, the old brick yard, one of the oldest industries of Tecumseh, claimed our attention. Few realize how long this has been in operation, Fifty-three years ago Elwood Comfort, the father of Bert, started a brickyard on the west side of the road. Here he made brick for five years, when he formed a partnership with Dr. M. A. Patterson, Dr. Patterson furnishing the money and Elwood Comfort the experience. Later this partnership was dissolved, but the yard on the east side has been in operation for 48 years, furnishing brick and tile to Tecumseh and surrounding country for all these years.

They had just finished the burning of the Kiln in which there were 1400 brick and 1600 tile in different sizes.

Mr. Bert Comfort states that he finds a ready sale for all his products.

He pointed out the large area of land that had been used for its clay and filled up again. Right near this spot is the old house, where Fred Frary, Lon Chapman and Frank Bangs boarded the men who worked upon the brickyard. Old time residents will remember these men.

On the west side of the road stands the brick house built by Elwood Comfort out of brick made in this yard. In visiting this place it calls to mind the good old Quaker folk who were among Tecumseh's early settler and who by industry and perseverance made possible the beautiful farming country that surrounds us.

With the return auto ride was completed a most enjoyable and interesting trip,

Soda Water From Tablets.

Bohemia has what is called "soda bonbons." The "bonbons" are tablets of two kinds, acid and alkali, and one pair is sufficient to produce about half a quart of soda water.

COMMERCE CLUB.

Meeting Held July 5th, Well Attended, and Commerce Club of Tecumseh Made Permanent.

At a meeting held at the Library building Friday evening, July 5th, there were forty present.

The meeting was called to order by J. H. Smith, the temporary chairman holding over from the meeting held at the Barrett House, F. S. Anderson also acting as secretary.

The first business that came before the meeting was to form themselves into a permanent club which was done under the name of "The Commerce Club of Tecumseh."

Mr. Smith then called upon Mr. C. A. Wright to read the constitution and by-laws under which the Club was to be formed. This constitution and by-laws, with a few exceptions, was the same under which the defunct Business Men's Club was governed.

F. S. Anderson was then called upon for a report of the committee who had been working up the street lighting proposition. He stated that they had met with fine success and everyone seemed to favor the proposition.

F. B. Wood made a motion that the committee who had been working, become the executive board of the Club. This motion carried.

F. D. Avery made a motion that the second Tuesday in July become the annual meeting of the Club. Carried.

Mr. Wood moved that the executive board and the council confer together in regard to the lighting of the village, Mr. Smith, the president of the village, stating that the council at an informal meeting signified their approval of the lighting proposition.

Mr. Smith gave anyone present the privilege of asking questions relative to the lighting.

P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, in a very concise manner, stated they wished to raise $2700. They were to be 12 posts on each business block on Chicago street, six on each side and 80 feet apart; on Evans street, 8 posts to the block, 100 feet apart, on one side only. These posts weigh from 600 to 800 lbs. The design has not yet been decided upon, but will be something artistic and durable. Each post will contain five lights, four with branching arms and drooping lights. These will be 60 watts. The center light will be an upright light of 100 watts. The maintenance of each post per annum is $17.50. The cable used is the same as used in Battle Creek. The lights in the summer will be turned on at 7 o'clock and continue until 11 o'clock; in the winter will be turned on at 5 o'clock and continue until 10 o'clock This may be varied after the subjec has been more thoroughly investigated.

Motion was then made to adjourn and a meeting of the executive board followed.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of Mrs. Peter Morton who departed this life July 9, 1911:

The moon and stars are beaming
Upon a quiet grave.
There sleepeth without dreaming
The loved we could not save.

All is gloom within our dwelling,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever passed away,

A bitter grief, a shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
Our loss is great—We'll not complain,
But trust in God to meet again.

Gone but not forgotten by her husband and children,

PETER MORTON AND FAMILY.

In Thankfulness.

Notwithstanding all that I have suffered, notwithstanding all the pain and weariness and anxiety and sorrow that necessarily enter into life, and the inward errings that are worse than all, I would end my record with a devout thanksgiving to the great author my being. For more and more am I unwilling to make any gratitude to him what is commonly called "a thanksgiving for mercies,"—for any benefits or blessings that are peculiar to myself, or my friends, or indeed to any man. Instead of this I would have it to be gratitude for all that belongs to my life and being—for joy and sorrow, for health and sickness, for success and disappointment, for virtue and for temptation, for life and death; because I believe that all is meant for good.—Orville Dewey.

Probably Not.

"The doctor says I musn't read anything exciting."

"I've brought you a nice book entitled 'How to Know the Wild Flowers.' I don't think that will increase your heart action very much."

OUTSHINES THEM ALL

The biggest day of amusement in the history of Tecumseh will take place on July 10. This will be the occasion of the visit of the famous Sun Brothers' World's Progressive Shows. This popular tented exhibition is now on its twentieth annual tour and the assertion is made by the Sun management that the show is richer and newer in all departments. Each succeeding season a new company of artists are engaged for the Big Top performance. This season all previous efforts are eclipsed. In fact they outshine them all. The Zoologic and Wild Beast display is a mammoth one and serves to introduce the greatest and most select collection seen here in a decade.

No fakirs, gamblers or purple attraction are ever countenanced about this show, It is essentially the purest and cleanest conducted show ever organized. Two performances take place daily, in rainy or fair weather. Positively no curtailment.

ROBS THIEF; GOES TO PRISON

Duluth Man Steals Another's Loot and Draws Ninety-Day Term.

Duluth, Minn., July 8.—For robbing a thief, John B. Lessard, twenty-three years old, a railroad man, was sentenced to ninety days' imprisonment at hard labor.

"I saw the thief hide some revolvers, knives and other trticles which he had taken from a store at Proctor," said Lessard in court. "I took the plunder, and when I was arrested, the goods were found on me."

BOY KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Struck While Hauling Hay Near Williamston.

Williamston, Mich., July 8.—While walking beside a load of hay he was hauling to the barn, George Lay, aged nineteen, was struck by a bolt of lightning and instantly killed.

A younger sister was upon the load driving, and escaped injury. Young Lay lived with his grandfather, George Lay, Sr., three miles southwest of here and had been engaged in hauling hay from the field when overtaken by the storm.

Drew the Line at Cats.

To the list of divorces for seemingly trivial causes—such as "cruelty in not taking me out riding," "cruelty in requiring me to sew on buttons," etc., has now been added a divorce granted to a man who charged his wife with "cruelty in keeping cats in the house," thereby preventing him from occupying his favorite chair. On the judge's inquiring, "Why didn't you put the cats out of the house?" the man answered, "My wife is a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and I was afraid she would have me arrested."

"Bluebird" Luncheon.

Bluebird luncheons are one of the pretty fancies of the spring, and Mrs. Edward McLean recently extended such a courtesy to Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, who was visiting her mother, Mrs. Richard Townsend of Washington. Bluebirds of exquisite plumage fluttered about on wires which were gently swayed by an electric current, and many others were placed on the handle of a mammoth basket of violets. Each place card had a miniature bird in genuine feathers, the artistic work of the Mexicans, and the suggestion was further carried out by bread, milk, sugar and other characters in Maeterlinck's exquisite play, being decked in flowers and blue gauze and placed at intervals on the daintily spread board. Bluebird luncheons may be given on less expensive lines by having birds of blue velvet and flowers of the spring, jonquils or tulips, and pretty place cards on which the symbolic bird of happiness is painted.—New York Press.

INDIGESTION

Causes Dizziness, Nervousness, Biliousness, Sick Headaches and Sleeplessness

You know that most of the ailmets named above come from an out of order stomach.

When your food reaches the stomach it should digest and furnish nutritious matter to the blood.

If it doesn't digest, but lays heavily on your stomach, it has started to ferment.

When it ferments it sets loose in the stomach poisonous gases which irritate the great pneumogastric nerve that leads directly from the brain to the stomach.

That irritation causes heartburn, dizziness, nightsweats, nervousness, and other ailments.

MI-O-NA is guaranteed to end all stomach misery, or money back. 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's and druggists everywhere.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache: suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remeber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism, Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

WHEN SPAIN GAVE UP CUBA

Drama That Began With Columbus Ended in Sorrow After the American War.

Arriving in Havana on the afternoon of December 31, 1898, the day before Spain surrendered the island, I presented to Major General Ludlow a letter of introduction from the son of one of his close friends, and asked for a pass which would enable Mrs. Thayer and myself to see the next day's ceremonies at the palace. The pass was presently forthcoming.

It was five minutes to twelve next day. At that instant rose the solemn strains of the Spanish anthem. As it ceased there was a moment's silence. Then up through the casements came the "Star Spangled Banner," and the procession, which had formed below, wound its way through the great portal and up into the room where we were. Major General Brooke and the officers under his command, their dress uniforms and yellow sashes a bright note of color, entered first; then came the swarthy Cuban leaders, their uniforms less splendid, but their dignity beyond question; and last of all, General Castellanos and his staff.

The scene was too painful to prolong. A moment of formalities and it was over, and the defeated said farewell. It was an ordeal for a man of Castellanos' temperament. Tears came to his eyes.

"I have been in many battles," he faltered, "many trying situations, but never in a position like this." Then, as we watched, the little handful of Spanish troops, headed only by fife and drum, set their faces toward Spain. The drama which began with Columbus was finished.—John Adams Thayer, "Out of the Rut."

SOLID MATTER A FICTION?

Scientists Now Declare That What Seems So Is In Reality Only Motion.

Science is knocking the materialists end for end, as the boys say. It is absolutely proven that there is no such thing as solid, substantive matter. It is only motion. This stone, this table, this hammer is only motion. Some new-fangled idiotic idea, eh? Well, it is known that matter is composed of atoms. For a long time the atom was thought to be the final analysis of matter.

But such is not the case. A few years ago radium was discovered, and that has broken the atom into small bits, 2,000 times smaller than the hydrogen atom, the smallest of all. These particles of the atom are called electrons, and now it has been found that these electrons are mere points of electrical energy. These electrons, says a magazine article, "are entirely free from anything that can be properly called matter."

Trillions and trillions of these electrons make up this piece of iron, and they are always in motion, flitting about at the rate of 50,000 miles a second. Now you know there is a lie out—how can a man calculate the speed of an invisible motion inside of an invisible atom? Oh, dear reader, you have no idea how big and deep this world is, or how powerful human genius is, or how small a space you occupy in the world.—Ohio State Journal.

Safety Play Counted.

The subject of "kissing before engagements for marriage" came up at a whist club of half a dozen married couples. It turned out that not one of the women had been kissed until her troth was plighted. One of the men had a poor memory. "We used to kiss, sometimes, didn't we?" he said to his wife. "No, sir," she said, with deep indignation; "you tried to, and you fought for the privilege, but you never succeeded." "Is that so?" the husband remarked: "I've kissed so many—" "What's that? What did you say?" the wife asked. There was a pause. Intense but suppressed excitement was visible on the faces of the other married men. "I say," said the husband, "I have kissed you so many times that I can't remember when I began." Then the other married men breathed more freely.

MODESTY IS A MALE VIRTUE

With Women It Is no More Than an Artificial Protective Device, Says Writer.

And in this same connection it is time that we revised our ideas of feminine modesty. What a lot we have written about it and how much we have enthused over it! Some of us have even tried to find in it an inspiration, and women have listened to our praises and our ecstasies for all these years and never once have they divulged the secret that they had not the slightest idea what we were talking about. They have known that we were crediting them with some virtue that they did not possess, but the only way in which they could learn of that virtue was by an observation of ourselves.

For modesty is a male, not a female, virtue, and if men do not get the credit due to them it is only because they have lost the power to blush. What is called feminine modesty is no more than an artificial protective device, something that is assumed for a purpose, like a revolver. It has no basis in consciousness. But male modesty has a basis in consciousness and is unassumed: No power on earth could persuade a man to enter a drawing room stripped to the sixtieth degree of latitude. He would be quite shy about it if only men were present, but women will do this in the presence of both sexes, and many of them would go lower still but for the conventions.

Now a woman who had to walk down the street in decollete dress would probably blush. She would say that her modesty was offended, but actually it is her sense of the appropriate that would be offended, for she has not the least objection to bathing in public—that is to say, playing about on the sands—in a costume far more exposive than the decollete gown. In short, a woman's sense of modesty is one-half a protective pose and one-half a sense of the appropriate. If you want a natural and unspoiled modesty you have to go to men for it.—The Argonaut.

FOX ALWAYS WAS CUNNING

Fable From the Talmud Tells How He Put the Bear in the Well.

A fox and a bear were out walking together one day, when, as they passed a house, they smelled the dinner cooking. The fox suggested to his companion that they should creep into the kitchen when no one was there and steal some of the food. The bear agreed; but while they were in the kitchen the cook came in and the bear was caught and punished. For this he threatened to kill the fox; but the cunning fox said:

"Pray do not let us quarrel. I will take you to another place where we shall certainly obtain plenty of food."

At night the fox led the bear to a deep well and pointing to the reflection of the moon in the water below, said:

"There is a fine cheese. We will go down and get it."

He then got into one of the buckets at the end of the rope and told the bear to get into the other. But as he was too light to balance the bear's weight a large stone was placed with him in the pail.

As soon as the bear had entered the other bucket the fox threw out the stone and the bucket with the bear inside descended and was left in the well.—From the Talmud.

Origin of Beet Sugar.

When the fleets of Great Britain blockaded all the ports of Continental Europe, during the Napoleonic wars, Europe was cut off from its supply of sugar. It became necessary to find a substitute. Before the discovery of America sugar was unknown and honey was the universal sweetening. But the supply of honey was not equal to the demand now. In some countries, as in Bohemia, they made sugar from the maple; in other countries they crystallized dextrose from the juice of the grape, but these sources were inadequate. The final outcome of the matter was the birth of the beet sugar industry. It was 100 years ago, in 1810, that the first loaf of beet sugar was made and presented to Napoleon; and the centenary of this event has just been celebrated in France.

Modern Childhood.

"I guess the good old days are gone forever."

"Spring your plaint."

"I asked my young niece if she knew who Cinderella was. She said Cinderella was a character in a musical comedy, but that it wasn't fit for old people to see."

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

MRS. DOAN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DOAN, of New Brookland, S.C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds."

Wisdom for Two

By Joanna Single

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

He considered a woman ahead of him on the road as bad to pass as a hen, so he slowed down his little runabout. Selwyn never took a risk with the lives on foot. He came down the smooth road between its rows of guarding eucalyptus trees and wondered if he would have to blow the horn again before the slender figure ahead of him would leave the middle of the highway. He saw the girl's hair, yellow in the setting sun.

She did an astonishing thing—wheeled suddenly and spread her slender arms apart, signaling him to stop. He could not lift his hat, for his dark head was already uncovered to the soft California breeze, but he bowed most politely. The girl went crimson—she could not have been more than eighteen, and seemed unable to speak for a moment.

"Are you—going to—San Mateo? I—ought to catch a train——"

"Going right there!" he lied instantaneously, though much annoyed. "Get in." He leaped out, helped her to the seat beside him, and cranked up again. Cranking always spoiled his temper. He was silent, when again he took the wheel. She shrunk from him timidly.

"When is your train due?" he finally asked, speeding up, and passing another machine by a margin that made the girl shiver.

"I—don't—know," she stammered. How queer this all was! Another mile slipped away beneath them, and the sun was a bit nearer setting. He turned suddenly upon her, suspecting the unusual.

"Look here, you know I'm a stranger, but if anything is—wrong I might help you——" To his consternation she began promptly to cry, tears rolling down her cheeks. She was a mere child, too, and he was nearly thirty. In the glance he saw that she was well bred, well clad—a lady. "I am awfully old and wise—wise enough for two, and if anybody has broken your dolly I will—where's your purse?" he asked suddenly. "How can you take a train with neither purse nor hat?" She carried not even a handkerchief. Her blue eyes widened with fear.

"I didn't tell you the truth," she said. "I am not running away. That is—I concluded not to run away and I just went down the road——"

"I don't understand. Try to tell me." He was getting impatient.

"Tell me what to do! I'm a stranger here. I came on a trip. My aunt left me a month ago with the Austins while she went to Los Angeles. She took sick there, so I have to stay on—and Dickie——"

He knew Dickie Austin altogether too well. He urged her to continue, and noted the sweet curve of her chin and throat.

"Dickie came home from Boston. He—well, he—finally I promised to run away and marry him. And when I looked out of the window and saw him coming with his machine I was frightened. I didn't want to go with him! So I slid out the back door in an instant and went down the wrong road. I asked you to take me up because I was afraid he would find me. I can't tell his mother, and he won't let me alone. I want to find my aunt."

Again she wept. Selwyn was in consternation. He slowed down and thought a little. Pretty fix to be in! But who was it she resembled? Her face was like—like——

"I ought to tell you who I am. I am from St. Paul, Minnesota. I am Kittie—Katharine James——" His face was clear again.

"Ah—Clara's little sister! Don't you remember? I spent a Christmas week-end at your house four years ago—John Selwyn! I'll break Dick Austin's good-for-nothing neck!" The tears turned to smiles. The girl nodded her head. She knew now who he was.

"Of course I'll look after you," he said. "What is Mrs. Austin about, letting her son pester her guest? You surely are not—do not care for the little wretch?"

She rubbed her arms over her eyes. "It's like a bad dream. He made me think I did until the very last minute. Mrs. Austin always left us together. She is awfully worried about something. I guess it's money. Dickie said he was in trouble and I was sorry for him. He said they would have to give up the place——"

"And he thought he would marry you for your father's money?" Kittie had not thought of this, and gave a little scream. "I guess it's time an old friend appeared! Look here, my sister is at a hotel in 'Frisco. I shall take you there tonight, and in the morning we will see."

He turned the machine suddenly, and sent it ahead at terrific speed, retracing the way they had come.

"Is the Austin place that big gray stone place with the palms?"

She nodded an affirmative to his question.

"Where are we going? I will be late for dinner, and Dickie will be furious, and will tell his mother anything! She will believe him. Don't go there!" she begged him. "I don't think auntie knew them as well as she ought."

"Or as I do, no! Listen. I am going back with you. Introduce me, let me talk, and do just as I say. Will you?" She promised, and again he speeded up the little car.

Dusk was falling when they slid into the Austin place. Mrs. Austin and Dickie came from the porch, followed by other relatives. Selwyn got down, handed out the girl, and took her arm, smiling.

"This is Mr. John Selwyn, Mrs. Austin."

It was all she had to say. Selwyn put out his hand. "Of Chicago," he explained. "How are you, Richard? Haven't seen you since your freshman days at Harvard—get through?" Dick put out his hand. Selwyn knew too much about him. Mrs. Austin was frigidly waiting for more—a queer gleam in her eyes.

"I don't understand," she said. "Kittie, we have been looking for you——"

Selwyn took the matter up. "I do owe you an explanation," he said. "You see I am engaged to Kittie. I came out here to surprise her, and saw her on the road and carried her off for a ride. The engagement was to have been announced as soon as she reached home. Her aunt knows it. Surely you remember me, Mrs. Austin? Met you at my sister's, Mrs. Jackson." Mrs. Austin thawed and remembered—also remembered the James fortune, and stiffened again. But in decency she had to ask him to dinner. He saw unpleasantness for Kittie ahead, and promptly came to the rescue again.

"I'll be glad to stay to dinner, and if Dickie will let me share his quarters I'll invite myself to stay until morning." Dickie was not in a position to refuse. The older man had bought him out of a disgraceful college scrape. He rose to the occasion.

They all went in. Kittie hastily dressed for dinner and Selwyn washed up, refusing Dick's offer of clothes. He longed to kick the little cad, but restrained himself.

Dinner went pleasantly enough because Selwyn would have it so. He knew himself to be irreproachable, he knew they knew it, and he had once been deeply in love with Clara James, who had chosen his friend Smiley instead. This was Clara's little sister. And she was like Clara—perhaps she was even sweeter than Clara. He looked across the table at her wild-rose bloom and wide blue eyes, the fine, firm little chin and intelligent forehead. She caught his glance and her flush deepened and burned. He again addressed Mrs. Austin, and as he did so resolved to give Aunt Cornelia the scolding of her life when he saw her. To leave the girl with people like this while she chased off to suffrage meetings and got sick at the wrong times!

"Mrs. Austin, I am going to rob you tomorrow of your guest. My sister is with me in San Francisco, and we are going to Los Angeles in a few days. She will take Kittie with her and meet her aunt there."

Kittie sat still and drew a long breath of relief, but her soul was burning with shame and fear. What did this splendid knight think of her for even thinking she might ever love Dickie Austin? What should she say when she reached his sister? Of course the engagement matter would never go any further! Her heart sank strangely.

The next day saw her safely on her way to Mrs. Jackson, her face glowing. The ride was a wonder of delight, the beauty of the country after the eastern snow, most of all the strong man beside her. She gave herself to the joy of the moment, charming him with everything she said and did. Freed from her trouble her sweetness came to the top and bubbled and sparkled like champagne. A great protective sense came over the man, but a twinge at the heart, too. Only for today was she his, and he would not have touched her finger tips without her consent. He turned to her as they neared San Francisco.

"You've had an adventure, a real one, haven't you?" She looked at him, sobering, her eyes deep, but her tongue would not speak. "I've never been engaged before," he said, "and I'm nearly thirty. It is very lovely. I shall always remember it—long after you have married the right man, younger and brighter than I."

She shook her head.

"I shall never—never—marry anybody—all my life!" she burst out. "After—Dickie—I should be—afraid." She shivered, and driving with one hand, he caught at her slim fingers.

"Would you be afraid of me? Would you?" Her eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, but it isn't—real about you! You had to lie to get me out of trouble, and you've got yourself in. Mrs. Austin will tell people and—and——"

"She couldn't say anything if you—made it real, Kittie. Could you? Will you?" She turned from him pitifully, and then brought her glance bravely to his. Her voice was grave and quiet.

"You don't—love me." The man laughed outright. Love is as swift as light—it doesn't need time.

"I do!" he said. "I love and love you! Will you make me happy now—or make me court you for months, just to satisfy your pride?" She gave him her hand simply, and her answer also, and he blessed her for it.

"I'm not very wise," she faltered, "but I do—love you!"

Fortunate, Indeed!

"You had a row with Grisby today, I understand?"

"Not much of a row, fortunately."

"How did it occur?"

"Why, he called me a horse thief, a swindler and numerous other disagreeable names."

"What did you say?"

"I told him that for twopence I would whip him."

"Did he give you the money?"

"No; he had nothing but a twopenny stamp, and I never take stamps."

Hats and the Man.

Why must women bear most of the burden for slavery to dress when man certainly has no more freedom than she? This could be illustrated in a number of different ways, including collars that choke and are too easily soiled, but what is really in our mind is the hair-and-brain-and-comfort-destroying derby. It makes the head look like a peanut. It is worn in the spring long after the owner longs for the straw hat, and in the autumn when he wishes to continue with the straw, and in the winter when he desires a comfortable, pleasant, soft, warm covering. Perhaps the cap is gaining a little in popularity, and also the soft felt, but the progress is not enough to be noticeable. For what progress there is we can probably thank the automobile. We certainly cannot thank the intelligence of men.—Collier's.

Language of the Professions.

Scientific terms are ordinarily crammed without mercy into the medical certificates that are brought into courts of justice. These have always the effect of thoroughly frightening the magistrates, who hardly understand them more than do the good public.

At a recent court session M. Masse, the presiding judge, interrupted the reading of a medical certificate:

"When will these doctors resolve to abandon their gibberish and speak French?"

"Monsieur the president, the doctors remain as they were in the time of Moliere."

The presiding judge said with a sigh: "They are worse than in the time of Moliere. In that epoch at least the doctors made use of a kind of Latin that one could understand. Today no one can understand them at all."

"Does Monsier the President believe that the gibberish of the lawyers is any more understandable than that of the doctors?"—Le Cri de Paris.

Appropriate Course.

"So we're short on space? What shall I do with this appendix story?"

"Cut it out."

"And this story of the man who hanged himself?"

"Cut him down."

MRS. RENE B. MORROW

On Trial in Chicago for Murder of Husband.

CHICAGO—Mrs. Rene B. Morrow, charged with the murder of her husband, Charles B. Morrow, an inventor, went into Judge Kersten's court and fought bitterly for an immediate trial. The state, when the case was called, sought to obtain further delay, but Judge Kersten ordered the trial to proceed. Selection of a jury was then begun.

PINNED AGAINST PIER

Chicago Man Probably Fatally Injured at South Haven.

South Haven, Mich., July 6. — Andrew Lux, secretary of the Young & Gardener Leather Novelty company of Chicago, was probably fatally injured when a launch collided with a row boat at a resort up the river. This was the first visit of Lux to South Haven and he went up river with a merry party of friends, stopping at a pier near Monney's park. A launch, heavily loaded with resorters, swung against the pier, pinning the frail row boat, in which Lux was seated, between it and the heavy piling.

Lux suffered a fracture of the pelvis bone and internal injuries. It was reported he could not recover.

TRAIN VICTIM IDENTIFIED

Man Killed at Erie Was Monroe County Farmer.

Monroe, Mich., July 8. — The man who was killed last Tuesday at Erie, south of here, by a northbound Pere Marquette passenger train, was identified by Charles Fournia, a cousin, as that of Leonard Calhoun, forty-three years old and a farmer of London township.

The unfortunate man boarded an Ann Arbor excursion train last Sunday at the village of Azalia for Toledo. It is thought he concluded to walk home, some eighteen miles, got on the wrong track and fell asleep. He leaves his parents, one brother and two sisters.

HARTLEY GIVEN NEW CROSS

Marshall Rector's Loss Is Replaced by Parishioners.

Marshall, Mich., July 5. — A handsome pectoral cross, set with amethysts and illuminated with the symbol of the Agnus Dei, was presented by the congregation of Trinity parish of Marshall to the rector, Rev. John Hartley, to replace the one torn from his person by the recent attack of a vestryman, and either lost or stolen.

William Connor made the presentation in behalf of the large number of contributors, expressing feelingly the esteem in which the rector was held by his parishioners.

STATE REPUBLICAN MEET

Set for Detroit Sept. 24—County Conventions Sept. 10.

Detroit, Mich., July 6.—The Republican state central committee has fixed Sept. 10 for county conventions uniformly throughout the state.

The same body has also appointed Sept. 24, at 11 a. m., as the time for holding the Republican state convention in Detroit. The basis of representation at the state convention is to be one delegate for each 150 votes or major fraction thereof cast for secretary of state in 1910.

LANSING—According to the interpretation of the Michigan statute of 1911 pertaining to county drain commissioners and other county officers not constitutional officers, all such officials elected two years ago must make the race again this fall in order to hold their jobs. Many commissioners have written to the attorney general for an opinion and they are all informed they must make another campaign.

CALL IS ISSUED FOR THIRD PARTY MEETING

Convention to Assemble in Chicago August 5.

Call Is Signed by Roosevelt Leaders from Forty States and Addressed to All the People of United States.

Colonel Roosevelt's third party convention will be held in Chicago on Aug. 5, either in the Coliseum or Orchestra Hall.

The call for it, signed by Roosevelt leaders of forty states and addressed "to the people of the United States, without regard to past political differences," was issued through Senator Joseph M. Dixon, campaign manager, in the new national headquarters of the party at the Hotel Manhattan.

The party will probably be called the Progressive National Party. The convention will decide as to that. Eight states—Maine, North Carolina, Delaware, South Carolina, Arkansas, Mississippi, Idaho and Nevada—are not represented in the provisional committee which signed the call for the convention. Senator Dixon explained that in all these states Roosevelt controls or has a chance to control the regular Republican organization, hence the omissions.

The method of choosing delegates to the convention will be left to the leaders of the various states. Probably they will be chosen in conventions. Senator Dixon said that the time is too short for primaries. One or two states have already held Roosevelt conventions. The call is as follows:

"To the people of the United States, without regard to past political differences who, through repeated betrayals, realize that today the power of the crooked political bosses and of the privileged classes behind them is so strong in the two old party organizations that no helpful movement in the real interests of our country can come out of either:

"We believe that the time has come for a National Progressive movement—a nation-wide movement—on nonsectional lines, so that the people may be served in sincerity and truth by an organization unfettered by obligation to conflicting interests;

"Who believe in the right and capacity of the people to rule themselves, and effectively to control all the agencies of their government, and who hold that only through social and industrial justice, thus secured, can honest property find permanent protection;

"Who believe that government by the few tends to become, and has in fact become, government by the sordid influences that control the few;

"Who believe that only through the movement contemplated can we obtain in the nation and the several states the legislation demanded by the modern industrial evolution, legislation which shall favor honest business and yet control the great agencies of modern business so as to insure their being used in the interest of the whole people; legislation which shall promote prosperity and at the same time secure the better and more equitable diffusion of prosperity; legislation which shall promote the economic well-being of the honest farmer, wage worker, professional man and business man alike, but which shall at the same time strike in efficient fashion—and not merely pretend to strike—at the roots of privilege in the world of industry no less than in the world of politics;

"Who believe that only this type of wise industrial evolution will avert industrial revolution;

"Who believe that wholesome party government can come only if there is wholesome party management in a spirit of service to the whole country and who hold that the commandment delivered at Sinai, 'Thou Shalt Not Steal' applies to politics as well as to business;

"To all in accord with these views a call is hereby issued by the provisional committee under the resolution of the massmeeting held in Chicago on June 22nd last, to send from each state a number of delegates whose votes in the convention shall count for as many votes as the state shall have senators and representatives in congress, to meet in mass convention in Chicago on the 5th day of August, 1912, for the purpose of nominating candidates to be supported for the positions of president and vice president of the United States."

Among the signers to the call are the following:

Indiana, Edwin D. Lee, Horace C. Stillwell; Illinois, Medill McCormick, Chauncey Dewey, La Verne W. Noyes; Michigan, Theodore M. Joslyn; Minnesota, Milton D. Purdy; Missouri, W. R. Nelson; Ohio, James R. Garfield; Wisconsin, H. F. Cochems.

ARCHBALD IS HIT BY COMMITTEE'S REPORT

Thirteen Articles of Impeachment Are Presented.

"Judge Archbald's Sense of Moral Responsibility Has Become Deadened," Says the Report—Trial in Senate.

Chairman Clayton of the committee on judiciary of the house of representatives presented to the house thirteen articles of impeachment against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the United States court of commerce. Mr. Clayton's report was unanimous from his committee.

The charges against Judge Archbald set forth in thirteen articles of impeachment, range from his business transactions with actual and possible litigants in his court, to a trip to Europe, which, it was charged, was given the judge by Henry W. Cannon, a railroad magnate and financial power in New York. Favoritism to a railroad litigant was also included in the charges, and in the thirteenth count of the indictment under the heading of general misbehavior Judge Archbald, "grossly abused the proprieties and was guilty of misbehavior and of misdemeanor in office."

"The conduct of the judge has been exceedingly reprehensible and in marked contrast with the high sense of judicial ethics and probity that generally characterize the federal judiciary," the committee said in summing up its findings of misbehavior in office against Judge Archbald.

"His business transactions while a judge on the bench were held to unfit him for further service on the bench, and a resolution was presented impeaching him and haling him for trial before the United States senate.

"Your committee is of opinion that Judge Archbald's sense of moral responsibility has become deadened," said the report. "He has prostituted his high office for personal profit. He has shown an overweening desire to make gainful bargains with parties having cases before him or likely to have cases before him. To accomplish this purpose he has not hesitated to use his offical power and influence. He has degraded his high office and has destroyed the confidence of the public in his judiciary integrity. He has forfeited the condition upon which he holds his commission and should be removed from office by impeachment.

"A judge should be the personification of integrity, of honor and of uprightness in his daily walk and conversation. He should hold his exalted office and the administration of justice above the sordid desire to accumulate wealth by trading or trafficking with actual or probable litigants in his court. He should be free and unaffected by any bias born of avarice and unhampered by pecuniary or other obligations."

Chairman Clayton will later present a resolution providing for the management of the trial before the senate. The full committee designated Chairman Clayton, Representative Floyd of Arkansas, Davis of West Virgania and Webb of North Carolina, Democrats and Representatives Norris, Nebaska, Sterling, Illnois, Howland, Ohio, Republicans, managers to prosecute the Archbald trial before the senate.

A. PIATT ANDREW QUITS

Assistant Secretary of Treasury Resigns.

Says Employes Are Hampered by MacVeagh's Idiosyncracies and Incapacity for Decision.

A. Piatt Andrew tendered his resignation as assistant secretary of the treasury. In a spirited letter to the president, Mr. Andrew writes of conditions in the treasury department which are alleged to be due to the attitude of Secretary MacVeagh toward many of his subordinates.

Assistant Secretary Andrew's letter of resignation charges that subordinates in the treasury department "have been hampered and discouraged at every turn by Secretary MacVeagh's idiosyncracies and his incapacity for decision."

It contains a scathing arraignment of Secretary MacVeagh's administration of "the government affairs" and created a profound sensation in official circles.

Secretary MacVeagh in a published statement declares Mr. Andrew's resignation had been repeatedly asked for before the assistant finally resigned but had never mentioned to the secretary the things he told President Taft in his letter of resignation.

Four Girls Drown.

At Perth Amboy, N. J., four pairs of little shoes and stockings, found at the edge of a water-filled clay pit, told the story of the drowning of four small girls in Perth Amboy. Ellen and Martha Pancon, in company with Susan Pazen and Frances Stanley, went to pick berries. At night the parents became alarmed at their absence and a search was commenced. Finally two boys came upon four pairs of shoes and stockings beside a large clay pit on the outskirts of the city. The pit was dragged and the bodies recovered.

MAKES CONFESSION OF HIS WRONG DOING

Grand Rapids Man Pleads Guilty to Forgery.

Bookkeeper for the S. Hartman Foundry Company Short $1,500—He Lived High While Drawing $15 a Week Salary.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 8.—Drawing a salary of $15 a week and living in the most luxurious apartments the Hotel Burleson afforded, sporting an auto, dressed like a Beau Brummel, spending money lavishly, Bert Stockdale, former office manager and bookkeeper of the S. Hartman Foundry company, pleaded guilty in the superior court of a $210 forgery. He also confessed that a shortage of $1,500 exists in his accounts.

He was remanded for sentence by Judge Stuart. Stockdale is twenty-eight years old and unmarried. His home is in Ravenna, Mich. While admitting his guilt in court he said he "had gone wrong and began drinking."

OSBORN DEFINES POSITION

Thinks That Republicans Should Not Go Into Any Third Party.

Lansing, Mich., July 10.—In order that there might be no misunderstanding as to his attitude regarding the proposed third party, Governor Osborn issued this statement:

"I am not inconsistent in the position I have taken, that Republicans need not bolt their party and will not be considered as having bolted if they vote for Woodrow Wilson. Many of the most prominent Democrats in the country did not vote for or support Mr. Bryan. They remained Democrats nevertheless, and are all supporting Woodrow Wilson now.

"I do not think a new party erected upon the passions of any number of men can live. I hope all good Republicans will refuse to join the malcontents in a new party. I do not mean by this that temporary measures should not be taken to present the name of Theodore Roosevelt and to give people an opportunity to vote for him, but whatever steps are taken to do this, I hope it will be clearly understood that they are temporary."

DIVER IS PARALYZED

Port Huron Young Man Strikes Head on Bottom of Lake.

Port Huron, Mich., July 10.—Diving into the water of Lake Huron here, Harry Douglass, aged twenty-two years, struck his head upon the bottom and was removed from the water in a semi-conscious condition. A medical examination disclosed the fact that the lower part of his heart was paralyzed and his neck severely wrenched. He was taken to the home of his grandmother.

Dr. Clement, the attending physician, says that unless the young man rallies within forty-eight hours he cannot recover, as the strain upon his constitution will be too severe. He says that even if Douglass should live, the chances are that he will be paralyzed.

KALAMAZOO PLANT BURNS

Enameling Tank Company Sustains $35,000 Loss.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 8.—Damage amounting to over $35,000 resulted from a fire in the plant of the Kalamazoo Enameling Tank company's plant. The fire started in the stock room and before it was discovered it had secured a big start.

A part of the building was destroyed, but the greatest damage results from injury to machinery and stock.

CONVICTS CAMORRA CHIEFS

Viterbo Court Fastens Murder of Cuoccolo Couple Upon Them.

The verdict at Viterbo, Italy, in the Camorra trial was handed down. Nine of the accused were unanimously declared guilty of the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife. The remainder of the band were found guilty of belonging to a criminal association.

The verdict declares Corrado Sortino guilty of both murders; Nicolo Morra, Antonio Cerrato and Mariano de Gennaro, guilty of the murder of Cuoccolo, and Giuseppe Salvi as well as Corrado Sortino guilty of the murder of Cuoccolo's wife.

The instigators of the murders, including Enrico Alfano, Giovanna Rapi, De Marinas and others also are declared guilty.

40 PEOPLE ARE KILLED

Fatal Accident Occurs Two Miles from Corning, N. Y.

Express Train Crashes Into a Passenger Train—Two Coaches Hurled Down an Embankment.

Forty persons were killed, sixty injured when an express train crashed into the fast westbound Lackawanna passenger train No. 9 two miles east of Corning, N. Y.

The passenger train, which runs from New York to Buffalo, had been standing on the track for twenty minutes when the express train, which carried no passengers, struck it in the rear at full speed.

The two day coaches attached to the rear of No. 9 were hurled down an embankment and the express plunged half way through the rear Pullman of the standing train before it came to a stop. The collision occurred at 5:25 a. m.

18 KILLED ON RAILROAD

Horrible Accident to a Picnic Train Near Ligonier, Pa.

Eighteen were killed and many fatally injured on the Ligonier Valley road when a pessenger train carrying picnickers was backing into Wilpen through a misunderstanding of their orders.

The accident happened at the fairgrounds, about one and a half miles from Ligonier, Pa. It was caused by a doube header freight, which crashed into the rear coach of the passenger train, telescoping several cars. According to latest reports but one passenger on the train escaped injury.

The coaches contained a large number of children who were being taken by Miss Matthews, a nurse at the home of George Senft, president of the Ligonier Valley railroad, for a day's outing.

IN DEFENSE OF LORIMER

Senators Dillingham and Fletcher Address the Senate.

At Washington Tuesday Senator Dillingham continued his defense of Senator Lorimer's election when the senate resumed consideration of the noted case.

Senator Dillingham sought to show that money paid to members of the Illinois legislature had been taken from a jackpot fund which had been existing since 1897. He declared that the only evidence against Lorimer was that of Charles A. White, author of the original charges, who, he asserted, had entered the legislature with the purpose of accepting bribes.

Senator Dillingham gave up the floor to Senator Fletcher before he had concluded. Senator Fletcher's attack upon Theodore Roosevelt for condemning Senator Lorimer was very bitter.

"Theodore Roosevelt could enjoy a luncheon with Booker Washington at the White House," declared Mr. Fletcher, "but could not afford to dine in the same room with Mr. Lorimer, a member of the club of which he was a guest."

BATTLE CREEK—Grover C. Robinson, who was an employ of the Rumley factory suffered the loss of both eyes when a piece of steel struck him. He was working over a lath when the clutch slipped, throwing a steel bar which struck him full in the eyes. One eye was gouged out and the other cut open.

LANSING — The Michigan state treasurer issued the monthly statement of the department. It showed that the state has more than $8,000,000 on hand beside over a million in trust funds it is holding for state institutions. The state primary school fund will exceed $5,000,000.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

ADRIAN—The first successful life saving by flying machine in Lenawee county was indirectly performed at the Raisin river near the town line bridge. The hero who was the life saver was La Verne Dewey. Dewey is the owner of a glider which he is daily perfecting, and in which he can sail very successfully now. He was trying out the machine and had just started off the hill which slopes to the river, when he heard a boy scream. He "flew" as quickly as possible to the river bank and saw a young lad struggling in the water. The child was Forest Schultz. If he had been a fraction of a minute later the child certainly would have drowned, as he was unconscious when brought to shore. There were no other people near the spot at the time.

LELAND—Leland's steamship pier is now completed and steamers are landing at the dock without trouble. The old landing was carried away by the ice last winter, and a new one had to be constructed. A large force of men from Harbor Springs, under the supervision of the Roe Construction and Steamship company, has been working on the dock for about a month. Steamers Missouri, Illinois and Manistee, of the Northern Michigan Transportation company, will make regular stops all season, and this will give Leland almost daily service with Chicago and points south.

LAKE ORION—Seized suddenly with cramps as he dove into the lake at Park island from the bathing platform, Lynn Lefurgey, aged twenty-one, son of Undertaker M. J. Lefurgey of Mt. Morris, was drowned. Two companions attempted to save the young man, but were dragged down by the struggling victim and compelled to break away to save themselves. Although Lefurgey was brought to the surface twelve minutes after he went down, all efforts of three doctors to resuscitate him failed.

IONIA—Leonore, who was the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dixon, died of diphtheria. She had been ill but twenty-four hours. The Dixon family came here from Detroit when the Hayes Ionia Auto body factory opened, the father being now employed there.

HARBOR BEACH—While he was despondent because of a long illness, Frank Hunter, aged seventy-two years, hanged himself to one of the rafters of his woodshed. Hunter, who had been ill nearly all winter, arose at about 4 o'clock in the morning. His absence from the house alarmed the other members of the family and an hour later a search disclosed the body.

GRAND RAPIDS—The city of Grand Rapids is now the center of Dutch literature in America. This honor has come through the incorporation of the new Dejong-Schaafsma Publishing company, a $50,000 concern, here. There are four other publishing companies here who handle hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of Netherlands books annually.

MORRICE—Hazel Defreese, who is a bride of only a month, took an antiseptic tablet in a fit of jealousy, it is said, because her husband missed his train and stayed over night in Flint. Dr. Ames of this place was called and by hard work saved the woman's life. She is twenty years old and the wife of John Defreese, a young farmer living east of town.

FIVE STORES BURN

Flames at Marquette, Mich., Cause a Loss of $125,000.

Marquette, Mich., July 6.—Fire destroyed $125,000 worth of property in the business quarter, burning five big stores in the Bacon block and the Vierling building, two of the largest structures in Marquette.

Firemen from outside cities assisted the Marquette department in confining the flames to the two buildings.

Financiering.

A small boy was given a penny to spend. Now, although his stomach craved a lollypop, he also wished a banana he had seen on a fruit stand at the corner. He preferred, of the two, the fruit.

"How much is them bananas?" he asked.

"Six for five cents, or a penny apiece."

"Six for five? Well," the youngster said wistfully, "gimme six."

The fruiterer counted out half a dozen and handed them over.

"A penny apiece?" questioned the boy, taking them.

The man nodded. So the boy counted out five bananas and gave them back. "There's your five cents' worth," he said. "I don't want 'em."

Before the merchant quite saw the value of the lad's act, the boy was on his way to the candy store, a banana in one hand and his cent in the other.—Judge.

Her Idea of Art.

An old gentleman who owned a fine estate not far from the country seat of the duke of Devonshire (which is open to the public when the duke is there) one day drove with a party of friends to this famous residence, taking with him his housekeeper, Martha, a good old soul, who had been with him a great many years.

Arriving at Chatsworth they passed slowly through room after room of almost priceless pictures. But Martha spoke never a word, although it was evident that she was not missing anything. Each and every picture that her eye lit on underwent a most rigid scrutiny, much to the amusement of the rest of the party.

At last her master turned to her and said: "Well, Martha, what do you think of it all?"

"Why," exploded Martha, rapturously, "I cannot see a speck o' dust anywhere."

Sparrow Stole a Plume.

While standing on the corner of Fifteenth street and New York avenue yesterday afternoon a well dressed young woman had a small plume torn from her hat by the strong wind. The plume, which was light green, landed in the gutter ten feet away.

Several men offered their services to recover the plume, when a sparrow, seeing the fluffy feather, and realizing its comfort if gotten safely to his nest, snatched it in his mouth and flew to the top of the Riggs Bank building.—Washington Post.

EDWARD FRENSDORF OF HUDSON,

Boomed for Congressman at Large by Michigan Democrats.

The Democrats in and around Lenawee county are booming "Ed" Frensdorf, of Hudson, for congressman at large. Mr. Frensdorf, when asked if this report was true, said that whatever had been done along that line was without his knowledge or consent. He also said that, since coming from Baltimore, he had received hundreds of telegrams congratulating him on the successful termination of the convention and urging him to become a candidate for all the offices of both state and national character. He also remarked that it would be a patriotic rather than a party duty, that would influence him in accepting any office.

Mr. Frensdorf is well known in Tecumseh, as for years he has had business relations with Brown & Co. and others, and his friends will all wish him success should he run for this office.

A fine picture of Mr. Frensdorf appeared in the Adrian Telegram of July 10.

AMUSEMENTS

Something new and unique in the way of amusements will be presented at the Bradley Opera House all next week when Mr. John Ennor and his "Illustrated Travelogues" will be the extra attraction. Mr. Ennor will give an entire change of program each evening and gives his "Travelogues" in addition to the regular program of high class motion pictures oeing shown at that theatre.

Each "Travelogue" is illustrated with from 80 to 150 handsomely color views, Don't fail to hear him Monday night. The "Travelogues" are highly interesting as well as instructive and the price is within the reach of every one, Adults 10c. and children 5c.

Mr. Ennor has played all of the surrounding cities and the local management has a telegram from the Manager of the Majectic Theatre at Detroit saying he played Mr. Ennor for a week and he made good there. This is something new in the way of entertainment to the people of Tecumseh and should appeal to all classes, both in the way of amusement and instruction.

Idleness the Root of All Sin.

Idleness is the unforgiveable sin, because it is the mother of all other sins.

Obituary

EZRA S. HENNE

The following notice of the death of Ezra S. Henne was taken from the Jacksonville, Ill. Journal of July 6

Ezra Stephen Henne, who has been seriously ill for the past few days passed peacefully away at the family home, 923 Edge Hill road, Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Mr. Henne has not been a well man for more than a year, being troubled with heart disease, Recently he had been south on important business and returned to Jacksonville a week ago last Tuesday His trip seemed to be too strenuous for his constitution and he showed signs of failing fast since his return. His condition was so serious that for the last two or three days but little hope was held out by his attending physician for his life.

The passing away os Professor Henne removed one of the well known educators of the city. For the past seven years he has been one of the efficient teachers at the State School for the Deaf. He possessed a strong personality and a man of great versatility. Even those who were only acquainted with him, attest to the influence for good he exerted and his aim was to make those with whom he came in contact, live better and nobler lives. His ability along his chosen profession was exemplified in the manner he advanced his pupils and of the great desire he instilled into them for knowledge. Prof. Henne was a member of Grace M. E. church, and ever took an active interest in every department of church life. He was also a member of the Masonic order.

Prof. Henne was the son of Rev. and Mrs. Stephe B. Henne, a minister of of the Evangelical church, in Blissfield, Mich. He attended the public schools of that place and latter attended the state normal school at Ypsilanti, Mich., from which institution he graduated in 1897. His course there was supplemented by further work in Gallaudet college, Washington, D. C. He has taught in several schools of the country including those of the state of Virginia, at Ogden, Utah and Council Bluffs, Iowa. He taught one year in the State School for the Deaf about 14 years ago and then seven years ago associated himself with the institution.

His marriage to Miss Mary Eaton took place June 28, 1911 at Tecumseh, Mich., and she together with one brother, Albert Henne of Northampton, Mass, survive. The parents and one sister preceded the deceased in death. Mrs. Henne and the brother will have the deep sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavment. The remains were taken to Williamson & Cody's to be prepared for burial,

The funeral services will probably be held Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock and the remains will be sent to Reed City, Mich.; where they will be laid to rest beside those of his family.

MERLIN DALE MATTIS

Merlin Dale Mattis only son of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mattis, was born April 13, 1899 and passed away June 30, 1912 this making him 13 years, 2 months and 11 days. He was a good boy and was loved by all who knew him, ever ready to do what was asked of him. Our loss of him is Heaven's gain. He leaves his parents, one little sister, besides a great many relatives and a host of friends by which he shall be so sadly missed. Yet it is so hard to say "That he is not dead but only sleeping, waiting for the final waking when we can all meet again." One little sister, Hazel Geraldine preceded him 14 years ago.

We long for household voices gone
For vanished smiles I long,
But God hath led my dear ones on
And he can do no harm
And if our hearts and flesh are weak
To bear such untried pain,
The bruised reed he will not break
But strengthen and sustain
Whene're he sees a smile too bright
Or hearts too pure for vice,
He bears it to that world of light
To dwell in Paradise.

The remains were laid at rest at "Brookside," Rev. Hewitt officiating

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation and thanks to all our neighbors and friends, and to all who assisted us at the time of our sad bereavement, Also for the many beautiful flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mattis
and daughter,
Miss Amma Blesing.

ANNIVERSARY SURPRISE.

July 4th being the fourtieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Smith, their friends to the number of eighty gave them a genuine surprise party, The lawn was made beautiful with Japanese lanterns hung on the trees.

There was a fine display of fireworks in honor of the Glorious Fourth which was enjoyed by old and young alike. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening.

As a token of their love for the happy couple, the company presented each with a fine willow rocker. It goes without saying that a most enjoyable and merry evening was spent by all present, who wished Mr and Mrs Smith many happy returns of the day, as they bade them good night and good bye.

Woman of Many Names.

The public examination was concluded at the London (Eng.) bankruptcy court recently, of a woman who was sworn as Alice Mabel Frances Emily Paola Blanca Mary Catherine Stewart, which, she said, was her full name.

T. C. HARRIS SMELLS BRIMSTONE.

While riding on a trolley car near Sylvania Tuesday, Mr. T. C. Harris was in what might have been a serious situation, but fortunately proved only an unpleasant one.

There was a severe electrical storm raging and the car was struck by the lightning, For a few seconds a fierce blaze raged on either side, but nothing serious resulted. The ladies of the crowd were unpleasantly effected, some fainting and all being more or less sick.

The car was thrown out of commission and was held up for about one hour when two other cars came to the rescue. The odor of brimstone was something terrible and everyone rejoiced when the car moved on to a clearer atmosphere.

Buggy Clean Up.

We are going to cut down our stock of buggies which are new and strictly up-to-date in every respect of the best of stock and finish. Every buggy waranted.

We have some with narrow auto seat and top, others are low and very easy, just the thing for elderly people. Some are of the plainer kind that will not cost as much, we have three spring wagons with two seats.

We want to sell every job regardless of cost by August 1st.

SUNBEAM HARNESS.

We have a stock that we feel proud of, a large assortment, in fact every strap warranted, about as nifty a line as you ever have seen.

Don't buy a buggy or harness until you look over our line and we intend to save you money and better still have you perfectly satisfied.

Mrs. Albert Foster left for Jackson Thursday to settle her new home, her mother Mrs. A. W. Stahler and sister accompanied her. Her furniture was shipped this week and Arthur Harding went up Thursday to uncrate and put it in shape,

Mrs. Melissa Dixon was overcome by the heat Tuesday while ironing, and fell to the floor, her ironing table falling on her. Neighbors hearing the noise, came to her rescue and called a doctor who rendered the necessary assistance. She is slowly improving.

Tuesday July 16, a joint parish and Sunday picnic of St. John's Clinton, and St. Peter's, Tecumseh, will be held at the Ed Hand's place near the Red Pond.

INDIGESTION

Causes Dizziness, Nervousness, Billiousness, Sick Headaches and Sleeplessness

You know that most of the ailmets named above come from an out of order stomach.

When your food reaches the stomach it should digest and furnish nutritious matter to the blood.

If it doesn't digest, but lays heavily on your stomach, it has started to ferment.

When it ferments it sets loose in the stomach poisonous gases which irritate the great pneumogastric nerve that leads directly from the brain to the stomach.

That irritation causes heartburn, dizziness, nightsweats, nervousness, and other ailments,

MI-O-NA is guaranteed to end all stomach misery, or money back. 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's and druggists everywhere.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

FATAL TO MIGRATING BIRDS

Lighthouses Kill Many Thousands, Which the Keepers Dispose of In City Markets.

A writer furnishes some striking figures concerning the havoc wrought among migrating birds by big lighthouses. The lighthouse on the Pointe de Penmarch, in Brittany, France, has a revolving light of 30,000,000 candle power. Visiting this on November 10 last year, and again on the twelfth, the observer saw tens of thousands of birds whirling round, and it seemed to him that the light shot out a perfect hail of electric sparks among the migrants. Next morning he was present while the dead bodies were being collected. They are dispatched every day to Paris by train, and the "catch" he was told, often comprised from 2,000 to 4,000 victims; one morning alone there had been more than 500 woodcock in the "bag."

On the two mornings he was present there were only a score of woodcock the first day, but on the second the ground was littered with from 600 to 1,000 victims, chiefly blackbirds, ducks, woodcock, thrushes and golden plovers. Another offender is the lighthouse on Belle Ile, off the south coast of Brittany. On two dark nights last November, with an east wind blowing, this light caused the death of 3,200 birds, including curlews, thrushes, snipe, starlings, over 100 woodcock and some sparrows and quails. Thirdly, the Piller lighthouse kills every season some 700 woodcock.

An old sportsman of Normandy declares that round the lighthouse of Barfleur last November there were picked up in the course of four nights 10,000 birds of all sorts, including 1,800 woodcock. The destruction of bird life by the hundreds of lighthouses elsewhere can only be imagined.

SURGERY IN ANCIENT TIMES

Trepanning Is One of the Oldest of Operations, Dating Back to Stone Age.

There is no doubt that some rough form of surgery must have existed from very ancient times, but it is strange to find that so complex and delicate an operation as trepanning is one of the oldest.

So far as actual records go, Hippocrates gives us the earliest account. He wrote treaties on fractures, dislocations and wounds of the head, in which he described the method of procedure to be followed in the case of a fractured skull. His direction was to cut away a piece of bone so that the pressure on the brain might be relieved.

There are also records about this time and later of a file being used for this purpose, which at a time when anaesthetics were undreamed of must have been, to say the least, painful.

According to Dr. T. Rice Holmes, the operation of removing pieces of bone was performed long before historic times. The effects on the skull are easily seen after death and are visible so long as the bones are preserved.

From inspection of certain skulls of the later stone age in ancient Britain, Dr. Holmes has come to the conclusion that some of these had undergone the operation, which must have been performed with a stone implement.—London Standard.

Economy in Epitaphs.

In a certain town of Nebraska lives a man who has been so unfortunate as to lose three wives, who were buried side by side. For a long time the economical Nebraskan deliberated as to whether he should erect a separate headstone for each, commemorating her virtues, but the expense deterred him. Finally a happy solution of the difficulty presented itself.

He had the Christian name of each engraved on a small stone—"Mary," "Elizabeth," "Matilda"—a hand cut on each stone pointing to a large stone in the center of the lot, and under each hand the words:

"For epitaph see large stone."—Lippincott's.

WHO WOULDN'T BE TEACHER?

Here Is a Schedule of Her Daily Tasks, With an Estimate of Her Pay.

A school teacher is a person who teaches things to people when they are young.

The teacher comes to school at 8:30 o'clock, and when she has gotten enough children for a mess in her room, she teaches them reading, writing, geography, grammar, arithmetic, music, drawing, cooking, board sawing, crocheting, deep breathing, bird calls, scientific eating, patriotism, plain and fancy bathing, forestry, civics and other sciences too numerous to mention. When school is out she stays behind with five or six of her worst scholars and tries to save the state a job of reforming them later on. After that she hurries home to make herself a new dress and snatch a hasty supper before going back to attend a lecture by an imported specialist on the history of tribal law in Patagonia, which the superintendent thinks may give her some information which may be useful in her school work some day. A great many lecturers roam the country preying on school teachers and some of them are very cruel, talking to them so long that the poor things have to sit up till morning, when they get home, to get their daily test papers corrected.

School teachers' salaries range from $30 a month up—but not far enough up to make them dizzy. On her salary the teacher must dress nicely, buy herself things for her work which the city is too poor to get, go to twenty-nine lectures and concerts a year, buy helpful books on pedagogy, pay her way to district, county and state institutes, and enjoy herself during a three months' vacation which her salary takes every year. In addition the teacher is supposed to hoard away vast sums of money, so that when she becomes too nervous and cross to teach, at the age of fifty or thereabouts, she can retire and live happily ever after on her income.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

IS MOST POPULAR OF BOOKS

Bible Holds This Proud Position Partly on Account of Its Pure Literature.

The Bible is the most popular book in the world on account of its pure literature. Say what we will concerning the advancement of modern methods of style and beauties of expression, I doubt if anyone will approach some of the passages which can be found in the Psalms, in the Prophets, or in the Book of Revelation.

Considering the fact that these writings have come to us through translations, it is astonishing what beauties and power have been preserved. There is no book quoted oftener that the Bible. Passages have been woven entire into our own literature. No writer of any prominence has ever been able to escape borrowing from the Bible. The reading of it has affected the style of writers like Ruskin and Browning and Milton. Gladstone repeatedly acknowledged his indebtedness to the Bible for his phraseology. Charles Fox said more than once that he owed to the perusal of the Bible his vocabulary. The variety of expression to be found on the part of the different writers is strangely commingled with unity of expression due in large part to the fact that all of these men are writing with at least one great purpose in view. For we have in the Bible a style which is more or less uniform from beginning to end—even the style of expression.—The Christian Herald.

"Memento Garden."

A very popular woman has what she calls a "memento garden." All the flowers therein come from bulbs saved from plants sent her during her frequent illnesses. At first she used to give these pots of tulips or hyacinths away before the bloom was over either to the furnace man or to some other employe coming in daily, but one day a friend who had a country place asked for the bulbs of a particularly beautiful box of coral pink tulips, the flowers having a spicy and unusual degree of perfume. This made her consider her own flower beds, and thereafter the various lots of bulbs were dried and "bagged." Each bag was labeled and the place where the contents were eventually planted was marked to correspond. Thus each spring brings a reminder of kind friends, and the air is fragrant with their gifts. With proper care and favorable weather conditions the bulbs will bloom for a lifetime, and thus they constitute a lasting memorial of their donors.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called has proven its value in thousands of cases, like the following:

MRS. MARTIN.

MRS. DONA M. MARTIN, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write you in regard to what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and felt me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl.

"If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

DR. PIERCE'S GREAT FAMILY DOCTOR BOOK, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—of 1008 pages, answers hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know. Known by Their Actions.

Some people are like a fly on the body of an ox, in that they pass over all the sound, healthy parts, looking for a sore spot at which to stop and feed. Or like a hornet that rejects all the sound fruit and seizes upon the one rotting specimen. As the hornet reveals his nature by getting poison out of the same flower where the bee gets honey, so do these constitutional growlers prove themselves bad reporters by their bad report.

Out of the Mouths of Babes.

Western Child (returning from Europe, surfeited with monuments and many tombs)—Mamma, what's that?

Mother—The statue of Liberty, dear.

Western Child—Is that where Liberty is buried?—Puck.

Her Comprehensive Reply.

"I ask only," in well modulated tones said the earnest, fiddle faced young man, "that you give me what you can of your love and that you never strive for my sake to deny any yearning or strangle any impulse that pants within you. Give me what you can while you can give it without grudging or regretting, but the moment you feel that it is a task to love me renounce me forever, though the verdict pierce me to the very heart."

"How cute!" returned the fluffy young thing. "But—ee—hee! hee!—yes, Willoughby!"—Puck.

Early Manuscripts.

The type of letter in early manuscript was the same as that of those used on the earlier metal plates and wax tablets. All letters were capitals. Minuscule, or small lettering, as opposed to the majuscule, was invented in the seventh century. Before its invention there was no spacing between the words. There was no punctuation, unless possibly some mark between sentences. When cursive writing came into general use about the beginning of the tenth century the art was practiced by only a few highly trained scribes. This continued all through the middle ages. The scribes were artists, and they carried their art to a high degree of perfection. Many of the manuscripts of that period are very beautiful specimens of handwork and as perfect as print.

A Possible Derivation.

"Words are terribly funny things, aren't they?" said Mrs. Jones. "Take the word gargle—how on earth do you suppose they ever got that?"

"Very simple, my dear," said Mr. Jones. "Just look at yourself in the glass some time when you gargle and then look at a gargoyle, and you'll see."—Harper's Weekly.

The Ball at Sea

By Anna Woodward

The Indian ocean was a smooth gray blue, shining in the afternoon sun like a sheet of polished steel.

Every now and then fifty or a hundred flying fish would spring from the water, skim for some distance and drop into the sea like a shower of silver.

He kept leaning over the rail, quoting Kipling to himself and watching the play of these fairy fish, when she rested her book on the arm of her deck chair and said: "I waited for you for nearly half an hour."

He turned with the intention of sitting for a moment on the foot of her chair, a privilege to which he had come to assume some right, but she did not move her feet to make room for him.

"I am sorry," he said, standing before her. "Our challenge was to play quoits at half past four. I was on the upper deck precisely at the time appointed. I looked everywhere for you. I waited five minutes—even more. I thought you had forgotten."

"The wind had blown my hair. I had gone below for a minute. You might have waited. What became of you, anyway?" she asked, frowning a little.

"I have been in the music room," he said. "They wanted me to accompany a song."

"They? You mean Miss Roberts? Everything is explained—and forgiven," she added lightly.

"Jealous?" he said, smiling.

"Yes, dying with jealousy," she said and laughed merrily.

He was disconcerted. If he could have taken her by her shoulders and shaken her he would have done so with pleasure at that moment.

"Jealousy—it is, of course, an unpardonable emotion," he ventured.

But the prince, who was sitting next to her, had bent over to make some trivial observation, to which she had begun to reply with animation.

He strolled down the deck toward the smoking room, quite light hearted now over his determination. Almost since they had left the docks at Tilbury, since Gibraltar, at all events, it had been plain sailing between them. It was even possible he had been too devoted, he thought. He had been testing his power over her a little in the matter of this game of quoits. Tonight he would find out.

He was wanted to make up a party of four to play bridge. In two minutes he was happily absorbed in the smoke room. On the deck outside she, equally happy, was talking to the prince.

It was the night of the fancy dress ball and in his cabin the steward had laid out the costume he had brought for him, and to which she had put some finishing touches. It was the costume of an Arab chief which he had bought at Port Said, and though of all men the least vain, he might be excused for thinking that the sky blue cloak and vest embroidered with gold, the flowing white hair and scarlet slippers were not unbecoming.

The bugle sounded for dinner and he found himself descending to the saloon with a motley crowd of fellow passengers—a brilliant and gay assemblage, making a scene all the more impressive because this night those who wore fancy dress were seated together at the long tables down the center of the room.

She—her name was Iris—did not appear till rather late, and it was a sudden burst of applause which made him look up not to recognize her for a moment as an Egyptian water carrier, bearing on her head an earthenware vessel.

"The Egyptian will win the first prize," people were saying.

Certainly she looked beautiful and he was pleased at the tributes to her grace and charms. He had expected that she would take the vacant chair opposite to his own and it had crossed his mind that after all he would, as on the night of other dances, claim all, or nearly all, the waltzes; the Arab chief must dance with the water carrier of the Nile. But she found a place at the farther end of the table, a seat next to the prince.

After all, then, he would not dance; he would not even gratify her vanity by praising her costume, when, with her sister, she, as they always did, took their coffee with him in the lounge.

He went up early to secure the favorite sofa, ordered his cigar, his coffee and brandy, and waited.

But Iris and her sister did not appear until just as the procession of the masqueraders was being formed; before the dance they were to parade twice around the deck so that their fellow passengers might inspect the costumes and vote, and in the procession he found himself far removed from Iris.

It was beautiful on deck. The air was warm and delicious; the tropical moon was rising in full splendor behind a bank of clouds. The forepart of the deck was hung with flags and a hundred Chinese lanterns lighted the broad space stretched from side to side which formed the ballroom of the liner.

The competitors were divided into two classes, those who had made their costumes aboard and those who, like himself and like Iris, wore clothes they had bought on the voyage, in Italy or in Egypt; and there were some who, like the prince, were accustomed to the festivities of these long voyages from England to Ceylon and Australia and had come provided with wigs and false beards and elaborate costumes obtained from some theatrical outfitter. Yet even these were rivaled by some of the dresses made on board by ingenious feminine fingers.

But splendid beyond all the others was the costume of the Arab chief.

He determined to seek out Iris for the first dance, but before his end of the procession had completed the second turn of the deck the band had struck up and he perceived that the pretty water carrier was already the partner of the prince. He found a chair next to her sister, who declared herself too old to dress up or to dance, and sat there rather moodily watching the brilliant scene.

After all it was not much fun to dance on the floor which at every roll of the ship changed its angles and least of all with a girl who seemed to have forgotten the fact of his existence. In two days she would get off at Colombo and this special friendship which had been so delightful, might as well end tonight as a few nights later—yet, as a matter of form, he would ask her for a second waltz. But the interval ended, the second waltz began and Iris had not returned to her chaperon.

The prince promised to show her the southern cross, which will appear tonight for the first time," said her sister. "It was rather a long lesson in astronomy," she remarked a little rebukingly, when Iris made her appearance at the end of the second interval.

Iris looked radiant, and he put his pride in his pocket and determined to beg for the third dance, but before he could rise from his chair the first officer had come up to claim her. He watched her furtively, determined she should not have the gratification of knowing that he was even aware of her presence.

"How Iris enjoys herself!" said her sister. "And you—are not dancing tonight?"

"Not tonight," he said, "I am weary, and shall turn in early."

Nevertheless, he remained watching the dance, and each time that Iris returned to sit down a partner appeared as if by magic to take her away. All the evening they had not exchanged a word.

He turned to her sister. "When the ball is over we will have claret cup and sandwiches here," he suggested.

He was feeling restless and unhappy. The evening, which might have been so delightful, had been wasted; he had been badly treated; he had been deliberately slighted; but what he felt most, he said to himself, was the discovery that Iris was like every other girl; that if she had not flirted with the prince and the first officer, with all the officers and all the eligible men on board, it was because she had been having fun at his expense. He lashed himself into a fury.

The band had already begun to put away their instruments. Deck hands were taking down the Chinese lanterns and still Iris did not appear.

A storm of jealousy swept over him. He at all events should not be found sitting there waiting till she should graciously return. He got up hastily, pleading a headache, and went below.

It was the first time since the voyage started that he had not said "good night" to Iris.

After 20 minutes he was conscious of suffering unbearably. He went on deck again, hoping to see her; the lights were turned out; the deck deserted.

The next morning he was on deck soon after six. There was, of course, no chance that she would be visible before nine; but the mere fact of being up and dressed seemed to bring her nearer to him.

His own anxiety now was to see her to explain everything, to apologise, to beg her forgiveness.

He was amazed to see Iris advancing toward him. It was still very early; sailors were washing down the decks, one or two men in pajamas and dressing gowns were taking exercise before their bath.

Their eyes met while they were still some distance apart and, moved by the same instinct, both turned.

It was inevitable, however, that they should meet on the other side of the deck. Iris greeted him almost timidly. The radiance of the previous evening had vanished, there was tenderness in her eyes, gentleness in her voice.

"I could not sleep," she said. "I rose early to see Minekoi."

He noticed for the first time the beautiful coral island, the gleaming white beach and the waving line of cocoanut palms that seemed floating on the blue.

"It is a dangerous place," he said. "Three or four ships have sometimes been wrecked there at the same time."

"We at least have run no risks," she said.

"About last night," he began, and stopped.

She gave him a radiant smile.

"If I deserved it you punished me," he said. "And you looked so beautiful!"

"Last night we were masquerading," she said.

"I have decided, like you, to spend a fortnight at Colombo."

"It is a decision we must celebrate," she said, "by having breakfast together. My sister will not be up for hours. And we can go on with our conversation where you ended yesterday. 'Jealousy is, of course, an unpardonable emotion.' Go on."

"If it is carried over from one day to another," he ended. "Come, there goes the bugle for breakfast."

A Difference of Opinion.

"This is a bare sort of a salad."

"It isn't; it is well dressed."

Brawnier Recruits.

The style in girl babies is changing in Boston. They are taller than they used to be and come into the world with more vitality. Nature has undoubtedly taken cognizance of the advent of militant suffragism and is equipping the little ones for the strife.

Innovation Not Popular.

A New York clergyman was requested by a member of his congregation to ask the women to remove their hats in church. He said that he believed in the propriety of such a request, but wishing to avoid unpleasantness similar to that which followed a like demand on the part of Rev. Dr. Crass of St. Paul, he would try to ascertain the sentiment of the women on the subject. After a few days he told the woman who had suggested the no hat order that he had made a superficial canvass and added: "You remove your hat at service next Sunday and see how many women will follow the good example." In telling the story the woman said: "I was the only one. Now I wear my hat to avoid being conspicuous."

Not His Proper Play.

"Paid the taxes on your house and lot yet?"

"Yes, and there's a mistake of several dollars in the amount."

"Why don't you make a kick about it?"

"Kick! Huh! The mistake is in my favor."

"How do you know there's a mistake?"

"Because this is the first time in six years that the tax hasn't been increased."

Newsboy Pulled His Beard.

If Frank Carlo, who has been described as the loudest mouthed newsboy in New York, had only stopped to reason that it is not the usual thing for a person to return to have his beard pulled a second time after once suffering that indignity, the newsboy might not be serving a 10-day sentence in the workhouse. Simon Marks, whose long, flowing beard Carlo had pulled, returned, but not unattended, for a short distance away stood Detective Keller, who witnessed the second pulling.—New York Evening Telegram.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

"This where I get off," observed the awkward rider, when his horse proceeded to do some fancy bucking.

In these days of high cost of living a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a valuable and welcome remedy. John Heath Michigan Bar, Cal., had kidney and bladder trouble, was confined to his bed, unable to turn without help. "I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and can truly say I was relieved at once." His example is worth following. For sale by all druggists,

Those who make light of the educated pig seem to forget that he is a crackerjack when it comes to square root.

An increasing number of people report regularly of the satisfactory results from taking Foley Kidney Pills and commend their healing and curative qualities. Foley Kidney Pills are a carefully prepared medicine, guaranteed to contain no harmful or habit forming drugs. They can have only a beneficial effect when used for kidney and bladder troubles, for backache, rheumatism, weak back or lumbago. For sale by all druggists.

Few of us like the folks who find us out.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs colds or any bronchial affection its unequaled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Food for thought is more satisfying and fattening than thought for food.

What Makes A Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and tired, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart, for making such a good medicine." Only 50c. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is more difficult to shoe a horse than it is shoo a hen.

N. J. Gorham, Cashier Bank of Woodville, Woodville Ga., had a very severe attack of kidney trouble and the pains in his kidneys and back were terrible. "I got a bottle of Foley Kidney Pills from our druggists and they entirely relieved me, I have more benefit from them than any other medicine." For sale by all druggists

Insect Bite Costs A Leg

A Boston man lost his leg from the bite of an insect two years before. To avert such calamities from stings and bites of insects use Bucklen's Arnica Salve promptly to kill the poison and prevent inflammation, swelling, swelling and pain. Heals burns, boils, ulcers, piles, eczema, cuts, bruises. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

We do not always meet misfortune; quite as often it overtakes us.

A. M. Nason, farming near Canaan, Me., was badly crippled with sciatic rheumatism due he says to uric acid in his blood. "Foley Kidney Pills entirely cured me and also removed numerous black specks that were continually before my eyes." Foley Kidney Pills are a uric acid solvent and are effective for the various forms of rheumatism. For sale by all druggists.

Hope—Of the Lilies

By Dorothy Douglas

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Lorimer watched his neat, deft, little nurse as she arranged his breakfast daintily on a tray. He had been watching her for some two or more weeks going through the identical movements. He felt, in a degree, sorry that his broken leg was practically in a condition to suggest his departure for a few weeks in the country.

Lorimer had made a surprisingly quick recovery and he voiced his next thought:

"I hardly know whether it is your excellent care of me or those delicious fresh eggs that have thrown me out of this comfortable place so quickly." He laughed up at her as she placed the tray beside him and cut the top off an egg so creamy and white as to make his mouth water.

"It must be the eggs," returned Miss Lane, "at least you would think so if you could get a glimpse of the young woman who raises them——"

"Unique occupation," laughed Lorimer, then turned his attention to the small sign that had aroused his curiosity since the arrival of his first breakfast in the hospital. The stamp on each egg was a diamond in the center of which was a D.

"So the mystery is solved." Lorimer glanced again at his nurse. "What does the 'D.' stand for?" he asked, quite excited by this bit of interest in the dull monotony of an invalid's days.

"Dorcas Farms," informed the nurse. "The young woman, who lives with her mother out on Long Island, sends her fresh eggs to us every morning."

"Do you mean that she actually makes her living raising eggs—chickens?" Lorimer's ideas of ways and means for earning a livelihood were rather vague when it came to the gentler sex. In fact, his interest in the feminine element had been sadly discouraged by the unconditional refusal he had received from Clarice McClure. True, the divertisement of having his leg run over by a seven-passenger automobile had, in a way, taken his mind from the ravages of a broken heart.

"Exactly that," chimed in the nurse. "Hope Carter and her mother have managed to eke out a living for a year but it has been a hard struggle." Miss Lane's shoulders went up in a half doubtful gesture, "I tell Miss Carter she casts too much bread upon the water, but she continues to distribute charity wherever she goes. Now, for instance, she is coming in tomorrow with a basket of eggs colored for Easter so that the children in the hospital can each have one."

"Tomorrow?" Lorimer half arose from his pillows and was promptly lowered by the nurse's arm. "I want to see this Miss Hope Carter." He smiled whimsically, coaxingly at his nurse. "Do you suppose she could be induced to be charitable to—me? Men are but children—when they are ill," he added.

Miss Lane doubted in her heart if any girl could resist her big good-looking patient. She smiled her thoughts appealing, shadowed eyes suggested a thought of her.

"I will see what we can do," she told him, then said suddenly, "Doctor White thinks a few weeks in the country would do you a lot of good—perhaps Miss Carter and her mother——"

"You are awfully anxious to get rid of me," Lorimer spoke, half petulantly.

Miss Lane only smiled. "He will be far more anxious himself when Hope Carter has come and gone," she told herself.

So it was that during the next day Lorimer saw a slim, sweet Hope standing beside his bed. In her hands a cluster of Easter lilies and in her eyes the soul of a flower. That she was one of the world's wonders dawned on Lorimer the moment she came into his room. There radiated from her a sense of peace and strength combined.

The sick man stretched out a hand for the lily she would have put in the vase by his bed.

"I want to hold it—and smell it," he told her with his whimsical smile.

"These—are the first lilies that have come into bloom for me," she said with a little triumph in her voice.

"You—made these lilies grow?" Lorimer's tone was almost one of awe.

Hope Carter let fall a soft happy laugh. "Why yes—is it so strange? I found that eggs and poultry left not only some spare time but also some room in our pocket books." She laughed again with a lack of restraint in her manner that charmed Lorimer. "Mother and I find that the lilies do not rob our little farm of any financial or material aspect, they are so lovely!" She buried her nose in the fragrant blossoms.

"They certainly are," agreed Lorimer, looking into the depths of gray eyes above the flowers.

"I must be taking these to the other patients." Hope said with a soft flush in her cheeks. "I am anxious to tell everyone of my venture into the field of lilies."

Lorimer looked up at her and prompted by her gentleness said with an appealing look in his eyes, "Is there any possible way in which I could take a few weeks' sojourn in this field of lilies. The doctors have ordered me to the country and I detest and loathe country boarding houses and hotels." He laughed quickly. "I would probably break my leg all over again—in one of those places."

Hope laughed merrily. "You are most assuredly in a very bad way, Mr. Lorimer. But if you can stand primitiveness—together with eggs, chickens and lilies in abundance, my mother and I will be glad to take care of you for a few weeks."

Lorimer's eager smile brought a lump to Hope's throat and then a peculiar gladness to her heart.

"If you only would," he cried quickly; "it would be ideal—for me." He called out to his nurse, who he saw passing along the corridor, "Oh, Miss Lane! How soon could I manage to get into the country?"

The nurse smiled and made his plans for him. Lorimer was happier than he had been since Clarice McClure refused to love him.

It was on Good Friday and they took him out to the little farm on Long Island and he limped, on his new crutches, to the big chair on the veranda. Hope and her mother had come from the long glass house through which the white heads of lilies looked like little ghosts. Hope's hair was a riot of tawny gold and her eyes were as gray as the mountains.

Mrs. Carter greeted Lorimer and then went quickly into the tiny cottage for the egg-nog she had prepared for his coming.

"This place is like heaven," Lorimer half breathed, "at least I feel very near it." He looked contentedly up at Hope and saw her smile down into his eyes. "Very near," he repeated.

"But I am going to make you work," laughed Hope quickly. "Do you see that basket of eggs and all those funny little papers? I am going to put you to work as soon as you are rested—each egg must have one of those transfer pictures on it. Do you think you can do that?"

Mrs. Carter came out again with a long, foaming glass of egg-nog and waited until Lorimer had taken it.

"I feel as if I could do anything now," he said by way of thanking Mrs. Carter and answering Hope's question in one.

"I must go in now and practice my song for Easter Sunday," Hope said shyly. "They have asked me to sing in the village choir." She cast a laughing glance at Lorimer. "It will be almost as bad as being in a country boarding house to have to listen to me singing Easter hymns to the wheeze of our organ."

She tripped happily indoors and soon Lorimer heard a sweet, clear volume of tone coming out through the lattice windows.

He smiled with utmost contentment and was scarcely aware that he spoke aloud or that Mrs. Carter's eyes were watching him with motherly approval.

"Songs of praise, then let us sing," he repeated after the voice of Hope. He turned to Mrs. Carter and the smile that made women adore him was in his eyes. "You are going to acquire a son before another Easter comes," he told her.

TRIBUTE TO WOMEN LAWYERS

Famous French Criminal Pleader Tells Why They Are So Successful in Paris.

The Feminine Institute of Law of Paris, at the inauguration of a series of lectures recently, listened to an address by the famous criminal pleader, Maitre Henri Robert.

The eminent counsel drew a very flattering picture of his lady colleagues. "Women," he said, "do nothing by halves, and when they take up law they are admirable in their tenacity and ingenuity as well as in their confidence in the final result. Some counsel take up a case merely because it happens to come their way, and when it is over leave the court with a sense of relief. But there is another sort who have faith in justice and faith in others to bring about the triumph of their cause. Nothing wearies them, and no failure discourages them. They joyfully climb up every step in the ladder of jurisdiction, and if they are beaten they expect other judges to give them what they have just been denied."

M. Robert paid a high tribute to the services rendered by lady lawyers in penal cases, and especially where children are concerned, every little culprit always having a compassionate lady counsel to plead for him or her. He concluded by deprecating the facile jokes made at the expense of feminina pleaders.

"To console those who suffer and those who weep—often this is the lawyer's only role—I know nothing equal to an intelligent, sweet and indulgent woman."

There are now over thirty lady practitioners at the Paris bar, and most of them are engaged on criminal cases, principally in defense of women and children.

Machines to Stop Hail.

Assuming that electricity in the clouds is the sole cause of the production of hail, experiments are being made in France with apparatus designated as "electric Niagaras" to "drain" the cloud of electricity.

In installing the apparatus, huge copper points, bound together with bands of the same metal, are placed on the summit of a high tower or chimney, very much in the same way as lightning rods.

These are connected, says Popular Mechanics, with a copper band, which leads to the ground and ends in a reservoir filled with water. By this route the atmospheric electricity flows down into the earth.

The first sudden charge is replaced by a permanent one, which empties the clouds, so to speak.

Humor of Artemus Ward.

Some years ago the real scream in cachinnation was Artemus Ward. Our fathers were wont to read the witticisms of this great humorist and laugh till the tears ran down their cheeks. As an example of how funny Artemus could be when he tried, take this extract from his letter on Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, alleged to have been written in Richmond:

"Jeff. Davis is not popular here. She is regarded as a southern sympathiser, & yit I'm told he was kind to his parents. She ran away from 'em many years ago and has never bin back. This was showin' 'em a good deal of consideration when we reflect what his conduck has been. Her captur in female apparel confooses me in regard to his sex, & you see I speak of him as her and as frequent as otherwise, & I guess he feels so hisself."—Kansas City Star.

Approves of Modern Dress.

Many severe things have been said of the inartistic qualities of man's dress in modern times, so that it comes as a pleasing surprise to hear a word spoken in its defense by no less an authority than Antonio de la Gandara, the portrait painter. "In the first place," he says "people dress very well in these days. Thus, as regards the men, think of their evening dress clothes! Admire the sober lines, the perfect harmony! One dazzling point alone in the whole costume, the white surface of the shirt front, and all else is black, nothing but black. Do you know anything more beautiful? Never, possibly, has man's dress been nobler. In a century's time, it will be said, 'With what perfect art men of that time used to dress.'"

Unique Features in Bull Fight.

At El Toreo plaza bulls from six of the leading ganaderias of the republic fought in a benefit for the white cross, and a unique feature was introduced in that there were prizes offered for the bravest bull of the afternoon and for the best type of fighting bull shown. A prize of $1,000 was hung up for the bravest bull and a committee of aficionados chosen which sat as a sort of jury and rendered a decision.—Mexican Herald.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Adrian had a big "boost meeting" lately, and raised $8,500. The meeting was called in the interest of the Lion Motor Co., to arrange for their permanent stay in Adrian. Solicitors were on hand to begin an active canvas for sale of stock, and it is believed that Lion "30" has a big future in store.

Manchester is considering the advisability of organizing a Business Men's Association, not only among the business men but among the representative citizens. A move in the right direction.

Milan is progressing finely on the line of good roads, they have begun the paving of three of their streets with asphalt blocks. Wouldn't it be fine to have the business portion of our Chicago street dealt with in the same manner?

In view of the apathy that seems to have fallen upon the free born citizens of our country, the following from the Manchester Enterprise will not come amiss.

July 4, is perhaps the greatest day in the minds of the truly, loyal and patriotic citizens. The colony cut loose from the mother country and established business and trade relations on its own hook, unfurled the banner of freedom and liberty and has grown to be respected and feared. Every person should be proud to live in free America and endeavor to be true and loyal to the flag and to take part in seeing that good and just laws are obeyed. Let old glory be our emblem, love it and fight for it.

Petersburg has set apart Tuesday, August 22, as a Gala day, celebrating with a Harvest Festival. The managers of the interurban road promise to have cars running at that time, to bring visitors from Toledo and other points. Thus they will not only celebrate their Gala day, but the arrival of the cars on the new interurban road.

Adrian will have a new brick pavement at the Lake Shore Station, in place of that of the cobble stone at the Freight house. The pavement will reach the length of the two freight houses out to the Michigan street pavement.

WORK THAT A WATCH DOES

Read These Figures, and You Won't Wonder That the Mechanism Gives Out.

It is a matter of everyday occurrence for a person to say to his watchmaker:

"Here is a watch which you sold me some ten years ago. It has always gone well till just lately, when it has taken to stopping without any apparent cause."

The people who speak in this way little think of the amount of work a watch has performed in this space of time and might be astonished at the following figures:

In ten years, which includes two leap years, and consequently a total of 3,652 days, the hour hand has made 7,304 and the minute hand 87,648 revolutions. The end of an average minute hand travels more than 10,820 yards—more than six miles. The second hand has made 5,258,880 revolutions, and its extremity has traversed on the dial a distance of upwards of 133 miles. The escape wheel has made 52,588,800 revolutions, and as it has 15 teeth, it has come 788,832,000 times in contact with each pallet. The balance has made 1,577,644,000 vibrations, and any point on the outside of the rim has covered a distance of about 50,000 miles, and is equal to twice the circumference of the earth. —Answers.

Regulus a Roman Hero.

Regulus is counted as one of the great heroes of the old Roman empire. He was in command of an army that made an unsuccessful attempt to capture Carthage in Africa. The Carthaginians killed many of the Romans and took the rest prisoners. Among the captives was Regulus, the commander.

Now it happened that the Romans held several Carthaginians in captivity as well, so the leaders in Carthage offered to give Regulus his freedom if Rome would free their generals. The Romans were willing, but Regulus, the one for whom the trade was being made, counseled otherwise. He advised his people to hold fast to the Carthaginians and let Carthage do its worst to him, because the Carthaginian captives Rome held, Regulus said, were worth more than he was. He died a brave man's death.

Cat Fond of Eggs.

The owner of a clever cat writes to Our Dumb Animals that the pet, "a great, fat, lazy, good natured fellow," has a fondness for eggs. Sir Tom was detected in the kitchen recently on a table watching an unopened bag of eggs. "Stepping back noiselessly," writes the owner, "we saw him cautiously tear the bag with his teeth and claws, stopping every little bit to listen. Finally the opening was large enough for him to get out an egg by gentle little pats. He held the egg in his mouth, jumped to the floor, rolled his prize about gently until he got it into position, and then bumped it against the table leg until it broke. Then he enjoyed his feast." The writer wonders where Tom got the taste, as he is and "his ancestors for generations back were city bred."

His Last Resort.

A young man who sought death jumped off a high bridge and was saved. He threw himself off a cliff and was picked up uninjured. He shot himself and got well; hung himself and was cut down in time; tried gas just as the company shut off the supply; took poison and took too much.

"Well, well," he muttered, "there's one sure way left. I'll go and get a job in some big factory."

Tall Tales From the Tall Timbers of Texas

BY SAM JAY

Alvin, Texas,
June 28, 1912.

Dear Editor:—

One evening in May as J. B. and I sat under the climaberry tree discussing problems of state and absorbing the delightful fragrance of the soft Gulf breeze which wafted about us with odors of orange trees, roses, lilacs and a thousand varieties of wild and cultivated flowers, we dropped into a reminiscent mood and talked of the North—the frozen No'th as the Southerners call it—by way of comparison

Said J. B.: "This climaberry tree has got my goat. Smells like Illinois lilacs and I'm homesick."

"Yes," I replied, "and that band over there playing "Home, Sweet Home" reminds me of Michigan. Lets' buy two bits worth of paper and write up to God's country."

"Go ahead," said he, "write an essay, a ditty, a jingle or a conglomeration of job-lots, but don't let anything interfere with your reputation for veracity." With this advice in mind I give you herewith a few lines from the sun-kissed flowery kingdom of mankind, the land of vast areas and immense possibilities, the poor man's paradise and everybody's opportunity —the State of Texas.

Since leaving the town of Soda in pines—where I had ample opportunity to become a Soda pop in more senses than one—I have traveled extensively in different parts of the State, partly for pleasure and profit, but mainly as educational variety. After a visit to San Antonio and other points of interest in Central and West Texas, I returned to the Gulf Coast and listened to the siren song of the orange as rendered, in melodious and seductive tones, by the enterprising but not over truthful land and nursery men. A years experience with soils, seeds, seedlings, yearlings and older stock of the vegetable, animal and human family indigenous to the coast, convinced me that life is a continous roughhouse performance and this world a vale of tears

The Winter was very severe for this latitude—must have been a corker up North—being a succession of freezes and floods which all but destroyed the citrus fruit industry and caused us to emerge from our den in the spring, like Cassius of old, "with a lean and hungry look."

The organge growers were confident of ultimate success. By a process of budding from a bearing Satsuma orange tree on to a hardy citrus root—citrus trifoliata—they hoped to secure a cold resistant, fruit bearing scion but a temperature of fourteen and twelve degrees above zero, such as we've experienced the past two seasons is too severe even with the aids of windbreaks, smudge pots and orchard heaters.

When I first came down to Alvin in October of 1910, the young orange trees were loaded with golden fruit, roses and other flowers were blooming and the "homesuckers" and "come ons" were coming. One of the local or imported enthusiasts—a jabbering Jasper from Jasper county—showed me a small grove which yielded $1,000 worth of oranges from one acre of trees. The fruit was there all right, all right but I haven't seen any since and as for this year, I don't know—well maybe—ask the stars.

The business is very fascinating but requires abundant capital, unusual intelligence, patience and skill and is not an ordinary mans game.

In the previous letters to the Tecumseh Herald from Sam J. McClure, so much interest was created, and so many enquires made as to whether we would not hear from him again, the Herald was delighted to recieve this bright and interesting letter from Texas, which will be continued for several weeks.—Editor,

GOOD REASON FOR HIS HURRY

Government Employe Bound by Considerations Apart From the Ordinary Man.

It was on an occasion when a president of the United States was making a swing around the country. A man who was carrying the mail on a weekly route between a Missouri county seat town and a little postoffice out at a country store came dashing madly down the road in the direction of the town. A farmer who saw him coming and wondered at his great haste, halted him and said:

"What's the matter, Jimson? What's your great hurry this morning?"

"Hurry?" Jimson repeated, "why, don't you know the president is to be in town today?"

"Oh, I see," the farmer replied. "You want to get there in time to see him."

"It's not that that makes me hurry."

"It ain't?"

"No, sir! You may not know it, but this working for the government is mighty ticklish business, and a man has got to be awful careful, or he'll lose his job. Now suppose the president gets off the train down there and asks about me and I ain't there, and he finds out I'm late. Don't you see there'd be trouble right off, and I might be asked to resign?"

"I see."

"Yes, sir. So I ain't taking no chances. When the president steps off the train and asks the crowd, 'Where is Jimson?' I'm going to be there, so I can step right out and say: 'Here I am, sir.'"—Kansas City Star.

Lesson From the Past.

Sir Isaac Newton had discovered the law of gravitation.

"Now," he said, "I'd like to have a test case brought before the supreme court as soon as possible, to find out whether or not it's constitutional."

For he knew the Aviators would insist that it exercised an unreasonable restraint upon their trade.

CURES WROUGHT BY CHINESE

Ministrations of Physicians Have Good Effect, Though the Cause May Be Obscure.

"Chinese physicians are popular with women in our city," said a doctor from California. "Their method of diagnosis is very simple. A woman tells a Chinese doctor where she has a pain and he feels her pulse—nothing more. Then he tells her for how many thousand years his race has understood the human body and mind. This makes a great impression upon the woman patient and she goes forth with great faith in the learned Chinese and the medicine he has given her, which is usually harmless enough, but not to be found among the remedies approved by materia medica.

"However, the Chinese doctors are clever, and they do effect some cures in spite of their medicine. Lay it, perhaps, to the mental effect—the subtle influence of an alien personality combined with an awe of learning outrunning the oldest in America by so many hundreds of centuries."

BASE BALL

TECUMSEH HAS A STRONG INDEPENDENT TEAM

Tecumseh has a ball team and a good one, in fact, they put up as fast a game as some of the salaried teams.

Saturday afternoon they played Clinton on the Clinton grounds, and but for an error (the only one they made), would have shut them out.

Leonardson pitched 7 innings, allowing but 3 hits and striking out eight men, Bramble finished the game. Charlie Hanna starred with the stick making 2 singles and a double with 2 men on bases.

The Tecumseh team has the following: V. Rogers, Exelby, Bramble, E. Rogers, C. Hanna, O. Hanna, Van Winkle, Don Heesen, Lenardson.

Score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E
Clinton	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	5	2
Tecumseh	0	1	1	0	0	0	3	1	0	6	10	1

Batteries—Campbell, Mahrle and Van Gelson; Leonardson, Bramble and Van Winkle.

Games with several fast teams have been booked.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN LEAGUE NOW A SIX CLUB LEAGUE

The Southern Michigan Base Ball League has been reduced to six Clubs by the dropping out of Saginaw and Bay City. Indifferent ball playing to indifferent support, then a loss of $8000 for the two clubs led to this decision on the part of Saginaw and Bay City at least for this year.

This is a warning to the other Clubs of the League. A new schedule will soon be taken up by the League.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN LEAGUE

Revised Schedule for first six days beginning Sunday, July 14. July 14, 15, 16, Battle Creek at Adrian, Jackson at Flint, Lansing at Kalamazoo. July 17, 18, 19, Adrian at Flint, Kalamazoo at Jackson, Lansing at Battle Creek.

ATTENTION PATRONS

Tecumseh Grange No. 163 will have a picnic at the farm home of Newton L. SAVED FROM A WATERY GRAVE

Another Boy Nearly Drowned, Saved by a Companion

Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock Bernard Hastings came near drowning in the Red Mill pond. He and several other boys were playing on the big bridge diving from it when his feet tangled in a rope, he hung head down under water. Harry Cregor bravely plunged in after him and brought him to the surface It took about fifteen minutes of hard work to resussitate him but he came out all right.

About three years ago a younger brother was drown at nearly the same place.

Several years ago Harry was saved from drowning by "Bo" Slear and evidently believes in passing the good work along.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remeber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

ALDRICH IN THE OLD DAYS

How the Author Appeared When He Had Just Become Editor of Atlantic Monthly.

I can see him now, sitting at the round table at Oscar's, holding a briar pipe that was oftener between his fingers than in his mouth, and swinging it in graphic curves as he talked to us. He used it like a painter's brush or pencil.

He was dressed in a quiet suit of tweeds, the sobriety of which was relieved by a flowing crimson scarf gathered at the neck by an antique ring. He was partial to crimson in those days, and it became his complexion and the light curls apostrophized by Bayard Taylor. We parted late and in a merry mood, the young fellows among us glorying in the new friend who was so witty, so suave, and so attentive to our ambitions and aspirations. Moreover, Aldrich had just succeeded to the editorship of the Atlantic Monthly, and hopes arose of possible advantages lying for young authors in that direction.

"I'll have an elegy ready for him before breakfast, and try to get ahead of Edgar," said Frank Saltus, referring to Edgar Fawcett, as the lights went out in Oscar's and we dispersed, and on the following morning he came to me, dissembling an air of despondency.

"It's no use. Edgar's beaten us all. He shipped a car load to the Atlantic by the fast freight before daylight—as per invoice, sonnets, ten bales; triolets, ballads and rondeaux, three bales; novels and short stories, twenty tons in fifteen crates."—Bookman.

MAPS OF THEIR HOME STATES

Exiles Keep Them Hanging In Their Offices Because They Get Very Homesick.

To that general information bureau, the elevator starter, went the man who wished to see a large map of Wisconsin.

"Where can I find one?" he said.

"There is a Wisconsin man in business on the eleventh floor," said the starter. "He'll be likely to have one."

Up to the eleventh floor went the seeker for a map. He found one there.

"How does it happen," he said to the Wisconsin exile, "that all you men from other states keep a life-size map of your native state hanging up in your offices for a year or two after migrating to New York? Is it because you are homesick?"

"Partly," said the Wisconsin man, "and partly for the accommodation of visitors from back home. I guess you are right about every last one of us exiles clinging to a home map for a while. I have been into the offices of recent arrivals from half the states in the Union, and every place I saw a state map. I suppose those people got them for the same reason I did. Back in Milwaukee I never thought of owning a map of Wisconsin, but now that I am a thousand miles away it does me good to trace familiar railroad routes and locate well-known towns. Then, a lot of Wisconsin people here on a visit drop in, and as they expect to go back soon it is a material as well as a sentimental advantage to them to find a Wisconsin man [illegible]."

Sincerity.

Roscoe, aged three, had been taken to Sunday school, for the first time, by his brother Richard, two years his senior. It was customary for the entire class to kneel at the beginning of the recitation period each Sunday and repeat the Lord's Prayer in unison, slowly and solemnly, with pauses. Roscoe had been thoroughly drilled in the prayer, so that no trouble was anticipated on that score.

On the particular Sunday of Roscoe's first and only visit, the prayer had reached the clause, "Give us this day our daily bread," when, during the pause which followed, little Roscoe, to the distress of Richard and the consternation of the class, added in a shrill treble, "And a little gravy!"—Judge.

FEATHERED PET ON WATCH

Canary Has Constituted Itself Guardian of New York Man's Infant Treasure.

Bringing home a canary in a cage, a Yonkers man gave it to his wife as a birthday present and the songster was established in the lady's boudoir, not far from a crib in which the household baby took daily naps. The tot immediately became interested in his new neighbor and the bird would fly against the bars of his brass prison in efforts to get nearer the child. But the pair got better acquainted when the baby was held up to the cage and had its fingers thrust inside the bars. On such occasions the canary would hop on the baby's hand and gently peck at the tiny, dimpled digits.

After a few weeks the bird was often released and permitted to spread its wings in the room. Later it was given the freedom of the house, but although it flew into various rooms, it would not long remain absent from the boudoir and the crib. Baby and bird became intimate friends and the bird would hop on the baby's head and hands, but carefully avoided being clutched in the fat little fingers. When the infant goes to sleep the canary perches on the foot of the crib, and there it stays on guard until the little one awakes. And it is a good sentinel, for if any one approaches the sleeper it begins to sputter, ruffle its feathers and otherwise manifest symptoms of displeasure in approved bird fashion.—New York Press.

CAT MUST NOT BE STRUCK

Other Method of Punishment Is Recommended by an Authority on the Subject.

It isn't a very nice task to punish pussy if you're fond of her, but there are times when she must be chastised. This is how to do it, according to Louis Wain, the great authority on the fascinating feline.

In the first place, don't actually strike the cat. A blow merely numbs it. And when the spine, which is its most sensitive part, is struck—particularly if the cat is old—it is likely to spring at the striker.

When pussy does anything wrong, frighten the wrongdoer by striking a stick in the ground. A cat is most sensitive to sounds, and will connect this new noise with what it has done. It feels more intensely than most animals; hence its supposed savagery in cases. Cats are highly electrical, and it is very good to have one perch on one's shoulder or knees.

Forcing Growth of Plants.

Plants have a mind of their own on the subject of winter sleep, and gardeners have tried various methods of waking them up prematurely, to furnish blossoms at a time when they are scarce and costly. Mere greenhouse heat and moisture failing to yield the desired results, they have successfully tried warm baths and ether vapors to shorten the hibernating period of bulbs. From Germany comes a description of the latest plan, devised by a man named Weber. By sticking a needle into the base of a bud he has caused it to unfold two or three weeks ahead of its fellows. Still more time was gained by injecting water into the buds. Not content with water, a physician has tried injections of water with 10 per cent. of alcohol. By this means he succeeded in gaining ten days in the budding of oak twigs.

Marked Difference in Skins.

An importing firm recently received a shipment of tiger cat skins from Paraguay and the Argentine Republic, and placed alongside a lot of North American wildcat skins the difference in color and markings was very noticeable. Both animals are of about the same size, but the South American cat is covered with round black spots much like those of the leopard, but smaller in size. These spots contrast strongly with the surrounding fur, which is of a grayish white color, very different from the reddish color of the North American wildcat. The fur of the South American wildcat is not so thick as that of his North American cousin, but the skins are said to dress well and make good robes and rugs.—Fur News.

The Upper Class.

"Aviation is quite an aristocratic sort of sport, isn't it?"

"Certainly, since all who pursue it may properly be described as belonging to the upper class."

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, of dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called

MRS. MARTIN.

MRS. DORA M. MARTIN, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write you in regard to what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and am now well and healthy. I feel like a young girl. If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

What Susie Was.

The Mexican was showing his newly arrived New York guest to a room, and after the usual courtesies he paused on the threshold to say: "By the way, we always turn Susie loose for the night, and she will pass through the hall on her way to the top floor, where she catches rats. You'd better be careful and not step on her, as that is the only thing that makes her cross."

"It wouldn't be very serious if I did make a cat cross," was the laughing response. But the host shook his head.

"I don't know much about cats," he said. "Our Susie is a boa constrictor. She's as gentle as a baby, unless you step on her. Sometimes she takes a short cut through this room, so don't be surprised if you see her. Good night."

Not the Same Thing.

This overheard conversation appeals to the weary one as nearly epigrammatic. The young people on the seat ahead of us in the homeward-bound car the other night talked it out so loud that we couldn't help hearing it and jotting down a few notes on it.

"So," said the girl, "he said he knew me when I was a little girl?"

"He didn't say anything of the sort," contradicted the man.

"You said he did."

"I didn't."

"Why! Then what did you say?"

"I said he said he knew you when he was a boy."

That put such a wet blanket on the conversation that we were unable to read our sporting extra uninterrupted for the next several blocks.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Individuality.

No process is so fatal as that which would cast all men in one mold. Every human being is intended to have a character of his own, to be what no other is, to do what no other can do. Our common nature is to be unfolded in unbounded diversities. It is rich enough for infinite manifestations. It is to wear innumerable forms of beauty and glory. Every human being has a work to carry on within, duties to perform abroad, influences to exert, which are peculiarly his, and which no conscience but his own can teach.—Channing.

How to Be Prominent.

"Why aren't you a suffraget?"

"I think I can get more publicity by opposing the movement," replied the prominent lady courteously.

Emmanuel Catty's Radish

By B. L'Estrange

"Yes!" Emmanuel Catty sat up triumphantly. "With my patent manure I will grow the biggest radishes in the United States."

Emmanuel Catty was a recent emigrant to America. On the voyage thither he had become converted to vegetarianism, and henceforth intended to devote his life to the culture of vegetables, convinced that fame and fortune would crown his efforts. It had taken his fertile brain but a short period to evolve a manure, combined of more chemicals than could be named in a summer's day. Of its universal efficacy he had no doubt; but desirous of proceeding with all prudence, he intended to try it first on the humble but tasty and succulent radish. He manured his plot of ground, and sowed his seed accordingly; but, as time went on, the leaves of only one radish appeared above the ground.

"Never mind," said Emmanuel, "it will be a monster."

The weather was exceedingly hot, but the radish grew and prospered. Its leaves filled all Emmanuel's little plot and broke down the fences. Emmanuel watered it daily from the well at the back of his house; but the heat continued, and by and by the well gave out. Then, one by one, all the wells in the neighborhood gave out; there was a drought.

Presently the only green things in the neighborhood were the leaves of the huge vegetable, which, in spite of the heat, continued to grow and prosper. People came from miles round to see the radish, till Emmanuel piled a huge barricade of old meat tins in front of it, and demanded a cent apiece for permission to look inside. Then still more persons came, for they knew there must be something worth seeing, if they had to pay in order to see. Emmanuel's pride and his profits grew daily, till at last it was time to dig up the radish.

But, behold! It would not come up. Emmanuel Catty, aware that it would be work of some difficulty, had requisitioned half-a-dozen neighbors with picks and shovels to assist him, and a large cart wherewith to carry the radish away. But the farther down he and his companions dug the farther the radish extended.

Its bulk diminished, it is true, after they had dug down a hundred feet or so; it showed slight symptoms of narrowing, as if intending to taper, as do ordinary radishes. But its perfection had to be taken on trust, for let its owner and his companions dig as they would, the radish showed no signs of stopping. The tail seemed prepared to continue indefinitely.

By this time scaffolding was erected, and the sides of the pit round the radish were strutted up; the whole state had gone wild with excitement; and three leading newspapers had opened subscription lists to enable Catty to continue the work of extracting the radish. So the digging continued, and as Catty superintended it, he realized suddenly the cause of the drought; that wretched radish had drawn to itself all the water in the neighborhood, and tapped the wells!

If anything, this increased the interest of the public; people felt that they had sacrificed something to the radish, and had a right in it; so the boring went on with undiminished energy, Emmanuel Catty heading the workers and rejoicing in the thought that he was famous at last.

After some weeks, however, the work came to a standstill; the heat in the mine was becoming intense, and the radish still extended downward. Emmanuel nearly went with disappointment when the suggestion of giving up the task was first made. Come what would, he vowed he would see the end of that radish. "I believe," he cried, "that it goes right through the earth!"

People looked at each other dubiously; it seemed possible that the idea was correct; but how to put it to the test? The heat in the mine was already stifling. Then Catty had another idea.

"Let us excavate inside the radish itself!" he cried. "That will be cool enough."

This was true; the water which the radish had sucked up into itself from so large an area kept it cool and fresh; besides, it was easy to work, and not difficult to strut up; so into the very heart of the radish plunged Catty and his devoted followers, burrowing steadily downward, and excavating the radish pulp day by day.

Some of it they ate, thereby obviating the necessity for a large supply of provisions. The hole in the radish communicated with the mine, and the mine in its turn with the upper atmosphere; so the air supply was sufficient, and they persevered.

"It strikes me," said one of Catty's companions one morning, "that we must be really getting somewhere at last." He struck his pick against the radish wall as he spoke, and it went through. The next moment a shout of horror burst from the workers. Water was pouring in at the hole! Luckily, the hole was one of the smallest—the radish texture strong. With already hewn fragments of radish, they contrived in desperate haste to stuff up the aperture. Then Catty stooped and tasted the water pooling about his feet.

"It's salt!" he cried. "We are passing through the sea!"

Panic seized on his comrades. They cut and hewed their way into the middle of the radish root; and only when the radish walls were thick around them did they venture to continue their downward path.

At last one day, when Catty was leading as usual, he again struck his pick through the radish wall. He uttered a cry of dismay, fearing a second inrush of the sea. But instead light and fresh air flowed in, grateful indeed to those who had lived so long in a radish-steeped atmosphere.

"We have arrived!" cried Catty, grasping his companions' hands. "This is the end!"

Eagerly they enlarged the aperture, and crawled cautiously out. Behold, on every hand was the sea! The radish root had emerged somewhere to the south of India, and they were resting on a little island of radish in the midst of the Indian ocean. At first they were terrified, but Catty encouraged them.

"We can remain here a little time," he said. "No doubt a ship will come to take us off."

His words were brave, but the suspense was great. The radish tip afforded but a slippery resting place; they were in considerable fear of the sharks, which they could see sometimes through the clear waters; and the radish here and there, enfeebled by the boring, crumbled, and they saw large bits of it swept off by the waves. One day the piece on which Emmanuel Catty was standing broke. His comrades only seized him just in time to prevent his being washed away.

"What shall we do?" they cried. "How can we support life here?"

Emmanuel leant forward suddenly, nearly falling into the water. "A sail!" he cried. "A sail! We are saved!"

As a matter of fact, it was a trail of smoke; but it issued from the funnels of a British steamer, and the captain took them off. He was a Scotsman, and his name was Macallister, and he utterly declined to believe in Catty's story.

"A radish!" cried Macallister, pointing to the root contemptuously. "Impossible! It is an island, and I shall take possession of it in the name of the British empire." And he hoisted the union jack accordingly.

Meantime, in America a close watch had been kept at the mouth of the mine. Five thousand seven hundred and eighty-two reporters were continually on the watch for news of the bold adventurer, Catty. When word came of the action of Captain Macallister the excitement was intense. The radish had been planted in American earth; it had drawn its nutriment from America; it was America's by all the sacred laws of ownership. The English said that might be as it would; but they claimed the radish tip by right of discovery. It had been found and seized upon by Captain Macallister, and was irrevocably English.

Passion on both sides ran high. The newspapers rang with denunciation of American greed and English treachery. The American ambassador was directed to withdraw from London, when the news spread that the radish tip had disappeared. A British trading vessel, cruising near the place marked on the chart, could find no trace of it.

The excitement grew tenfold. Special commissions sent out from England and America only confirmed the fact of the disappearance. For a moment both excited parties were inclined to turn to Germany, and declare that she must have been guilty of some diabolical plot for the destruction of the radish.

But meantime Emmanuel Catty had directed the attention of various scientists to the matter, and a little investigation showed that the disappearance was perfectly natural. The great heat through which the radish had passed, the tunneling through its heart, the action of the sea, had been altogether too much for it; it was fading and withering away. In a few months the only traces left of the phenomenon were the enormous mining works—the largest in the world—so complete was the decay of Emmanuel Catty's radish.

There was a considerable demand for Catty's manure; but the cost of its manufacture was so great that it could not be sold at a profit. Perhaps it was just as well.

Missionaries Raise Coffee Price.

A New England gentleman reports the receipt of a letter from a coffee planter in Brazil referring to complaints in this country concerning the high price of coffee. The letter says:

"Your people sent missionaries to tell the workers on our plantations that it was wrong to go naked, which was the custom, or nearly so, in the majority of cases. Now they not only wear clothes, but they long to possess three or four pairs of those yellow shoes' which were sold down here by your Boston drummers. Furthermore, our travelers to the States upon their return tell us of the great quantities of a beverage called beer consumed by your people, and sold at 5 cents a glass. Now, any one who understands the coffee business knows that it costs more to produce a good cup of coffee than it does a glass of beer and there can be no question as to which is the most beneficial. You must either call home your missionaries, both religious and commercial, or pay the price."

Reward for Carefulness.

A quaint paragraph appeared in the will of Mrs. Julia Hall of Brighton, England. At the reading of the will the other day it was found that she had bequeathed $500 to her coachman, provided he is in her service at her death, and "if I do not die through or from the effects of a carriage accident when he is the driver."

Nature's Wise Provisions.

Many Scandinavians have a decidedly different anatomical construction from less hyperborean people. In these hardy northmen the layer of fat under the skin, panniculus adiposus, is somewhat seal-like and blubbery, something like in those cold sea animals, the whale, seal and walrus. Also the blood vessels in this fat are somewhat overdeveloped as in sea mammals. All this comes about from exposure to the severities of disease and climate. It is no unusual thing for Norwegians and Swedes to stay in icy cold water for hours hunting sea weed without suffering sickness or discomfort.

SWEETEST OF ALL PLANTS

South American Shrub Has Properties That Put Sugar Completely in the Shade.

It has been suggested that what may turn out to be the great sugar producing plant of the future is a dwarfish shrub found in South America. Its botanical name is Eupatorium rebandium, and, it is said, the results of careful experiments indicate that it yields a sugar from twenty to thirty times as sweet as ordinary cane or beet sugar. One advantage claimed for the sugar derived from this plant is that it occupies, in proportion to its sweetening powers, less than one-twentieth of the bulk of ordinary cane sugar.

The world today uses more than twice the amount of sugar that it did a quarter of a century ago. The people of the United States consume a great deal more sugar, in one form or another, than those of any other nation. It is surprising to learn that in Europe sugar was used at first only at feasts and for medicinal purposes. At the close of the seventeenth century the sugar industry in France was a monopoly controlled by the apothecaries. Its introduction as an article of table use was vigorously opposed, eminent authorities declaring it "a poison." Boyle and other scientists of his day averred that sugar induced congestion of the lungs, apoplexy, diseases of the stomach and even consumption. By far the sweetest substance known at this time is the coal tar product called saccharine. It is two hundred times the sweetness of cane sugar.

STORM DOES DAMAGE

Property Loss of $2,500,000 by Cloudburst in Denver.

At Denver, Colorado, two persons are know to be dead, fifteen are suffering from injuries, as many others are missing, a thousand are homeless and a loss of $2,500,000 to the city and individuals in property as a result of the storm which inundated the city in the afternoon and at night sent down Cherry creek a flood that overran the creek's walls and spread out over many square miles of thickly built up territory.

In addition to devastation in the Cherry creek and Platte river bottoms, great damage resulted in all parts of the city and suburbs. Thousands of chickens, hundreds of horses and cattle were drowned and hundreds of vegetable gardens were ruined.

Ten thousand visitors at City park were marooned for hours, taking refuge in the pavilions, seeking shelter under trees and experiencing great discomfort. Deep mud still covers miles of sidewalk in the city, though the cleaning of the streets is in progress.

The union station was flooded and women passengers arriving or departing were carried to and fro on baggage trucks. Men waded through four feet of water, many stripping their feet.

REFUSE TO INDORSE TAFT

Iowa Republicans Shout for Roosevelt and Attack Chicago Platform.

At Des Moines, Iowa, by a vote of 773 to 342 the Republican state convention refused to endorse the national ticket and the Chicago platform.

The convention left the issue to "the conscience of the individual voter." The Roosevelt element, which was noisy but not numerous, made no attempt to secure an endorsement, but at the special meeting at the Savery hotel decided to hold a Roosevelt state convention in Des Moines July 20. Pending that time county mass-meetings will be held and delegates named and arrangements made for putting a full ticket in the field. As a result of the slight placed on the national ticket the Taft Republicans promise that they will slaughter the state ticket at the polls and elect a Democratic legislature which will choose the successor to Senator W. S. Kenyon.

CONVICTS CAMORRA CHIEFS

The verdict at Viterbo, Italy, in the Camorra trial was handed down. Nine of the accused were unanimously declared guilty of the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife. The remainder of the band were found guilty of belonging to a criminal association.

The verdict declares Corrado Sortino guilty of both murders; Nicolo Morra, Antonio Cerrato and Mariano de Gennaro, guilty of the murder of Cuoccolo, and Giuseppe Salvi as well as Corrado Sortino guilty of the murder of Cuoccolo's wife.

The instigators of the murders, including Enrico Alfano, Giovanna Rapi, De Marinas and others also are declared guilty

GRAND RAPIDS SWEPT BY A TORNADO

Thousands of Dollars Worth of Property Destroyed.

Forty Persons Are Injured—City Market and Central League Baseball Park Is Badly Wrecked.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 15.—Grand Rapids was hit early in the day by a cyclone that injured forty or more persons and did thousands of dollars' worth of damage. The storm entered the city from the southwest.

The first place struck was the city market and the Grand Rapids Central league baseball park adjoining.

The market was crowded with farmers and their teams, as trading had just begun.

After the storm struck the roof of the ball park grand stand it was lifted and hurled to pieces, being scattered all over the market. A panic followed.

Horses were killed and a great many persons were hurt, some so badly they had to be sent to the hospital. The police reserves and fire department were called out.

The storm then swept across town, striking the best residence district.

STRANGLED BY ROOMMATE

Boy In Traverse City Hospital Victim of Demented Youth.

Traverse City, Mich., July 12.—Charles Bucher, a twelve-year-old Boyne Falls boy suffering with infantile paralysis, was strangled to death by George Langdon, aged seventeen, an inmate of the state hospital.

The Langdon boy, who was mildly affected, was placed in the room with the Bucher boy for company and the two had always got along well together. The theory of the officials is that the older boy might have choked Bucher when the latter cried during the night and held on longer than he intended.

CHAFIN IS NAMED BY DRY CONVENTION

Prohibitionists Choose Him as Presidential Candidate.

Proposal Is Made that Party Name Be Changed, Faction Having Outgrown Its Original Appellation in Opinion of Many.

At Atlantic City, N. J., Friday the Prohibition national convention nominated Eugene W. Chafin of Arizona as candidate of the party for president. He was the first of several candidates to have his name offered to the convention and it was seconded by Illinois. Chafin was the candidate for the presidency four years ago.

F. W. Emerson of California and Andrew Jackson Houston of Texas, son of General Samuel Houston, also were candidates before the convention.

Aaron S. Walkins of Ada, O., was nominated for vice president.

Suggestions that the party had outgrown its name, which have been discussed ever since the gathering here of the delegates, brought a definite proposal from Rev. S. H. Taft of California that the convention adopt the name "conservation party."

Michael J. Fanning of Philadelphia led the appeal for campaign funds when the convention began. For an hour the convention was given over to the money question.

Prospect of one more contest before adjournment developed when members of the special committee appointed last December to draft a party constitution signified their intention of urging their report for adoption. Many delegates are opposed to some of the proposals.

Approximately $11,000 was secured in cash and promises. It was announced from the platform by Chairman Scanlan that about $36,000 had been contributed before the proposition was placed before the convention.

The platform as finally adopted said:

"The alcoholic drink traffic is wrong, and, therefore, all laws taxing or licensing a traffic that produces crime, poverty and political corruption and spreads disease and death should be repealed.

"The election of United States senators by direct vote of the people; presidential terms of six years and one term only; uniform marriage and divorce laws; the extermination of polygamy and the complete suppression of the traffic in girls; suffrage for women upon the same terms as to men; the recognition of the rights of labor without impairment of the rights of capital; the settlement of all international disputes by arbitration; the initiative and referendum; the tariff should be fixed on the basis of accurate knowledge secured by a permanent non-partisan tariff commission with ample powers; an elastic currency system adequate to our industrial needs; the complete and permanent separation of church and state; the abolition of child labor in the mines, workshops and factories with the rigid enforcement of laws now flagrantly violated."

The platform also favors an equitable graduated income and inheritance tax; conservation of our mineral and forest preserves and laws for the regulation and control of corporations and greater efficiency and economy in government.

MOUNT MORRIS—At a recent meeting of the village aldermen Marshal George Pullen was removed from office on a charge of using profane language and conduct unbecoming an officer on the streets of the village July 4.

FAIRCHILD IS ELECTED

Chosen President of National Educational Association.

At Chicago Edward T. Fairchild, superintendent of schools of Kansas, was elected president of the National Education association after some preliminaries almost as exciting as those of the recent Republican national convention.

There were accusations of intimidation, steam-roller tactics and general denunciation of Chicago as having seized the control of the election machinery for the purpose of defeating the candidacy of Miss Grace C Strachan of New York.

The latter was nominated on the floor of the convention by Miss Katherine D. Blake, and Miss Matilda Ford, one of Miss Strachan's campaign managers, made charges of intimidation after a heated behind-the-curtain controversy with Miss Margaret Haley of Chicago.

The fight reached a crisis following the submittal of the report of the nominating committee, which in the forenoon session had given the Fairchild candidacy thirty-four votes as against seven for Miss Strachan.

ORDERS RATES REDUCED

Express Companies Hit by Interstate State Commerce Commission.

The interstate commerce commission has ordered reductions in the rates charged by express companies. It has also ordered far-reaching reforms in the regulations and practices of the companies and has also imposed upon them a uniform system of rate making.

The order of the commission, while not final, is subject only to a hearing to be given the express companies on Oct. 9. The commission calls upon the companies to show cause at that time why the changes in rates and practices should not immediately go into effect. This tentative arrangement of the commission merely means that they desire to give the express companies an opportunity for a final word in their own defense.

The decision of the company will cause a general reduction in rates on small packages of about 20 per cent. While the average reduction is only 20 per cent the reductions taken altogether range from 10 to 50 per cent.

14 DIE IN WRECK

Fatal Catastrophe Occurs Just Outside Chicago.

Near Chicago, Ill., fourteen persons met almost instant death, two died while being rushed to hospitals and forty persons were injured when the Omaha mail train on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, going at a speed of nearly sixty miles an hour, crashed into the rear end of the Denver Limited passenger train No. 2.

The wreck, one of the worst fatalities in the history of the railroad, occurred at 6:30. Heroic efforts were made by the crew of the heavily loaded passenger train to avoid the impending crash.

Fourteen bodies were taken from the wreckage to C. E. Johnston's undertaking rooms at LaGrange. Two of the victims, Mrs. E. G. Pohlmann and a woman supposed to be Mrs. Caulman, died while enroute to Chicago on a relief train.

Pending an official investigation, P. S. Eustis, passenger traffic manager of the railroad, in a statement, placed the blame of the accident on the engineer of the passenger train, which ran past the signal set for stop at Western Springs, clearing the west block at Hinsdale.

SENATOR LORIMER LOSES HIS SEAT

End of a Struggle Which Has Lasted Three Years.

Ousting of the Illinois Senator Follows Many Days of Debate—Final Stand Made by Mr. Lorimer.

The United States senate, by a vote of 56 to 27, declared that William Lorimer of Illinois was not entitled to his seat. This final decision of the senate marks the end of Mr. Lorimer's fight to retain his seat which has extended over a period of three years.

Senator Lorimer of Illinois made a speech in the senate covering three days, in which he lashed his enemies and defended his right to the seat in the senate.

Considerable speculation has been caused in political circles the country over by the statement of William Lorimer of Illinois that the vote of the United States senate ousting him from his seat was not the end of the fight, which he vowed to still carry forward.

The vote of the senate followed many days of debate, during which eloquent pleas were made both for and against the Illinoisan's retention of his seat. The final ejection from the senate of Illinois' junior representative follows two lengthy federal investigations, between which the Illinois legislature took a hand and conducted an investigation of its own, unearthing new evidence which in reality led to the second investigation by the federal body.

The final decision of the seate marks the end of a fight made by Lorimer to retain his seat which extended over three years. It brings the end of a national scandal into which were drawn various interests. In a way the vote of the senate ignores the acquittal of Lee O'Neill Browne, alleged to have been the manipulator of the legislative "jackpot," and finds the facts as heretofore alleged to be true.

Senator Lorimer made his last stand before the settlement of his fate. More dramatic and eloquent than on any of the proceeding days, he brought in every resource of oratory and appeal. Like a trapped lion in the pit of an arena of old, he stood in the center of the senate floor, short, stout, shaking his long, sandy hair, his double breasted blue coat closely buttoned over his hot and panting figure alternating hurling defiance to his enemies and pleading beseechingly for vindication like a Roman.

The immense audience sat hushed and stolid. The senators, the judges of his fate, were like so many graven images as they drank in the impassioned plea. Even when he called this one or that by name, which harsh tone or quavering voice, no response was evoked.

$1,900,000 TO ELECT T. R.

Cortelyou Says This Was Amount of 1904 Campaign Contributions.

A total of $1,900,000 was raised by the Republican national committee in 1904 for Roosevelt's presidential campaign.

George B. Cortelyou, then chairman of that committee, testified before the senate campaign contributions committee to this fact.

LANSING—Michigan State Superintendent of Public Instruction L. L. Wright is preparing for the annual distribution of primary school money July 15. At the present time the primary school fund contains $5,482,760.11. There are 739,545 children of school age eligible to participate in the apportionment. According to the amount of money in the fund at the present time, the rate per capita will be $7.41.

KALAMAZOO MEET OPENS

Grand Circuit Races Expected to Furnish Thrills.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 16.—It is expected that the Grand Circuit trotting meeting, which opened here Monday, will prove one of the banner meetings of the season. The program as announced includes all of the horses that were entered at Grand Rapids last week, and in addition a number that have yet to make their start. The track is in excellent condition.

The race card has attraction for each of the five days' racing as follows: On Monday the 2:07 and 2:14 paces, early closers, had rare fields and the 2:12 and 2:16 trots filled nicely.

The 2:08 trot with pupular field was a feature for the Tuesday card, and on Wednesday the $10,000 paper mills purse will bring together all of the stars; the 2:10 pace for $5,000 is set for Thursday. Both of the free-for-alls are saved for Friday, the last day.

ADDISON HAS $10,000 FIRE

Bowen Building Containing Five Stores, Is Destroyed.

Addison, Mich., July 16.—This town was visited by a disastrous fire, the Bowen building, containing five stores, being destroyed, entailing a total loss estimated at $10,000. The fire is supposed to have originated from spontaneous combustion among some waste material in a vacant room on the second floor. As the village is without fire fighting equipment, the flames practically burned themselves out, the bucket brigade being unable to check them.

The places burned out are: Widdifield's drug store, L. A. Boley's barbershop, F. Nichol's jewelry store, Mrs. A. H. Ayvers' millinery store, Crofoot & Emmons' hardware store, and the Bell telephone exchange. The loss of stocks is placed at $4,000 and on the building $6,000; partly covered by insurance.

KILLS SISTER IN PLAY

Coldwater Boy of Five Finds Rifle and Shooting Results.

Coldwater, Mich., July 13. — James Hoyt, the five-year-old son of William Hoyt, while playing with his two sisters and another little girl at the home of his grandfather, James Ogden, in Kinderhook township, found a small rifle in the woodshed. He first pointed the gun at the neighbor girl, who ran screaming away.

Then pointing the gun at his little sister Marian, aged seven, he pulled the trigger and sent a 22-caliber bullet crashing through her brain, killing her instantly. The terrible affair has driven the young mother almost insane.

SHIP SINKS IN LAKE

G. J. Grammer Founders After Collision with Northern Queen.

Port Huron, Mich., July 16. — The freighter G. J. Grammer, owned by Frank Selver of Cleveland, was sunk in a collision with the freighter Northern Queen just north of Port Huron.

The boat sank in twenty-six feet of water. The crew were taken off in small boats. The Grammer was a wooden boat, 418 feet long, built in 1902. The Northern Queen is also a wooden boat.

President's Son In Michigan.

Menominee, Mich., July 16.—Robert H. Taft, son of President Taft, who was here Sunday, is enjoying a pleasure trip through Michigan and Wisconsin.

NILES—Frederick Rowe, who was a painter, aged twenty-three, was electrocuted at the city hall while he was putting in a light of glass. He came in contact with a high-tension power wire and dropped to the floor, dying in a few minutes. This is the second electrocution in Niles this week.

SOUTH HAVEN — Albert Nealy, who is subject to epileptic fits, was taken with convulsions and sank in ten feet of water at the Boyne bathing beach. He was under water nearly two minutes before brought to the surface. Life-savers resuscitated him when apparently dead after two hours of work. He will recover.

"This where I get off," observed the awkward rider, when his horse proceeded to do some fancy bucking.

In these days of high cost of living a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a valuable and welcome remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., had kidney and bladder trouble, was confined to his bed, unable to turn without help. "I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and can truly say I was relieved at once." His example is worth following. For sale by all druggists,

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me, "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs colds or any bronchial affection its unequaled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work— give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective, At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back, I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Council chambers, village of Tecumseh.

Special meeting held July 9, 1912.

President Smith in the chair.

Present: Trustees Elliott, Service, Fisher, Gillespie and Daisher.

A committee from the Commerce Club was also present.

Mr. Fitzsimmons then made the following statement and request:

TO THE HONORABLE, THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH.

In behalf of the Commerce Club of this Village I beg to secure from you, permission to install on Chicago and Evans streets, in the business section of the town, an adequate park-post lighting system.

The funds for the payment of this system have been subscribed very largely by the business interests on the streets to be illuminated, and by other public spirited citizens thruout the community. It is a significant fact that the names on the subscription lists represent seventy-five (75) per cent of the total tax roll of the village.

It is proposed to install this system in a thoroly first class manner and to extend it one block each way, on both sides of the street, on Chicago street, from its intersection with Evans street; and on the west side of Evans street, one block each way from its intersection with Chicago street; erecting in all some thirty-two park-posts of cast iron of proper proportions and weights.

These posts will be equipped with five lights each, it being the intention of the Committee in charge to equip each post with four lights of not less than sixty (60) watts each, and one central light of not less than one hundred (100) watts.

These lights will all be enclosed in suitable glass globes of twelve (12) and sixteen (16) inches respectively, and will be wired on two circuits, each circuit to be controlled by an automatic time-switch.

The posts themselves, will be erected on suitable concrete foundations and connected in circuit by a reliable and permanent cable, placed underground.

If our request be granted, the Commerce Club will place this complete installation, as a gift, in the hands of the proper officials, providing the Village will maintain the system and supply it with adequate current, which maintainance and current supply it is estimated will cost approximately fifty dollars ($50.00) per month.

Nearly three thousand dollars ($3,000.00) will be expended by the Commerce Club in this desirable improvement, and we feel that it will be a benefit and ornament to our village which modern progress strongly demands.

Respectfully submitted,
P. W. A. FITZSIMMONS.

The president referred the request to the Lighting Committee.

The lighting committee reported favorably.

Moved and supported that the report of the Lighting Committee be accepten and adopted.

Ayes: Service, Elliott, Fisher, Gillespie, Daisher. Nays: None. Motion carried.

The president referred the details of park-post lighting system to the Lighting Committee.

On motion council then adjourned.

HERBERT S. TEMPLE,
Village Clerk.

Tall Tales From the Tall Timbers of Texas

BY SAM JAY

Alvin, Texas,
June 28, 1912.

Dear Editor:—

As we've started to talk of things edible and delectable let's continue the feast. These prairies around Alvin which do not produce oranges every season and which was originally a cattle country of low altitude, grow the earliest and finest strawberries of any section, hence the monaker: "strawberry town."

Alvin is celebrated and widely known for its strawberries, automobiles and silk socks, there being a total of seventy-eight autos in this town of two thousand hustlers.

Statistics of a private nature—wearing apparel—are not to be obtained or quoted but the berry shipments amounted to ninety carloads with a value of $150,000

Mixed vegetables about 60 cars saying nothing about seperate shipments. During a recent trip to Matamoras, Mexico, where bull fights are to be seen, I had a good opportunity to observe agricultural conditions in the Brownsville district on the lower Rio Grande. Immense crops of celery, cabbage, cauliflower and onions were being harvested and some phenominal results are obtained from small areas, as in the case of a celery grower who showed two acres of Golden Self Blanching which netted a clear profit of nine hundred dollars per acre. This can be done by employing cheap Mexican labor and shipping to Northern markets in the Spring when celery is scare. Similar results can be had from other crops intelligently handled and the land planted to cotton or some other Summer crop.

During a shipping season of one hundred days more than eighteen hundred carloads of truck were sent out of that district and that's going some. One of the foremost men, in fact, the leading spirit of South Texas today is Col. Alba Heywood—he's a Colonel now—who has entertained you and I and all the rest of the old-timers with his grotesque facial contortions and inimitable mimicry.

Another eye-opener on agricultural progress awaits us in Wharton Co. sixty miles southwest of Houston on the S. P. Ry., where the rich bottom lands of the Colorado River are making farmers wealthy so fast that it seems like a fairy tale. It is called the "potato country" and was, originally, a hardwood timber bottom which groaned under its load of fertility and shrieked for intelligent men to handle it. Total shipments of spuds from Wharton Co. amounted to 750 cars.

GOLD MEDAL ORATORIAL CONTEST ADDISON, JULY 16

Under the Auspices of County W. C. T. U

The Second or Gold Medal Oratorical Contest of the County under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was held Tuesday evening in the Baptist church, at Addison. There was a fine attendance and much interest was shown. Each one of the six contestants displayed much study and talent in their work.

Dr. Hartzog and son Justin, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. John Kane of Addison, were Judges for the occasion. Miss Margaret Beal of Rollin was the lucky winner of the Gold Medal. She was the youngest of the contestants, a bright sparkling girl and won high praise by her charming manner. Each of the others were presented with a gift, as a testimonial to their good work. The whole evening was a very pleasant one to every one present.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * * ." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Mrs. Murken.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes Mrs. G. M. Murken, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

GRAND RAPIDS—Carl Burgstahler, who was the manager of the Economic Shoe company branch store in Creston, a suburb of Grand Rapids, has disappeared. He closed his store facing failure and fled to avoid creditors. He was treasurer of the Creston Citizens' association. An audit revealed that his accounts with the association are correct. Creditors have assumed control of his store.

LANSING—According to the views of Dr. Dixon, secretary of the state board of health, Michigan may be forced to establish a leper colony in the near future. There are now four known cases in the state and several others under suspicion. The doctor says a little investigation would probably reveal many more cases.

[illegible] The bolt passed through the window, hitting him on the left side of the face. No other member of the family was injured.

SAULT STE. MARIE—The first drowning reported in the history of the Canadian canal occurred when ten-year-old John Morrison walked off the walls into the lock. The lad was going fishing in the rapids, and with several companions started to cross the gates just after they were closed. In some unaccountable manner he walked off the walls, and his companions were too terrified to raise the alarm until too late.

NILES—With a revolver bullet lodged in his left lung, Willis Charters, aged thirteen, whose home is at South Bend, Ind., is likely to die. It was another case of "didn't know it was loaded" and of the careless handling of firearms by a boy of seven, who was playing with a 22-caliber rifle when it was discharged. The accident occurred at Barren Lake, a summer resort near Niles, where the boy was visiting.

JACKSON—Earnest John, who was charged with larceny of $192.92 from a shoe shining parlor in the Sun building, pleaded guilty in circuit court and was sentenced for two to five years at hard labor in the reformatory at Ionia. The court recommended three years. William Higgins and James Boughton, charged with carrying concealed weapons, pleaded guilty and will be sentenced. Mike Moran, charged with being a drunkard and tippler, third offense, also pleaded guilty.

GRAND RAPIDS—Miss Elizabeth Morse, the daughter of the postmaster at Lyons, Mich., who was shot twice by Louis H. Schuerman of Carrollton, Ky., was discharged from the hospital here. She was shot while riding in a taxicab with Schuerman and after she had refused to marry him. Schuerman, who shot himself twice, will recover. A warrant for attempted murder will be issued against him this week before he leaves the hospital. He is married.

TROUBLE IS BREWING

Two Revolutions Reported to Be Forming in Venezuela.

General Hernandez and Cipriano Castro Each Plotting on His Own Account.

New York, July 22.—Venezuelans in this city are much stirred up over messages received here that General Jose Manuel Hernandez, "El Mocho," is now earnestly at work engineering plans to lead an army of revolutionists against the government forces of Venezuela in the hope of overthrowing President Gomez and landing the job for himself.

Just when the revolution will start is not known, but "El Mocho's" designs may be hurried by the report that Cipriano Castro, who abdicated in favor of President Gomez, is also getting things in shape to start another revolution with the idea in view of becoming president again.

General Hernandez is said to be in Porto Rico at present and report also has it that Castro, who disappeared some time ago, also is there, from which point he is getting into communication with his friends and old time followers.

According to a report General A. Pimentel, formerly minister of finance under President Gomez, is now on his way to New York to join the Venezuela junta which, it is said, is working to upset the present government and place Gomez among the "has beens."

General Woodford Is Better.

London, July 22.—The condition of General Stewart L. Woodford of New York, who has been ill for about two weeks, is more hopeful. He is steadily progressing toward convalescence.

MYSTERY IN WOMAN'S DEATH

Mrs. Weinhart Found at Foot of High Embankment in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 22.—Mystery surrounds the death of Mrs. Mary Weinhart, fifty years old, whose body was found in the wholesale district of the city at the foot of a railway embankment, where it evidently had been dragged or had rolled fifteen feet from the street.

Black and blue marks on her throat, drops of blood on her arms and the fact that Herman Oldberg, a switchman, heard screams in the night led the police to make an investigation. Rings and watches which the woman had with her had not been touched.

ONE BATTLESHIP PROBABLE

Naval Bill Not Likely to Recommend Building of Two.

Washington, July 22.—Present indications are that the naval bill as it will go to the president for approval will authorize the construction of one battleship. The conferees on this measure have disagreed over the senate amendment providing for the construction of two battleships

This disagreement will be reported to the house.

Widow Weds; Loses Pension.

Mount Vernon, Ill., July 22.—David Houchen twenty-nine, and Charity Stage, seventy-six, were married here July 4. The bride is the widow of a soldier. Her pension failed this quarter. Learning that when a widow remarries her pension ceases she entered suit to have her marriage with the youthful husband annuled.

Falls from Boat; Drowns.

Kendallville, Ind., July 22. — While fishing in Sylvan lake, Rome City, Neval Teal, twenty-six, suffered an epileptic fit, fell from the boat and was drowned. The body was found three hours later in twenty feet of water.

PORTUGAL IN REVOLUTION

Confirmed by Spanish Minister of Interior at Madrid.

MONARCHIST MOVEMENT BIG

First News Comes from Correspondent of Orense Paper by Way of Frontier—Jails Packed with Prisoners.

Madrid, July 22.—Senor Barroso, the minister of the interior, has confirmed the statement published in an Orense newspaper the Universe, that a revolution has broken out at Lisbon and Oporto, Portugal.

The correspondent of the Universe sent a dispatch to this city saying that a revolution has broken out. This news was received at Orense by way of Verin, a town in Spain near the Portuguee border.

Lisbon, Portugal, July 20.—The monarchist movement undoubtedly is more important than was first believed and an extensive conspiracy which had been planned in a number of towns failed only because of personal rivalries.

Troops are making hundreds of arrests. Jails are packed and courts-martial are dealing with the conspirators as expeditiously as possible, pronouncing sentences of deportation, varying from ten to twenty-six years. Those condemned will be sent to Tior, Malay archipelago Angola, Portuguese West Africa, or Portuguese Guinea.

WOMAN ENDS HER LIFE

Gray's Lake Stirred by Suicide of Mrs. Egsjarein.

Gray's Lake, Ill., July 22.—While an auditing committee was preparing to examine her books as treasurer of the Mystic Workers of the World and the Royal Neighbors on the theory that there was a shortage approximating $200, Mrs. Myrtle Egsjarein, a member of a prominent and wealthy family in this suburb, took poison, from the effects of which she died.

In her dying moments the woman is said to have exclaimed: "The money was stolen. I did not use it myself."

Mrs. Egsjarein's act is believed to have been prompted by the fact that her husband, an engineer in a manufacturing plant, had heard gossip about the way she was handling the Mystic Workers' funds and had asked her about it. This conversation took place early in the evening, and at 8 o'clock Mrs. Egsjarein took the poison.

TO HIRE CROP EXPERT

Business Men to Join Farmers in Increasing Farms' Output.

Pontiac, Ill., July 22.—Scott county is to have a "crop doctor."

Realizing that hundreds of dollars are lost annually through the lack of close expert supervision of agricultural operations, business men and farmers of Scott county plan to join in raising an adequate fund for "county work" and employing an expert in the hope of making the county the most productive in Illinois.

MOORE LECTURES THE RAINMAKERS

Weather Bureau Chief Pours Scorn on Their Efforts.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH., ATTEMPT

Authority in Washington Says in All Seriousness that Rain Cannot Be Artificially Produced by Explosions.

Washington, July 22. — Professor Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau, is disgusted with the efforts that are being put forth in different parts of the country to "make rain."

Professor Moore says it simply "can't be done, and that's all there is to it." He contends that thousands of dollars are being wasted in a nonsensical way and adds that the ideas expressed by some of these "rainmakers" are almost as crude as those handed out by old Plutarch himself, who opined that the vapor rising from the hot breath, blood and sweat in battle was condensed into rain by the concussion of the weapons and the hoarse cries of the victors.

But Professor Moore is mighty serious on this subject, and he intends if possible to convince the folks in Wichita Falls, Tex., Battle Creek, Mich., and a few other dry sun-kissed spots that they might better keep their money in their pockets than invest it in dynamite for rain making.

The professor issued a statement which is intended chiefly for Battle Creek, where plans have been made to bombard the skies on July 24. Here is Professor Moore's statement:

"Numerous reports have come to the weather bureau indicating that an epidemic of rain making has broken out in various parts of the country, originating in some experiments of this character made by C. W. Post, near Post City, Tex., last summer. The method adopted was the familiar one of setting off of powerful explosives until, as is alleged, the jarring of the atmosphere leads to the condensation and precipitation of moisture.

"It hardly seems necessary for the weather bureau at this late date to enter into elaborate arguments in order to convince the public of the utter futility of this and every other method so far proposed for artifically producing rain.

"That rain followed many of the battles of our Civil War was due, not to the effect of the discharge of firearms, but to the fact that in the regions where the battles occurred rain falls on an average of one day out of three and that commanders are more inclined to move armies and begin engagements in fair weather."

SALOONS NOW SELL CANDY

Chicago Plan Permits Inebriates to Take Home Peace Offering.

Chicago, July 22.—The introduction of daintily tied boxes of candy by saloon keepers, into their stock, is considered by many Chicago keepers as "the greatest boon to the business which has come in many years." Their argument is that great numbers of men who have been compelled to leave the bars early in the evening to get to their homes in order to preserve the peace in the family, now remain much longer and go away with at least one box of bonbons in their pocket for their wives or children.

The idea was introduced recently in the downtown district, but now has spread to every quarter of the city. A manager of a saloon near the north side limits said that since the candy had been sold, the grumbling of customers because they thought it a duty to get home early, had almost ceased.

DRIVER SHAPI[illegible] GRILLED A[illegible]

Makes Startling Disc[illegible] New York District [illegible]

PLOT WAS PERFEC[illegible]

Everything in Readiness to Insure Safety of Slayers When Informer Rosenthal Was "Put Away."

New York, July 22.—From Shapiro, driver of the gray car which "Bald" Jack Rose used to round up the gun men and lookouts for the Rosenthal killing, the district attorney has obtained a story more startling than anything the driver had revealed.

Nor four or five or six men only were in the plot to murder the informer—at least sixteen, says Shapiro—had knowledge of the crime and were on station in front of the Metropole, ready to black-jack or kill if necessary, but active particularly in obstructing the chase and in blocking off pursuers.

"There were four in the car beside myself," said Shapiro, "when I stopped, facing eastward near the Cohan theater. There was Itzky, Sam Schepps, a man woh has been called Vallon—Harry Vallon somebody said—and a fourth man that I didn't know. It was not later than 1:35 a. m. when we got opposite the Metropole.

"One of my passengers (the name is withheld by request) stayed by the car apparently to see that I didn't skip. While I was using my eyes I noticed a bunch of men were walking up and down near the Metropole. It struck me that some of the faces in that bunch were familiar, but I couldn't place them.

"Well, my passengers, as easy as you please, poked along over to the Metropole and looked around. From somewhere nearby, either from one of the passengers or from the other crowd, came something similar to a low whistle.

"The bunch that had been holding down the sidewalks before my crowd got there seemed to be in and out of the Metropole. After the whistle all of them seemed to know that something was doing. Several spoke to my passengers. It looked very much as if orders or suggestions were being whispered as the Jack Rose crowd strolled up and down and smoked cigarettes.

"After fifteen minutes of rubbering and wondering what was going to be pulled off I dropped into a doze. I don't know how long I was asleep, not very long, probably but five or ten minutes, anyway. And then the bunch in the street, my crowd and everybody else stopped prowling around and faced toward the Metropole. Out came a guy and the next was the shooting."

The job of putting Hermann Rosenthal away was so systematically and perfectly planned that even Forty-Third street was sentinelled in advance of the shooting so that there would be no danger of Rosenthal slipping away, and little danger that the killers would be caught after the killing.

MIKADO OF JAPAN NEAR TO DEATH

Beloved Ruler Has Been Unconscious since Friday.

CONDITION NOW VERY GRAVE

In [illegible] Contrast to Old Practice of [illegible] News of Emperor's Con[illegible] from Public, Bulletins Are Being Posted.

Tokio, July 22. — The condition of the Mikado has become worse. The physicians who are in attendance have been in conference. They found that all his symptoms had been aggravated and that the heart action had become weaker.

The emperor has been suffering from diabetic nephritis since 1904. A heat wave a week ago complicated with some intestinal trouble precipitated a bad attack and he has been unconscious since Friday. The indications as to his recovery are decidedly unfavorable.

A late bulletin stated that his temperature was slightly lower, being 29.4 Centigrade, or something less than 103 Fahrenheit. His mind was a little clearer, but otherwise there was no change in his condition.

The issuance of bulletins in regard to the condition of the Mikado is a new departure in Japan, and is due altogether to the influence of Premier Saion Ji with the court. It is believed that the present prime minister, who is a progressive, will disregard the old custom of concealing the truth in regard to the condition of the emperor and will continue to keep the public informed as to his condition.

During the imperial cherry party in April many persons remarked on the changed look of the Mikado. He presided at the commencement of the imperial unversity on July 10.

The latest official bulletin said his condition was graver. His pulse was irregular and weaker and the arms had become convulsive.

The emperor is becoming steadily worse and his death seems near. Indeed many assume that it has already occurred, as such an announcement is often delayed for some time.

Another late bulletin stated that the delirium continued, that there was a cramp of the upper limbs and that he was only able to take a very small quanity of liquid food.

The emperor is suffering from great exhaustion and a violent fever. The empress has not left his bedside since Friday afternoon. The imperial family is very anxious. Prayers for his recovery were offered at special services held in the Buddhist temples and there was a special intercession at the Russian cathedral.

Emperor Mutsuhito was born Nov. 3, 1852, at Kyoto and has reigned since 1867, when he succeeded his father, Kamei. He married in 1869 a daughter of Prince Ichijo.

The heir apparent to the throne is Prince Yoshihito, a son of the emperor, who was born Aug. 31, 1879.

LORIMER IN AUTO CRASH

Pittsburg, July 22. — William Lorimer, the Illinois senator who was recently ousted by his colleagues, was injured in an automobile accident near Claysville, Pa. Lorimer had chosen to go home in his machine rather than by train, and had gotten as far as Claysville on his way to Chicago when the accident happened.

The machine was so badly damaged that it could not be repaired. Lorimer was not seriously hurt and proceeded on his journey by rail, leaving the automobile at Claysville.

REBELS MASSACRE 60

Train Attacked, Sacked and Burned in Mexico.

Slaughter of Wounded Continues Until Priest Appeals to Leader—Zapatistas Are 500 Strong.

Mexico City, July 22.—More than sixty persons were killed and many wounded in an attack by Zapatistas on a passenger train between this city and Cuernavaca, Morelos.

The Zapatistas, who are said to have numbered 500, placed a mine under the railroad track which exploded as the locomotive passed over it. The overturned engine hardly had settled when the Zapatistas sprang up from all sides and poured a murderous fire into the train.

Thirty passengers in the second-class coaches were killed and many wounded. In the first-class coach no one was killed. The conductor, an American named Aller, is not expected to live. After the train had been swept by their fire and few of the passengers or crew not killed or wounded the Zapatistas rushed on their stricken victims and began killing the wounded.

A priest, unhurt, pleaded with De Loa, the rebel leader, to stop the slaughter and it ceased.

After sacking the express and baggage cars the rebels poured oil on the cars and putting the bodies of the dead on them set fire to the train. When relief train arrived there was nothing but debris and a few persons, most of whom were hurt, to tell the tale.

EARLE, AS LAWYER, LOSES

"Affinity" Vainly Attempts to Save Employe Accused by Girl.

Middletown, N. Y., July 22.—Ferdinand Pinney Earle of affinity fame assayed the role of attorney for an employe, Joshua Valentine, charged with attacking Miss Laura Cowin, a comely young woman of Middletown, but he lost his case. Valentine was held for the grand jury.

Neighbors of the girl rescued her from the clutches of the man, and they were able to give sufficiently vadily evdence against Valentine to warrant his being held despite the ecorts of Earle.

Uses Match to Find Leak.

Elwood, Ind., July 22.—John Snodgrass, a wealthy farmer, used a match to hunt a leak in the lighting apparatus on his recently purchased automobile. He found the leak, but something happened, and before the flames could be extinguished the machine was practically ruined. The owner was badly burned about the face and arms, and is under the care of a physician.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs colds or any bronchial affection its unequaled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. DESERVED TO MAKE A SALE

Book Agent at Least Showed That He Had the Valuable Quality of Perseverance.

The book agent who walked into Peter Steffen's office looked like an ingenious fellow, but Steffens, glancing up in a hurry, spied his trade in a minute and muttered to himself:

"Confound that boy. Now, how did that fellow get in?"

Aloud, he said: "You're wasting your time here. I won't buy anything today."

"If you'll only let me show you—"

"No," shouted Steffens.

"It won't take a minute—"

"But, really, my dear sir, this is something out of the common—"

"No use. I can't read," said Steffens.

"But your family, sir, would you deprive them—"

"I would," said Steffens, "if I had any. I'm an orphan."

"Well, you might want something to throw at the cat," suggested the book agent.

"Do you think," demanded Steffens, "that I would demean my cat by throwing your miserable publication at her?"

The book agent was only dashed a second.

"What about me," he asked, insinuatingly. "Don't you want something to throw at me the next time I come?"

MANNERS WAIT ON LEISURE

Modern Day Discourtesy Seemingly the Result of the Universal "Rush."

The young lady who described a burglar the other day as a "perfect gentleman," wasn't very far wrong. For burglars are among the few persons who can afford the time to be perfect gentlemen.

Gentle manners have had their highest development in periods when time was of smallest importance. The elaborate code of the French courts was the substance of ease. It was bred with the care which only leisure can provide. The gallantry of the ante-bellum South was as famous as the ante-bellum hospitality. The one cost nothing of time as the other cost nothing in effort. While people have been struggling and bumping and shoving in "L" and subway trains in New York, the people who rode in the crosstown horse cars—relics of an easier decade—have been practicing a politeness which, by contrast with the boorishness so painfully evident elsewhere, was touching and exquisite. The patrons of the horse cars were those with time to spare.

The rush of modern American life is not an excuse for bad manners. But it is an explanation. We cannot preach economy of time without forcing economies in other things—and among these are thoughtfulness and consideration.

Mistake Cost $20,000,000.

The temporary loss of an important paper once cost this country nearly $20,000,000. This was in connection with the famous Alabama incident in the American Civil war.

The vessel was quietly constructed at Birkenhead, and launched on May 15, 1862. Then, and not till then, suspicion of its true character was aroused, and a case was prepared for the law officers' opinion. But the messenger entrusted with the papers put them in the wrong letter box. Two days passed before the mistake was learned, and when orders were telegraphed to stop the vessel the Alabama had steamed from the Mersey on a voyage of destruction for which we had to pay something more than the price of a telegram.—London Chronicle.

Much Like Modern Audience.

The tricks of theater audiences have been remarkably similar in all ages. Alciphron, who wrote of the later Attic comedy, shows that the claque was known then, and also "young men of the town" who took a malicious delight in hissing a play off the stage. Theophrastus, who died in 288 B. C., sketches among his "characters" the man of superior taste, whose pride it was to hiss when everybody else applauded, and to clap when the rest were silent; and the annoying person who would hum or whistle an accompaniment to every tune that pleased him. And Aristotle himself refers to spectators who brought out provisions during the dull parts of the performance.—London Chronicle.

Fill Mines With Sand.

The owners of many mines in Europe and Australia fill the abandoned workings with sand, so that the mines may become once more a part of the solid crust of the earth. Old, worked-out mines are often a menace to buildings or communities above them; and protection by timbering, which is the American method, affords security for no great length of time. Sand filling has been practiced in the mines of western Australia for the last fourteen years. W. H. Storms, writing in the Engineering and Mining Journal, says that the cost in Australia is about 20 cents for each ton of ore extracted.

A Legal Mind.

"No use whispering soft nothings to that girl—she's a law student."

"She's very happy. How does being a law student affect her case?"

"Well, she's quick to detect the incompetent, the irrelevant, and the immaterial."

Artist Regains Drawings.

M. Bucas, the French artist whose paintings when bought by M. Quittner and signed by him, won their new owner honors at the salons where the original painter failed even to get them accepted, has succeeded in regaining 29 of the pictures.

Instinct Was There.

Mr. Isaacs had had a busy day, what with lending money at 90 per cent. and discounting bills at 50, and he was annoyed on returning home to find the apple of his eye howling the house down. That child would not be quiet, not even when his fond papa took him in his arms. Then the parent tried walking up and down the room, singing songs, but after having sung every song from "Baa, Baa, Black Sheep" to "Hey Diddle Diddle," he thought of giving it up. However, he tried one more song. It was "Sing a Song of Sixpence." Hardly had he started when there was an instant hush and a tiny voice cried out: "Make it two shillings, fader; I'll be athleep in thirty seconds!"—London Answers.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Clinton through the L. S. and M. S. Railroad Co. are having electric alarm bells installed on each street crossing that will give warning on the approach of the trains A wise move on the part of the Ry. Co. as it will be by carelessness or negligence if any one is injured on the street crossings.

Anything to call out the fire department. A house wife in Battle Creek left her beefsteak cooking on the stove, while she went upstairs on an errand and when it began to burn, her over zealous neighbors called out the department. There not being enough left for the crowd, they returned in disgust.

At the last Annual Meeting of School District No. 7 the building of a new School House was throughly agitated, so it may not be a miss to note what other towns no larger than Tecumseh are doing.

The School board of Hudson has awarded contracts for the new building, to three different firms at a total of $58,748.07 as follows Richmond Construction Co. of Kalamazoo, General Construction $49,215 Shields, and Ludley of Lansing, heating and ventilating $6,857.35 Nat Dunbar Hudson for plumbing $2,681.72. There will of course be incidental expences that cannot be reported at this time.

Work on the Cemetary Chapel of Clinton will begin next month it will be 24x35 feet, with a receiving vault in the basement, the building will cost $2,000 which has been raised by the Clinton Culture Club by subscription. A former Clinton boy, Wirt Rowland of Detroit has drawn the plans for the building, which will be built of field stone donated by the farmers.

Morenci is rejoicing over the prospect of a dream fulfilled, as by the action of the Council at a late meeting, in accepting bids for the building of a Water System. A reality may be evolved from the long years of waiting for this much needed addition to the town. the present plans are for the business part of the town only, to be extended where thought necessary, There will be no water for commercial use it to be used only in case of emergency. The work will be completed in September.

D. T. & I.

The Detroit Toledo & Ironton rail road is planning some big improvements. Some fifteen miles of new track near Delray, and new ballasting for forty miles north of Lima being among them The road is in the hands of George P. Johnson receiver, and the petition for these improvements has been approved by the United States district court. Two new bridges will be constructed at Delray, and new stations at Adrian and Washington Court House.

"SPOONY"

Rev. Dr. Carl Exland of Denver, Colo., is agitating a "spooning parlor" in connection with his church where the young people may find cozy nooks where in to discuss love making, rose covered cottages, honeymoons, etc. Under the supervision of well trained chaperons, declaring that it was a hundred thousand times better for a young man to select a wife in a "spooning parlor" then in a dance hall. The Reverend brother hopes by this means to also add new members to his congregations.

QUEER CASE OF SMUGGLING

Stolen Partridge Eggs Brought Into Vienna by Means of a Dummy Baby.

A singular case of smuggling by means of a dummy baby was brought to light by the city customs officials at the Northwestern station recently.

Partridge eggs have for long past been extensively stolen from preserved estates in Hungary, smuggled into Vienna and sold to poultry dealers, who hatched the eggs in incubators, brought up the birds by hand, and sold them below the prices asked by more honest dealers. A special lookout for smugglers has resulted in the arrest of two peasant women.

Arriving in Vienna in the national Slavonian costume, each of them carried a baby, tied according to the invariable national custom, to a cushion, and so closely "packed" that only the face was visible. The women were noticed to be a little agitated as they passed the customs, and they were followed home. It was then discovered that while one baby was a living child, the other was a dummy. It consisted of a wax head, partly hidden by a shawl and a cap, while the cushion was filled with more than 600 partridge eggs.—Vienna Correspondence London Daily Mail.

BATTLE CREEK—The local police officers were called upon to head off Ruby Smith, a thirteen-year-old girl, who had donned a boy's suit at her home in Dowling, Barry county, and started out to see the world in that garb. She was overtaken at Urbandale and sent back home.

LANSING—Three Michigan women have taken examintion for an embalmer's license. It is the first time in the history of the embalmers' board that women have taken the examination, although there are several holdovers from the old system of registration.

IONIA—The marriage ceremony of Miss Louise Longe of Ionia, and Charles H. Koerber of Detroit, was solemnized here at the Church of St. Peter and Paul by Father McCarthy. The couple have gone to Ohio for a trip, after which they will go to Detroit to reside.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS

The Royal Neighbors held a picnic at the Adams Park on Saturday afternoon There was a fine turnout and everyone enjoyed the occasion. A choice picnic supper was served on the new tables and the new benches were much appreciated.

REBEKAHS AT BRITTON

The Tecumseh Rebekahs numbering about 30 went to Britton Thursday where they did the initiatory work on a class of 21 candidates. Mrs Mrs. Flora Hart President of the Rebekah Assembly of Michigan organized a lodge there in the afternoon and these were the first candidates to enter.

A most enjoyable time was the verdict of all present.

BASEBALL

The opening ball game, that was billed to take place on Tecumseh grounds Thursday afternoon, between Milan and Tecumseh, has been called off. Word has been received from Milan that it will not be possible for their team to play here that day. However, a game has been arranged for here between Clinton and Tecumseh Saturday afternoon of this week and those who have purchased tickets for the Thursday game can attend the Saturday game on the same ticket, or any subsequent game There is always "something doing" when Clinton and Tecumseh, the old time rivals, cross bats Turn out and help the boys in their opening game.

FRED MERKLE

A Wonder in Base Ball

Fred Merkle who will be remembered as a former first baseman in the Tecumseh team a few years ago is now considered one of the very best first base men in the country.

President Lynch of the National League says, "I consider Merkle one the most wonderful men that ever broke into baseball. He is a man in every sense of the word. His heart is as big as that of any ox. You can not find many better first basemen today than Merkle."

Merkle is not a flashy player but is wonderfully sure and an expert in his line

GRANGE PICNIC

Everybody bring a cherry pie to the picnic next Saturday.

Albert Howard will be there,

And you had better provide plenty of everything because Will Waldron is coming. and if Albert Carmus brings his wife and seventeen children, it will take a lot of victuals to fill 'em all.

Don't forget the secretary.

AMUSEMENTS

Frank E. Percival vocal instructor of the Toledo Musical College will come to Tecumseh for purpose of giving the opera Pinafore with Tecumseh talent. Mr. Percival who has had years of experience in producing opera, with local talent, and who brings with him scenery and costumes invites the musical talent of this city to join with him in producing one of the prettiest operas ever written "Pinafore" is more popular than ever.

Tall Tales From the Tall Timbers of Texas

BY SAM JAY

Alvin, Texas,
June 28, 1912.

Dear Editor:—

CONTINUE FROM FRIDAY'S ISSUE

The double cropping plan of farming as followed by the potatoes planters is profitable to the pioneer who secures virgin land, gets all he can out of it for a period of five years perhaps and then retires with a bundle of kale but it is ruinous to the steady, permanent farmer and I've heard one old Missourian predict that in five more years the potatoes will be no larger than marbles.

An anamolegenous condition of business exists in this county and in fact, throughout the entire State.

During a short sojourn last Winter in one potatoe town, I found it necessary to purchase some supplies and asked for potatoes at both small stores which the place supported. "None in," said Old Scatty, "but I expect some Colorado potatoes down from Houston to-morrow."

"What! Shipping Colorado potatoes into a Texas potatoe country!" I exclaimed in amazement.

"Yep," was his reply. "We find it cheaper to buy outside than to consume our own for our crop brings good prices in markets that are practically bare of fresh stock."

By this time the potatoes are all shipped farther North and the farmers have started to plow for the Fall crop before the weather becomes too hot.

Speaking of plowing, I saw a tractor gang plow which turns an acre in five minutes. We want a change of climate and diet or at least a toothsome side dish, so let us ride up the "rabbit road" (H. E, & W. T.) and the "boll weevil" (T. & B. V.) until we arrive at Cheokee Co., the tomatoe country. In the short leaf pines, high rolling, well watered but well drained healthful and invigorating; vastly different from the flat prairies of Brazoria and the morasses, lagoons and bayous of Wharton bottoms with its negros, Mexicans, "red bones" and all the conglomerate product of miscegenation. Methods of tomatoe culture vary from the potatoe as does the soil and climate but the majority of the crop is marketed through the an association with standard grades, packages, etc.

The total shipments through Jacksonville, the county seat and a hustling town of ten thousand people, amounted to 700 carloads bringing approximately over a quarter million of dollars. These tomatoes, one slice filling a good sized saucer, are some better in quality and price than those formerly raised around Raisin Valley and Adrian where some growers wouldn't gather them at canning factory prices. Cherokee Co. produces profitable crops of course but I am just making mention of the prominent industrial features of such counties that I have known. We are not trying to qualify as gastronomical freaks but "we want what we want it" and another hop, skip and jump throu the sticks or, better still, an aviation stunt over the pines, lands us in Smith and Shelby counties,

We wanted some peaches and cream and now we have it for this district is the adopted home of the Elberta peach. (I have no figures on peach shipments.)

No doubt you are tiring of these dry statistics of production but I have been trying to state actual facts and we've been traveling in dry counties. One would think that with a bountiful crop of fruit or vegetables, the householder would be able to supply his needs at a low figure. Not so. The product might be cheap at the producing end but rail road charges and selling agents commissions raises the price to the consumer.

TEACHER MUST SHINE SHOES

Wabash County Board Demands Neat Appearance of Pedagogues.

Wabash, Ind., July 22.—B. F. Hubbard a member of the Wabash county board of education, announced that during the coming year he would insist upon men employed as school teachers in exercising all possible care to aid in their personal appearance.

The board recently adopted a resolution declaring against short skirts, short sleeves and low necks, and girls employed as instructors were told that such styles would be forbidden in the schoolrooms. Now comes the edict that the men must not wear soiled linen, must keep their shoes polished and that their trousers must be kept creased.

IOWA ELECTS DELEGATES

Third Party Men Hold Conventions In Nearly All of the Counties.

Des Moines, Ia., July 22.—Reports received indicate that nearly all of the ninety-nine counties in the state held mass conventions of third party adherents.

In most of the conventions election of delegates to the state convention here Wednesday was the sole work done. Van Buren and Floyd counties reported no convention.

UNIVERSAL

Portland Cement

is the highest grade sold. Our masons recommend it, as it sets uniform and is all alike.

The Mausoleum Contractors claim their work is the highest grade of concrete and the UNIVERSAL is the only absolutely Uniform Cement sold and they use it exclusively.

The Farmers are using it extensively, seeing its advantages, particularly so when using it on the same job with other brands.

The Price is the same as Inferior Brands.

Place your order, as the price is very likely to advance soon.

We also carry a full line of Brick, Tile, Lime, Salt, Plaster, etc.

UNDER THE OAKS

Just 50 years ago a new party was born under the Oaks in Jackson and Saturday July 20 witnessed another birth of a new political party. When the progressives severed all ties that bound them to the republican party born here 50 years ago.

Senator Dixon was the dominant figuge of the convention and is Col. Roosavelt's campaign manager, and following his speech all opposition to a full progressive ticket was swept away.

The delegates endorsed Senator L. Whitney Watkins for governor, Theodore M. Joslin for U. S. Senator and Nathan P. Hull for Congressman at large, Neversince the historic meeting 50 years ago has such enthusiasm been shown.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache: suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remeber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time" Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

* * *

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

ANGELL AVOIDED THE TRAP

In the diplomatic service, a man must always keep his wits keen and ready for use. A case in point is supplied by James Burrill Angell, in his "Reminiscences," in this anecdote of his sojourn in Constantinople, as minister from the United States:

The spies of the sultan were everywhere. A Turk told me that the spy business was the most prosperous of all. I was assured that spies were sitting at the dinner tables of the principal hotels, to overhear the conversation of the guests. With one against whose visits I had been warned, I had an amusing interview.

He was a handsome, dignified Arab, who had been in England long enough to talk English fairly well. He introduced himself to me by saying he had been mayor of Jerusalem, and was now trying to procure from the government a concession for the construction of a system of waterworks for that city.

He regretted—so he informed me—to find that the government was so corrupt that he had no hope of securing the concessions except by bribing a whole row of officials. It refreshed him to turn from those representatives of corrupt and tyrannical government and pay his respects to the representative of a pure and honest democracy.

Supposing his object to be to draw from me some remark derogatory to the Sultan, which he could report to my disadvantage, I remarked that a monarchy presided over by a just sovereign was a very edifying spectacle, and that even in republics it must be admitted that corrupt men were sometimes found in office.

He seemed surprised, and proceeded to eulogize republican government. I continued my commendations of enlightened monarchies.

The conversation ran on in this way for half an hour, when he bade me adieu—but, as I flattered myself, without any game for his bag.—Youth's Companion.
